TOWN MEETING.

Electric Lighting Contract Voted for Ten Years.

Citizens Favor Open Sunday Ice Cream Parlors.

The final session of the annual town meeting was held Monday evening, there being an attendance of over 200 citizens, Moderator Harris called the meeting to order and announced the appointment of the following committees as per votes of the citizens at the previous meeting:

Relative to improvement of Lake street shore of Wedge Pond:
Dr. C. J. Allen,
James Hinds,
James J. Fitzgerald.

Relative to the use of a running sewer trap:
Daniel W. Pratt,
Frederick M. Ives,
George T. Davidson.

To investigate Linden Street house:
Arthur E. Whitney,
Samuel S. Symmes,
John H. Carter.

To inform Representative Barnard of the instructions of the town relative to his action on House bill No. 704 for permanent grade crossing commission:
Whitfield Tuck,
Winfield F. Prime,
John G. Hovey.

Selectman Dwinell then moved to take up Article 22, and reconsider the vote whereby the meeting refused to accept Curtis street so called, formerly a part of the Spicer estate.

Selectman Richards said that the article would not have been rejected had the citizens known the true situation. The street is already built in good condition, better in fact than many of the town's streets. The Spicer estate has been cut into house lots, one house has been built and five or six more are to be erected which will give to the town some $40,000 in taxable property. The reason for asking for the acceptance of the street was that the sewer might be built upon it and the new houses entered. This street would also be beneficial to the town inasmuch as it would afford a right of way to Wedge pond, which the town did not have at the present time. All expense of the street would be borne by the Spicer estate.

Mr. George C. Coit and Mr. D. W. Pratt favored reconsideration, the latter claiming that a serious mistake would be made if the street was not accepted. Mr. W. L. Tuck opposed reconsideration.

The vote was 75 to 1 in favor of reconsideration.

Mr. Dwinell then offered the following which was carried:

Moved, That the report of the Selectmen on laying out of Curtis street, so called, and said street as so laid out be accepted and allowed, as and for a town way.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING QUESTION.

Under Article 23, Selectman Dwinell offered the following:

Moved, That the Board of Selectmen be and hereby is authorized in the name and behalf of the town to enter into a contract in writing for a term not exceeding ten years from its date with the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston for furnishing the town with electric light, upon such terms and conditions as in the opinion of said Board will best serve and safeguard the interests of the town.

Mr. Dwinell said that the report as printed in last week's STAR in favor of a ten-year contract was approved by eight of the ten members of the committee—one member being sick and the other out of the State. After careful investigation and examination, the committee believed it was good business policy to make a contract and thereby save money for the town.

In reply to Mr. W. J. Daly, Mr. Dwinell said that he, personally, was in favor of all night lighting, but that the committee had taken no action in the matter. Mr. Dwinell then also said that a ten-year contract would entitle the town to a ten per cent. discount, new and handsome fixtures for our town and all the improvements adopted by the company from time to time. If at any time the town thought too much was being paid for the current then it would have the right of appeal to the State Gas and Electric Light Commissioners.

Mr. W. F. Prime wanted to know if a hundred year contract was made, whether or not the town would be entitled to a hundred per cent reduction.

Mr. W. L. Tuck in a long argument opposed making a contract and offered a motion that a referendum be attached to a ballot to be used at the next town meeting so that all citizens could vote on the matter.

This was ruled out of order, as the Moderator said that the question was now before the voters, and those not present had nobody but themselves to blame for not being able to vote.

Mr. Tuck then moved to make the period of contract three years instead of ten.

Mr. A. S. Hall, favored Mr. Tuck's amendment, as he thought that ten years was too long a time to tie up the town on its lighting. He had all respect for the judgment of the committee, but he believed that with the great improvements in gas and its fixtures, that it would be poor policy to bind the town to one lighting system for so long a period. It was unbusiness like. He also believed it would be extravagant and wasteful to burn the lights all night for ten years.

Mr. Dwinell said a contract could be made for a three-year term with a three per cent discount, but from a business point of view he believed it would be better to make it ten years and get a ten per cent discount. It was simply a question of saving money.

Mr. John T. Wilson thought a ten-year contract was a straightforward business proposition and he hoped the Committee would be sustained.

In reply to Mr. Daly, Mr. Dwinell said that the town Counsel did approve of making the contract.

Mr. J. H. Carter said the Committee ought to be congratulated on what they had accomplished. The town under a ten-year contract will now receive the same rate that Arlington did under a twenty-year contract. It was now a plain business proposition in which the town during the next ten years would save from $9,000 to $10,000. If the town was so disposed it could break the contract at any time by simply refusing to vote money for street lighting, but the necessity for this would not be possible.

Mr. Tuck's amendment making the time three years was voted down—Yes 28, no 66. He then moved to make it five years, and this was rejected.

The motion to make the contract ten years was then voted almost unanimously.

Mr. Dwinell offered a motion that the sense of the meeting be taken as to whether it favored all night lighting. This would cost about $1629 over the 12.30 schedule.

Mr. Daly favored one o'clock in order that the patrons of the last car might get the benefit of the lights.

Mr. J. A. Larraway opposed the all night schedule and thought that one o'clock was late enough.

Mr. F. E. Rowe then offered a motion that it was the sense of the meeting that the lights be burned until one o'clock, and it was so voted.

SUNDAY ICE CREAM.

Mr. W. L. Tuck offered the following:

Moved. That we the Citizens of Winchester in town meeting assembled request the Selectmen to grant a license for the sale of ice cream in open ice cream parlors on the Lord's Day, when lawful to do so, to all those entitled to the same.

Judge Littlefield said that the question was regulated by the statutes, and that such licenses can only be granted to innholders: then the town can't prevent the sale of ice cream.

Selectman Richards said he had no objections to the sale of ice cream on Sundays, but it must be remembered there is a state law that will punish each Selectman to the tune of $50 for allowing such sales.

Mr. A. E. Whitney did not think much of a law that allowed ice cream to be eaten standing in a drug store, while it is not permissable seated comfortably in an ice cream parlor. The well-to-do people have simply to go to their telephones on Sunday and order the cream sent to their houses, while the people in moderate circumstances are deprived of it, even if they apply at the back doors of the parlors.

Mr. Dwinell said the Selectmen took action after receiving a petition containtaining some 98 names. In order to grant a permit under the present law it was necessary to secure an innholder's license, and this could be granted only where meals were served. There was no harm, however, in voting in favor of the motion.

Mr. N. M. Nichols was glad the question had come up. Many of those ladies who signed the petition did so without knowing its purport, and they had told him that they would be careful about reading the next petition presented to them. Work goes on just the same and ice cream is delivered, and enjoyed by all but those who cannot afford to buy in quantity and over the telephone. The children and others should be afforded an opportunity to buy ice cream on Sunday, it prevents harm and does good.

Mr. George C. Coit, said that the Sunday laws are inconsistent. It would be absurd to authorize or instruct the Selectmen to do things that they cannot legally do. The proper way would be to address the motion to the Legislature.

Representative Barnard thought it would be a good thing for the town to instruct him to present to the Legislative Committee which is now engaged on this subject, the action taken by the meeting.

Mr. W. L. Tuck spoke earnestly in favor of his motion which would benefit a great number of people.

The motion was then carried unanimously.

IMPROVED SIDEWALKS.

Under Article 18, Mr. F. V. Wooster offered the following which were carried:

Moved, In the construction of new permanent sidewalks the town hereby recommends that preference be given to those streets where in the judgment of the Selectmen public convenience requires the laying of such walks.

Moved, In the construction of new sidewalks the town hereby recommends the use of artificial stone in preference to tar concrete, the owners of abutting property to pay one half the cost, in accordance with the provision of statutes adopted by the town April 10, 1893.

NOTHING DOING.

Mr. W. L. Tuck offered the following:

Moved. That the Chairman or the Town Counsel tell our citizens now in town meeting assembled the present condition of the grade crossing question.

Mr. Tuck, not getting any information, spoke at length on the matter. The motion was then rejected.

OLD B. & L. CHARTER.

Mr. J. T. Wilson offered the following:

Moved, that the Selectmen are hereby authorized and instructed to investigate and report as early as practicable, at some future town meeting what rights or power, under and by virtue of the Charter of the Boston & Lowell Railroad Corporation, granted in 1830, the town has through its Board of Selectmen to compel the said B. & L. R. R. to construct its railroad crossing at the junction of Main, Church and Pleasant streets, so as not to impede or obstruct the safe and convenient use of said streets by the public.

As it was thought the passage of this vote would retard the grade crossing abolition, the motion was rejected, the understanding being that it could be brought up at some future date if deemed advisable.

The meeting then dissolved.

A FESTIVAL OF FLOWERS.

One of the prettiest children's parties ever given in town was the closing lesson of Miss Sanborn's Friday Class, held on last Saturday afternoon. It was called a "Festival of Flowers," the favors in the German being of flowers of all kinds—roses, pinks, fleur-de-lis, canterbury bells, poinsettas, jonquils, chrysanthemums, and even the gorgeous sun flower.

Many of the little girls represented flowers, having garlands of pinks, roses or dasies decorating their dainty white dresses, and it would be a difficult thing to say who looked the prettiest when all looked so lovely. The predominating color seemed to be pink, and the closing march looked like summer personified with each child carrying a spray or two of flowers, and two or three of the young ladies with gay paper sunshades. Miss Sanborn was presented with many beautiful roses, pinks and violets. Refreshments were served and the favors for the closing German were packages of chocolates.

The matrons for this class have been Mrs. Edwin Ginn, Mrs. John E. Page, Mrs. Charles Tenney, Mrs. H. A. Wheeler, and Mrs. W. E. Wilde. Mrs. Page and Mrs. Wilde assisted Miss Sanborn by receiving the class and taking charge of the favors. Miss Sanborn's class will resume lessons in the fall, commencing Friday, November 5.

FORMER PASTOR RETURNS TO TOWN.

Rev John H. Mansfield, who has the distinction of being the oldest Methodist minister of the New England conference in active service, will ask to be placed on the retired list at the session now being held at Lowell.

Mr. Mansfield was born in Wellesley, April 28, 1826, fitted for college at Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, and graduated from Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., in 1855. After he was graduated, he was principal of Fulton Seminary, Fulton, N. Y., for a time, and in 1857 was admitted to the N. E. Conference. His pastorates have been as follows: St. Paul's Church, Lynn, Lafayette Street, Salem, Walnut Street, Chelsea, Central Church, Lowell, First Church, Worcester, Westfield, the second time to Walnut street, Chelsea, Meridian Street, East Boston, South Ashburnham, Winchester, Rockport, South Lawrence, West Somerville, Athol, Gardner, Gleasondale, Hubbardston.

There has been no more earnest or devoted worker in New England Methodism than Mr. Mansfield. His work has been chiefly evangelistic and thousands bear testimony to the help they have received from his ministry.

Mr. Mansfield was married Sept. 16, 1855, to Miss Harriet N. Sykes of Belchertown. September 16, 1905, they celebrated their golden wedding at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Mason.

No small share of her husband's success has been due to Mrs. Mansfield's hearty co-operation, and whereever they have worked they have been dearly beloved by young and old alike.

Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield have three children, Edward H. Mansfield of Boston, Mrs. John N. Mason of Winchester and Mrs. Luther Freeman of Kansas City, Mo.

Twenty-five years ago this month Mr. Mansfield was appointed to Winchester M. E. Church, where he served three years.

He has recently purchased the property at No. 29 Cresent road, and at the close of this conference will come here to reside.

For the individual highest single string with handicap Messrs. W. D. Rogers and Rufus Clark are tied and they will roll off for the honor.

SCHOOL NEWS.

The public schools will close for the Easter vacation on Friday noon next (April 9). They will open on Tuesday, April 20, at the usual time.

Mr. D. W. Pratt is preparing plans for the regrading of the westerly end of the High school lot. They are expected to be ready for the approval of the School Committee in a week or so.

On Tuesday about 50 persons visited the High School, taking advantage of the Public Day. The Mother's Association served coffee and cakes in their room, and Rev. John R. Chaffee spoke during the morning on Joan of Arc.

At a meeting of the grade teachers in the schools to be held next Tuesday afternoon at four, Dr. Ralph Putnam and Dr. Clarence J. Allen will speak upon the causes and cure of tuberculosis. Supt. of Schools Herron is to give directions with reference to carrying into effect the law requiring instruction in the schools in the subject of tuberculosis and its preventation.

DEAD CARP NUISANCE.

Complaint was made to the Board of Health this week of the odor caused by the great numbers of dead carp on the north shores of Wedge pond. Dr. C. J. Allen of the board visited this section and in a space of about 15 rods counted 50 dead fish. The shores all about the pond are in a similiar state. A man has been set to work removing the fish and he has already taken away over half a dozen wheel barrow loads of them. The exact cause of the fish dying in so large quantities has not been determined, but it is undoubtedly due to some foul condition of the water.

MUSICAL SERVICE.

The annual series of Vespers at the Unitarian Church will be brought to a close on next Sunday evening with a Musical Service. At the first in the series, an audience that taxed the capacity of the church listened with mingled wonder and admiration to Mr. Richard Czerwonky's marvelous playing of the violin. It will be welcome news that Mr. Czerwonky has been engaged again for this closing service. He has few living equals as a musician.

Mr. Phippen, who has charge of these services, has also engaged Mrs. Gertrude Miller Woodruff, Soprano, to assist, on next Sunday evening. Mrs. Woodruff, then Miss Miller, began her musical career as Cinderella in Mechanics Building, Boston, at the age of sixteen. She was the Soprano singer in the first performance in this country of "In a Persian Garden." Among her engagements have been those with the Lyric Club, of London, with the Kneisel Quartette, with the Handel and Haydn Society, and as Soprano for several years at the Second Church, Boston. Mr. Philip Hale has said of her singing, "Seldom do you hear from any renowned singer a more finished piece of phrasing or a purer beauty of tone."

Mr. Joshua Phippen, our own accomplished musician, has been able to arrange this attractive Service through his acquaintance with the musicians, and through the generosity of friends in the Unitarian Society. The Church is glad to open its doors freely to all lovers of music, and to those who find in such art a noble worship. The evening's program of music, which is to be attended with a service of worship by the Pastor, is as follows:

BOAT CLUB PREPARES FOR COMING SEASON.

The Winchester Boat Club will open its season on Tuesday evening, April 3rd, when its annual meeting and election of officers will be held. Last season was one of the most prosperous in the club's history, and this summer is looked forward to with much anticipation by the club members. The membership of the club has been greatly increased, at the opening of this season the non-resident list being filled and the resident list rapidly nearing the limit. It is anticipated that the club will, for the first time in its history, have a waiting list this year, and from the present indications it will be early in the season too.

The unfortunate death of Mr. James Cooper, last season's steward at the clubhouse has been deeply regretted, but it has been arranged that Mr. Cooper's soon shall fill this position.

The list of officers for the coming year as prepared by the nominating committee, and to be voted upon at the annual meeting, is as follows:

President—George B. Smith
Vice-President—Charles A. Gleason
Secretary—T. Price Wilson
Treasurer—William Adriance
Fleet Captain—Fred M. Bates

Directors

Vincent Farnsworth
Schuyler F. Herron
Robert W. Armstrong
Dexter P. Blaikie
James H. Gerlach
Ralph S. Vinal
Alfred W. Lombard
Hermann D. Murphy

The nominating committee consisted of Messrs. T. Price Wilson, William J. Ladd, Ralph S. Vinal, Edgar M. Young, Alfred W. Lombard.

OLD WAYS OF DOING BUSINESS.

As an illustration how business was transacted in towns in years past is gleaned from the following which occurred in Woburn:

Mr. John F. Kelley a contractor, made a proposition to buy from the city a lot of land comprising about 4,300 feet situated on Arlington road.

This lot the mayor learned was purchased from James Sheehan in 1876 although the deed has been lost in the city archives for the past 33 years, Assessor Rice had it looked up on the Cambridge records and found it was the city property. It was bought and used by the city for a gravel pit.

It appears that Mr. Sheehan or his heirs have been paying taxes on the land till 1899, ever since the sale in 1876. It also was stated that the city after purchasing the gravel pit had been paying the Sheehan heirs for the gravel taken from it. Regarding the sale there seems to have been no record kept of it on the city books although there is sufficient evidence at hand to show that the transfer had been made.

UNBIASED COMMITTEES.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It is greatly to be desired that when committee appointments are made by the Moderator that he appoint only those men who are unbiased and not committed to either side of the matter that is to be considered.

For instance, in the appointment of the committee to consider the question of the so-called "sewer trap," two of the appointees are known to be in favor of its discontinuance, while the third favors its retention. Under these conditions it is not very difficult to surmise what the nature of the report will be. Hereafter let us have committees whose complexion is unknown and who will give to the town a report free from preconceived views.

OPEN TO CONVICTION.

YOU AND YOUR DEALER.

Stand by your local merchants, patronize the stores in your own town. Don't be tempted by catch-penny bargains to send your money flying all over the country. Keep it in circulation in your own neighboorhood.

By doing this you will benefit three parties:

Your town's newspaper—will get an opportunity to do business with your dealer.

Your dealer—will get his regular profit and an opportunity to broaden out his business.

Yourself—you will have the great satisfaction of knowing that you have done your share toward supporting and encouraging local enterprise, upon which depends the growth and prosperity of your town.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

An entertainment under the auspices of the Philanthropy Committee of the Fortnightly, was given by the children of Dorothy Dix Hall, at the Town Hall, Saturday afternoon, March 27. It was a surprising demonstration of youthful talent, and was enjoyed by an audience ranging in age from two to sixty years.

In the singing and dancing of the first five numbers, the children showed a happy abandon,—if not sweetness of voice—and in the recitation called, "Tommy," Doris Horslin proved herquite the irrepressible boy.

At No. 6, called "Schultz"—the youthful star, Ruth Fielding, appeared in a recitation, followed by impersonations. This was a remarkable performance, not only for so young an artist, but for even an adult. Her demonstration of the delights (?) of a Turkish Bath to an inexperienced Dutchman was extremely laughable, and her rapid changes in dialect and facial expression in the impersonations, showed native talent of a high order.

An Irish Dance by Catherine McGregor and Vera Barry, was charmingly given, and the trio, "Jack o'Lantern Man" was a delightful bit of acting; and it proved so realistic to the juvenile portion of the audience, that many little heads were turned to that corner of the gallery where the "Jack o'Lantern Man" was fearfully supposed to be in ambush.

The sketch, "The Property Baby" by Ruth Fielding and Doris Horslin was irresistible in its appeal to the mother heart in the audience, and proved pathetic to those who realized the jesting-upon-facts embodied in the little comedy. In this, again the acting of the gifted child, Ruth Fielding, proved her predestination for the stage.

A pretty chorus was the finale of this unique entertainment.

Great credit is due the matrons of the Dorothy Dix House for the training and nurturing of these children, who, though in enforced absence from their parents, seem well and happy and are now being safe-guarded against possible perils in their future theatrical careers.

The affair was under the direction of the Philanthropy Committee of the Fortnightly, composed of Mrs. William Belcher, Mrs. Frank M. White, Mrs. Elsie Belcher, and Miss Amy White.

PARK THEATRE.

Again I have been taking an outing—a jaunt to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras, then to Palm Beach for some golf and some frivolity, of which I saw much.

So far I have seen but one play, "Father and the Boys," but that is one better than a dozen others put together that I have witnessed at various times, and which had passed muster as "big hits." It is by George Ade, as I suppose you know, and William H. Crane, is giving his finest art and his delightful personality to the leading part. Oh! what delicious unction, what dry humor, what inimitable snap! It must be seen to be appreciated.

In "Father and the Boys" Mr. Ade has demonstrated that he is now in the front rank of native playwrights. This new piece fairly bristles with laugh-compelling dialogue.

Nothing is overdone, nothing underdone. Long may "Billy" Crane wave in this land of the free and the home of the brave! For, tell me, please, who is to replace him when he disappears from the stage? It is a sad thought, is it not? No one who likes comedy at its best, no one who likes drama of any kind whatever, should fail to see Mr. Crane at the Park Theatre. He is a delight, a real joy. And he is not the whole show by any means. There are a number of pretty girls, clever girls, beautifully gowned girls, and some clever and handsome men, and they all have clever things to do and they do them cleverly. And "Father and the Boys" has a capital story to tell—a story that makes you laugh immoderately and makes you think also. Go and hear it told.

GAIETY THEATRE.

A farcical entertainment, which enlists the services of no less than fifty people, is something worth talking and writing about. Never until, Messrs. Harder and Hall assumed the management of "The Morning Glories" this year has an entertainment of the kind been presented with more than half the number of people employed in the production of "The Morning Glories In Zuzuland," the latest of the series of burlesque and vaudeville shows to be presented at the Gaiety Theatre, beginning Monday matinee of April 5, under the direction of the producer, Clare Evans, who has the leading part.

MR. CLIFFORD PRATT MARRIED.

The recent news of the marriage of Mr. Clifford E. Pratt, son of Mr. Frank S. Pratt, to Miss Evelyn Piper of Laconia, N. H., has been a complete surprise to that young man's friends in town. Mr. Pratt went to Laconia last fall, entering the employ of the Laconia Car Co. He and his wife were in town on Sunday last visiting his parents.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The last week's issue of the Union Signal contains a very interesting letter from Mrs. Katherine Lente Stevenson, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, who is making a tour around the world in the interests of the work. Speaking of the great awakening in China she speaks of the great danger of intemperance to a nation hitherto not given to excess in the use of alcoholic stimulants. The world has been aroused to the fearful menace of the opium traffic, but the use of liquor has hitherto been comparatively negligible. Lately there has been an alarming increase and now is the great opportunity of temperance missionaries.

Mrs. Stevenson was in Shanghai while the opium Congress was in session. Although held with closed doors, it was the great topic of interest.

The Easter Sale to raise funds for the State work is to be held April 13, 14 and 15 in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple and it is hoped that all members of the Union will contribute toward its success either by gift or purchase.

Members of the local Union are reminded of the Easter box for the flower mission. It must be sent April 7 and articles for it should be sent to Mrs. Tracy, 16 Mystic avenue before that time.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The week of April 5th at Keith's Theatre will see one of the biggest vaudeville bills in the history of the house. At the head of it will be Karno's English comedy in "A Night in an English Music Hall," probably the greatest laughing show that has ever appeared in this country. This is the production in which a stage is shown on a stage, with the boxes filled with people and the English singers and performers of different kinds do their turns, while those in the boxes take a most prominent part.

Another star attraction will be dainty Bessie Wynn, the singing comedienne, who since she retired from musical comedy has been one of the strongest drawing cards in vaudeville.

The Six Musical Cuttys, without question the greatest musical act on the stage, will also appear. Others will be Charles Leonard Fletcher, who has just returned from a successful season in London with some new impersonations; Edwards Davis & Company in a sketch called "All Rivers Meet At Sea; the Mangean Troupe; Lancton, Lucier & Company; Arthur Huston; Alexander and Scott; Sansone and Deliah and others.

WOODCRAFT.

Methods of Canadian Indians In Traversing Forests.

A Canadian Indian, states a contemporary, never loses his way in the woods, being always able to find his road over a route once followed by him and also to penetrate forests that he has never seen if only another Indian shows him the general course in a rough draft on a piece of bark.

Indians display marked ability in communicating with one another in the woods. They telegraph by means of smoke, and it is astonishing how far off they can scent it—always a long time before they can see it or could hear a sound from its vicinity. If they expect to be followed by another party they stick a piece of wood in the ground on a portage, slanting it in the direction in which they are traveling. Those who find it will know by the degree of inclination whether they who planted it are traveling hurriedly or not.

If it be in summer, a small bough or piece of a shrub is fastened to the stake, and by the extent to which it has become withered those who find it will know when it was placed there. If a hunter, as very often happens, has to make a detour or to remain behind his squaw in search of game, she will occasionally indicate the route she has taken by sticks placed in the ground, to which she has attached a small portion of her skirt.

THE GERMAN CENSOR.

He Was a Terror to the Dramatist a Hundred Years Ago.

The way the censor worried the German dramatists of a century or so ago is strikingly illustrated by a book on the censorship in Germany published by Dr. Robert Heindl at Munich. The German theater used to be terribly moral. In 1795 the Viennese censor laid it down that an engaged couple ought not to quit the stage separately, but that they should be accompanied by an official who should be understood to be about to make immediate arrangements for their marriage. Even in 1848 misalliances were prohibited on the Viennese stage, for, as the censor sagely observed, these misfortunes will occur in real life, but they should not be allowed in the theater.

At Stuttgart the "Iphigenia in Tauris" of Goethe was nearly prohibited because the Greek dress allowed the actors' bare legs to be seen. There was a long dispute over this point, but at last the censor permitted the play on condition that the actors wore yellow tights.

Few would have imagined that the Viennese censor was so careful of the morals of the population a hundred years ago, but Dr. Heindl shows that not merely political allusions were censored, but that the strictest decorum of word and of thought was insisted upon.

Counting Postal Cards.

Of the many interesting machines employed by the government in its daily work there may be mentioned those used for counting and tying postal cards into small bundles. These machines are capable of counting 500,000 cards in ten hours and wrapping and tying them in packages of twenty-five each. In this operation the paper is pulled off a drum by two long fingers which emerge from below, and another finger dips in a vat of mucilage and applies itself to the wrapping paper in precisely the right spot. Other parts of the machine twine the paper round the pack of cards, and then a thumb presses over the spot whereon the mucilage has been applied, whereupon the package is thrown on a carrying belt ready for delivery.—Minneapolis Journal.

The soothing spray of Ely's Liquid Cream Balm, used in an atomizer, is an unspeakable relief to sufferers from Catarrh. Some of them describe it as a Godsend, and no wonder. Liquid Cream Balm contains all the healing, purifying elements of the solid form, and it never fails to satisfy. Sold by all druggists for 75c., including spraying tube, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

RAILROAD STORIES.

The Man Who Paid the Conductor and the Name on the Ticket.

An old time traveling man was talking of experiences of former days on the road. "Frequently," said this traveler, "I journeyed to Cincinnati. The fare from my city to that place was then about $3.25. I saved something by handing the conductor $2 in cash. One day there was an excursion, and I bought a round trip ticket for $1.25 or $1.50—I've forgotten the exact amount, but that circumstance need not cripple this story. When I handed this ticket to the conductor as he tore off the return coupon he looked at me and in a voice betraying how deeply he was hurt he remarked, 'My young friend, don't you know that I can afford to haul you much cheaper than this company can?'

"On another occasion, when in Chicago, a colored man met me at the entrance of the station, asked me where I was going and offered to sell me a ticket for $1. The ticket was to Louisville, but I was only going to Indianapolis. Cheap enough.

"When the conductor came along to take up my ticket he asked me my name. It was usual to write one's name on the ticket in the presence of the conductor. I told him my name was on the ticket. He grinned as he handed it back and asked me to look at it and say if that was my name. I looked. The name on the ticket was 'Mary Flaherty.' He grinned again, somewhat sarcastically, but he took the ticket."—Pittsburg Press.

SNORING.

One of the Evils We Acquire With Our Civilization.

It is a truism that no one ever heard of a snoring savage. In fact, if the wild man of the woods and plains does not sleep quietly he runs the risk of being discovered by his enemy, and the scalp of the snorer would soon adorn the belt of his crafty and more quietly sleeping adversary. With civilization, however, we have changed all this. The impure air of our sleeping rooms induces all manner of catarrhal affections. The nasal passages are the first to become affected. Instead of warming the inspired air on its way to the lungs and removing from it the dangerous impurities with which it is loaded the nose becomes obstructed. A part of the air enters and escapes by the mouth. The veil of the palate vibrates between the two currents—that through the mouth and the one still passing through the partially closed nostrils—like a torn sail in the wind. The snore, then, means that the sleeper's mouth is partially open, that his nose is partially closed and that his lungs are in danger from the air not being properly warmed and purified. From the continued operation of these causes—the increase of impure air in sleeping rooms and permitting habitual snorers to escape killing and scalping—some scientist has predicted that in the future all men (and all women, too) will snore. It goes along with decay of the teeth and baldness.—Health.

Natural Kindness.

At an out of the way railroad junction a traveler found himself hungry, but with only two minutes to spare before his train left. "I'll take a cup of coffee," he said to the young woman in charge of the restaurant. "I've no time for anything else."

"You can take all the time you want, sir," said the young woman cordially. "You look at this bill of fare, and I'll telephone to the superintendent to delay the train a little while."

"Why, can that be done?" asked the traveler in amazement.

"Certainly," said the young woman. "Of course it can. It's a branch road and no other train coming or going over it today, and the superintendent would want you to have a good meal. He owns this restaurant."—Youth's Companion.

Don't Need Referendum.

When every citizen at town meeting has the opportunity to vote on every important question, Winchester has no need for the referendum.

All-Night Lighting.

The causes that led for the request for all-night lighting was not for the benefit of belated citizens, but for the protection of homes from thieves and other lawless characters. In some towns all-night lighting has gone beyond the experimental stage and has become a fixed feature of protection. Ultimately it will become general with the downward trend of electric lighting prices.

Publicity.

To "Observations" we would say that Town Hall gossip is not publicity in the correct sense of the word. Of course if the several town departments do not want to take the public into their confidence, there is no way of compelling them to do so. However, publicity is a mighty good thing, as witness the effect of printing in the STAR last week the report of the committee on street lighting. Had that report not been given such wide publicity, there is no doubt in our mind but what it would have been unfavorably acted upon because of a failure of the citizens to digest a simple reading of it at the meeting and the town thus suffer a further loss of revenue. No doubt some of the departments believe that their affairs are too trivial for publication, yet these trivialities would no doubt be found of much importance to the citizens. Publicity is the greatest innovation that has taken place in recent years, and corporations and other big interests are now employing big salaried men to keep the public informed of their doings.

Separated.

"Some men are fond of work, and others are not," said Wilber. "Take Dawson, for instance. He is wedded to his work."

"Not now," said Hickenlooper. "He's been divorced."

"Divorced? What do you mean?" asked Wilber.

"He was bounced last Saturday," said Hickenlooper.—Lippincott's.

Just Suited Him.

"Miss Pansy, yo' suhtingly has got well developed ahms, ef yo'll pahdon ma sayin' so."

"Ah developed dem ahms workin' ovah de washtub, Mistah Rufus."

"Um—um—er—Miss Pansy, will yo' be ma wife?"—Denver Post.

The Winchester Visiting Nurse Association is preparing for an annual meeting of more than usual interest on Tuesday, April thirteen. Dr. Richard Cabot of Boston is expected to speak, and Miss Best of New York, well known among settlement workers, will tell of her experiences.

Don't forget for that little party Covel's ice cream makes it complete.

A thoroughly enjoyable entertainment was given at the Methodist Church last Thursday evening. The feature of the evening was the readings by Mrs. May White Tedford of Winchester. Mrs. Tedford is a graduate of the Emerson School of Oratory and is a lady of versatile talents excelling in character and dialect sketches. "The Village Seamstress" was an absolutely truthful portrayal of village life and character in New England. Her darky and Irish sketches called forth much laughter and applause. Mrs. Tedford's rendition of Tennyson's "Bugle Song" with bugle imitations was artistic and pleasing.

What a blessing a little water on the streets, especially in the centre, would be these days. Spring and fall, year after year, the people are obliged to endure these dust clouds laden with the filthiest dirt from the streets. Why does not our Board of Health take up the matter. No one else appears to be interested, and during the early spring the foul conditions in the centre were greatly remedied by the board.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It was time the town meeting dissolved, it was getting sloppy.

Apparently the town has the big end of the stick on the street lighting contract. Now if we only had one of the big gas companies serving us also so that we could afford to use gas for cooking and heating purposes the combination would be complete.

Our piscatorial sea lawyer friend could not have heard the statement that the passageway to Wedge pond just northeast of the Calumet club house was disputed as a public way, for he would never have allowed his foster child's rights to be questioned for a minute without flying to its defence.

Curtis street will rise frequently in the future to bother us when other layouts are petitioned for. The Selectmen must not forget however that we are under the board of survey act. I would advise them to re-read it.

The grade crossing motion concerning any rights we may have under the 1850 charter of the Boston and Lowell railroad was ill timed. That question was carefully considered long ago and may become a good club yet, but not yet. We have blundered enough and on this grade crossing question, so let us not add more.

Those sidewalk votes are all right as the sense of a meeting that did not discuss or know much about them, but while they should be considered by the Selectmen they should not be considered in any way binding. Concrete when properly made and laid is a good and long-lived material, but most of it the town has put down has been of inferior quality and poorly laid. We have not paid enough to get good work.

Now for the grade crossing report. That is what we need to wake us up, and we need to be waked up badly in regard to many things, and I will venture the guess that that will do it allright. Thousands for a proper plan, but nothing but fight for makeshifts and cheap Jack substitutes. We want a plan for the distant future, not for the present. Direct ways are aimed for today by all up-to-date people, and the Commonwealth and the street railway must be looking backwards and expecting to travel that route if they honestly favor crooked and indirect ways, but they don't, and the whole scheme of the railroad and street railway is to get the town to agree to pay more than 10 per cent, the limit fixed by law, and the Commonwealth is aiding and abetting them. But wait and see.

The Railroad Committee reported against the free pass resolve again this year on the ground that the commission had the authority now. Yes, it had it for just forty years and hasn't acted yet, any more than it has on some other things, and apparently the legislature is afraid of hurting its feelings by jogging its memory. Or is it afraid of hurting some other peoples' feelings?

Good observers say the valuation will go above twelve million dollars this year. It would go above fifteen millions if our assessors were wide awake. But what can you expect for three hundred dollars a year. This office carries by far the meanest salary of the town and always has. I trust the present Ap. Com. will have sense enough to raise it.

Why does not the STAR get more news of what the town boards and departments are doing from time to time? What is the trouble? Publicity is what the people want today and full account of how their affairs are going on. There are certainly plenty of gossips up at the Town Hall offices.

SUNSHINE BUTTER SHOP

When you hear of a store selling goods at wholesale for the retail price you are rather suspicious of the statement. Reflect a little (or to apply a homely phrase use the top of your head for a minute.

Here is a wholesale house who can see the value of a shop in a town the size of Winchester to sell their Butter and Eggs. Instead of opening a butter store in town, pay rent and employ a clerk, they offer the SUNSHINE SHOP so much a month to sell their Butter. They make it an object for us to sell the goods, and they in return give us a price that will make it worth while for you to purchase Butter of us.

It is a deal on the level with both parties and when we make the statement of selling Vermont Creamery Butter in PRINTS, five pounds to the box or a cut from the tub at 33cts. per pound it is not a March breeze or an April shower.

Good butter has a taste. We would like to have you taste of a print, and better still purchase one. We have a few eggs (which are not heirlooms) and are dealing them out a few at a time, say at 23cts., 26cts., and 30cts., for one twelfth of a gross. Come around again on suspicion as we sell other things besides Butter and Eggs.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Nothing better than "The Little Princess" could have been chosen by Mr. Craig for the coming holiday week at the Castle Square. It is a play to delight the children, and as they will have a rest from school duties, they will have plenty of opportunity for an afternoon's or evening's recreation at the theatre.

Best of all in the production of "The Little Princess" at the Castle Square the title character of Sara Crewe is to be acted by Mary Young. The role exactly suits her, and she will bring it to a petite quality and a charming simplicity of manner that is bound to captivate. For the rest of the cast, the part of Mrs. Carmichael will be acted by Gertrude Binley, Beverly West as Ermengarde, Minnette Cleveland as Becky, Mabel Colcord as Miss Minchin, George Hassell as Ram Dass, William Evarts as Mr. Carmichael and Theodore Friebus as Carresford.

HURT AT POWER HOUSE.

Joseph Hamilton, 42, 648 East Seventh street, South Boston, and William P. Dunn, 802 Sixth street, South Boston, formerly of this town, were both seriously burned while repairing a generator at the power house of the Elevated railway at Lincoln wharf early yesterday morning. They were taken to the Relief Hospital, where they are not expected to recover.

For any skin trouble this has no equal.

W. H. S. NOTES.

Last Tuesday was observed as visitor's day in the High School and in addition to the regular program, Mr. Chaffee gave a very interesting lecture on Joan of Arc, illustrated by stereopticon pictures before a large audience of parents and friends.

The class of 1911 held a meeting on Wednesday and Kenneth Caldwell was elected track captain and Joseph Obregon the base ball captain. It was voted that the captains appoint their managers.

The prospects of a good ball team look very favorable and by daily practice the men have all rounded into good shape this season. Nearly all of last year's team are in the school this year and the team will be practically the same as last year.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Music-loving New Englanders have gathered by thousands the past week to hear the celebrated vocalists of Oscar Hammerstein's Manhattan Grand Opera Company at the Boston Theatre.

Monday evening, April 12, the Boston Theatre returns to its former high estate as the house of big productions when the huge melodramatic success of the theatrical season—"Via Wireless"—will be produced with the original company of the long runs at New York City. This is Frederic Thompson's latest production of the dramatization by Paul Armstrong and Winchell Smith. "Via Wireless" is a remarkable production because of two massive, realistic and spectacular scenes, declared to be the most notable ever staged in these respects. One scene shows the forging room of a steel plant at Pittsburg with work in full blast and another depicts a thrilling wreck and rescue at sea during the action of which a complete wireless plant is seen in practical operation. The company of players has many local favorites.

A number of gentlemen and ladies of the Calumet Club enjoyed the costume party at that place on Tuesday evening. During the evening refreshments were served and the music for the dancing was given by an orchestra.

BIOGRAPHY

Flynt, Josiah. My life. 6106.8

The self-written "life" of the man, who, instinct with human curiosity, sounded the depths of the under-world and brought back experiences which he casts in the human document form. Early life, his rebellion against order [his days in a reform school, his escape and early tramping "experiences, his voyage to Germany]as a coal-passer, his life and wanderings in Europe, the friendship with Arthur Symons whom he called his literary god-father, his meeting with Tolstoy are all full of human interest.

Irving, Brereton, Austin. The life of Henry Irving 2 v. 664.7a

"This biography is just a chronicle—admirably exact and faithful—of its hero's public life. All Irving's professional experiences, from his appearance in Sunderland, Edinburgh, Dublin, Manchester, Birmingham, and Liverpool down to his farewell seasons at the Lyceum and Drury Lane, and his final performance of 'Becket' at Bradford, are here presented with a carefulness that merits enthusiastic acknowledgment. If ever there was an object-lesson in what can be done by an actor, through force of character, to overcome natural defects and the obstacle of self-consciousness, it is surely afforded by Irving's career, and in Mr. Brereton's chapters the moral is consistently pointed."

Mr. Morgan aims not to form a history of the civil war, nor to give an analysis of Lincoln's character but to write a simple strightforward story of his life in its true sequence. This plain story of essentials is a "series of dramatic pictures of the struggles and achievements of a common man in whom a race of common men is exalted. In the preparation of his book Mr. Morgan has made use of the various accessible authorities, presenting those incidents in his hero's life which are most significant and essential."

Robbins, Mrs. Sarah. Old Andover days, memories of a puritan childhood. 688.13

Mrs. Robbins, past ninety years of age, reviews the Andover days of her youth with its distinguished men and gracious women. "It is not so much of minute events that she writes, as of the general spirit and atmosphere which pervaded the seminary and those who were attached to it either as professors or as students. It all seems to us of today a gloomy and forlorn sort of life, but it is obvious from Mrs. Robbin's chronicle, that the young, at least, were able to find their pleasures in the midst of those somber and terribly serious surroundings."

At the time of Mr. Schurz's death he had completed the third volume of his Reminiscences to the middle of Grant's administration. His manuscript is printed as he left it, and there has been added by Mr. Bancroft with the cooperation of Mr. Dunning, a hundred and forty page sketch embodying the salient features of his activity in public affairs showing his relation to the history of the time, the intellectual characteristics and political aspirations that were conspicuous and potent in his career.

WHOSE FAULT?

Was It Bad Luck or Mismanagement? The Taxpayers Take No Pleasure In Feeding Their White Elephant.

The municipal electric light plant of Frankfort, Ind., was brought into prominence recently by the bursting of a flywheel, which damaged it to the extent of $12,000 to $15,000 and caused great inconvenience to the factories and business houses that depended on the plant for light and power. The accident is said to have been due to incompetent supervision.

About a year ago a disinterested citizen of Frankfort wrote to an inquirer:

We have a city of from 9,000 to 12,000. The original cost [illegible] of the municipal lighting plant] was something over $50,000. While the city has no report, from data on file I should judge that the cost was about $150 per street arc lamp. City taxes have been doubled since the installation of the municipal lighting plant. Service is extremely poor, and, while it appears to be the pet of councilmen, there is not a taxpayer in this city who does not regard this plant as a white elephant. Last year we had 170 lights, and the receipts from all sources from the lighting plant were something over $27,000, while the total expenses were something over $58,000, thus making the net cost of operating expenses $31,000, or that sum for 170 street lights. Within the next two years it will be necessary to expend about $40,000 on machinery and repairs.

If your city is out of debt, has a low tax levy and a large surplus of cash that you wish to get rid of, my advice to you would be to build a municipal lighting plant.

This was the city where a few years ago the feeling in regard to the poor service became so bitter that the citizens made jack-o'-lanterns of pumpkins and invited the council to inspect the new lighting plant. At that time threats were made openly that the poles would be torn down unless the service improved.

GETTING WISDOM IN WALES.

Expectations Reversed—More Taxes Instead of Less.

In 1896 the gas and water works of Rhonda, Wales, were taken over by the municipality. In order to get the taxpayers to consent to this they were told that the profits which then went to the stockholders would be applied toward the reduction of taxes. The result has been the exact reverse of the prediction, for both plants have had deficits which have had to be made up by taxation, although no reduction has been made in prices.

In the last year of private ownership the profit on the gas works was 10 per cent on the investment. Last year there was a loss of $11,425, which has to be paid out of taxes and which is equivalent to increasing the price of gas 8 cents a thousand feet. The writer in the Western Mail who gives these figures assigns as one of the causes that much less gas is made per ton of coal than was the case when the plant was under private management. The result is the more remarkable because there are now six times as many consumers as there were in 1896.

The situation in the waterworks is even worse. In its last year of operation the company made a profit of $21,530, which municipal management has changed into a loss of $14,165. This also has to be borne by the taxpayers, but the city has now been given permission to raise the water rates to figures 20 to 25 per cent more than those of the company.

Wise Counsel.

In 1905 Norwich, Conn., purchased the local gas and electric plants, the amount invested being $500,000. Three years later the electric generating plant was shut down, and a contract for current was made with a private company.

When the plants had been under city management for a year Martin E. Jensen, ex-treasurer of the city, stated that after allowing every possible credit to the city and setting aside only 3 per cent for depreciation the loss on the electric plant for thirteen months was $16,723. In closing the article in which this statement appeared Mr. Jensen wrote:

"Examination of local municipal accounting covering a period from 1867 to 1905 convinced me that cities conducting their affairs through unpaid and untrained commissioners run hopelessly into debt because appropriations are overspent. I except the gas and electrical commissioners who have not had time to make history.

"To those contemplating going into municipal lighting under Norwich conditions I would say, 'Don't!'"

Can't Get Rid of It.

The city of Bath, England, has for some time been trying to dispose of the electric plant which it purchased in 1896. A purchaser was found, and mutually acceptable terms were agreed upon, but the board of trade (a parliamentary board corresponding to our public utilities commission) refuses to permit the sale. This may deter other British cities from making risky experiments.

A Probable Purchase.

It is stated that private individuals in the town of Coaticook, Que., are contemplating the formation of a company and taking over the town's electric plant. As the town is now facing a serious problem in the way of increased power, a proposition for purchase will probably receive favorable consideration of a majority of the ratepayers.—Electrical Review.

Garrett, Ind., Investigates.

The taxpayers of Garrett are demanding an investigation into the affairs of the municipal lighting plant. They aver that the plant has been mismanaged and that the lights are costing more than they did under private ownership and that the service is not as good.—Ligonier (Ind.) Banner.

Slim Women of Hungary.

The women of Hungary regard a small waist as the greatest possible beauty, and they will endure anything in order to put on an appearance of being small waisted. Tight lacing is carried on to an extraordinary extent, and the waist is compressed by force until one would think that the owner could hardly breathe. Yet in this confined state the women will jump into the wildest of Hungarian dances, known as the czardas, and prance frantically like ballet dancers until at the end they sink, gasping, exhausted and well nigh suffocated, on a sofa. As they grow older most of these slim beauties become enormously stout, and then they are regarded as quite out. The Hungarians, though they resemble the Turks in many ways, have not the Turkish admiration for fat women or the English admiration for elderly made up belles. Hungary is a land of slim young women, and when they lose their figure they lose their attractiveness and their power.—Modern Society.

"Times Is Changed."

"Yes, siree, Bill; times is changed since you an' me was doin' our courtin'," said Adoniram Clover, with a note of sadness in his voice, to old Andy Clover, who had come over to "set a spell."

"When we was doin' our courtin' Andy, a gal thought she was bein' treated right harnsom if a feller bought her 10 cents' wuth o' pep'mints once in awhile, an' if he tuk her to any doin's in town she didn't expect him to go down into his jeans to the tune of a dollar or two for ice cream an' soda water an' candy at forty cents a paound. My son Si tuk his ducksy-daddle to the band concert in town yistiday, an' there wa'n't a quarter left of a dollar bill he struck me fer time he got home. Beats all the way young folks threw the money away nowadays. I tell ye times is changed mightily since we was boys, an' the Lawd only knows what the end will be with a feller layin' out 75 cents on a gal in one day!"—St. Louis Republic.

The Innocent Young Thing.

The manufacturer of a moving picture machine was explaining to a group of acquaintances how he had obtained a series of pictures showing a celebrated massacre that had once taken place at a western army post in the days when Indian warfare was a horrible reality instead of an exhibit on a Broadway stage.

"The commander of the post," he said, "had a detachment of soldiers and another of Indians reenact the scene for us, dressed exactly as in the old days, so our machines could secure every detail—the onslaught of the Indians, the defense by the white soldiers, their massacre and the destruction of the fort."

"It may be very interesting," said the kindly citizen, "but I should not care to see it in even a picture."

The sweet young thing listened with wide eyes.

"And did they really kill the white soldiers for you?" she asked, breathless.—New York Press.

Two Arctic Enemies.

Since the beginning of time there probably has been enmity between the polar bear and the walrus. Except for the walrus, bruin's reign over the arctic regions has been almost unchallenged since the race of mammoths passed. All the hardy flesh eaters that inhabit the bleak, unfertile northland are his natural prey. But most of all he depends upon the seals and sea lions for his food. There is only one animal that is powerful enough to defend itself and offspring against the polar bear's attack, the huge and cumbrous walrus, but its movements are so slow and awkward when out of the water that often it is impossible for the bulky animal to retard the swift attack and retreat of its smaller opponent.—Frank Stick in St. Nicholas.

Three of Them Knew.

According to the Philadelphia Record, a boy of eight said to his mother:

"Well, there were only three boys in school today who could answer one question that the teacher asked us."

"And I hope my boy was one of the three," said the proud mother.

"You bet I was," answered the young hopeful, "and Sam Harris and Harry Stone were the other two."

"I am very glad you proved yourself so good a scholar, my son; it makes your mother proud of you. What question did the teacher ask, Johnny?"

"'Who broke that glass in the back window?'"

A Real Romance.

Sometimes there are instances in life like those in the story books: An Atchison girl engaged herself to a carpenter, thinking he was poor, and discovered on the eve of her wedding day that he had $150 in the bank. He had not told her, wishing her to love him for himself alone.—Atchison Globe.

A Big Bathtub.

The tides run out swiftly in the bay of Fundy.

A summer urchin, witnessing the phenomenon for the first time, yelled shrilly: "Mamma, look quick! Some one has pulled the plug out of the ocean!"

The Roller.

"A rolling stone gathers no moss," remarked the proverb dispenser.

"And, like the human high roller," rejoined the thoughtful thinker, "it also gravitates downhill."—Chicago News.

In the march of life don't heed the order "right about" when you know you are about right.—Holmes.

A Story of Development.

There are over 310,000 telephones connected with the system of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company in the four northern New England States: to be exact, the figures as of Feb. 27, 1909, showed 310,440 of which 42,533 were sub-licensees.

This tremendous growth here in northern New England shows:

That this section of the country is a unit in its closely interwoven business and social interests:

That there is a necessary interdependence of city and country: That the Telephone Company has anticipated the needs and desire of all classes of users—the large manufacturer and the small dealer—the metropolitan merchant and the country storekeeper—the office and the home:

That its foresight has been approved, that its service is efficient and that its rates are equitable; this is manifest from the mere recapitulation—310,000 telephone.

This is a business argument, not a contented retrospect. We want the business man to picture a possible customer at every telephone. We want the residence subscriber to appreciate the telephone's potential value to the home.

We will send a contract agent to explain different classes of rates and their cost, and to advise the subscriber as to the kind best adapted to his individual needs. A word to the Local Manager will suffice.

Mr. Elder spoke on the general subject of law, and gave a very fine and interesting talk on what is usually a rather dry subject. Few men are gifted with Mr. Elder's abilities as a speaker, and as he is seldom heard in his home town, the announcement of his appearance at the club was heartily welcomed. He gave a general history of the profession, of its advancement, its specialties, and its influence for good and bad, all interspersed with numerous good stories and anecdotes, which amused and thoroughly entertained his audience. At the close of his talk a collation was served in the billiard room.

CLUB MEN DINE.

Election of Officers and Annual Dinner of Calumet Club.

Most Enjoyable Evening—$500 of Club Debt Discharged in Unique Manner.

Last Friday evening the members of the Calumet Club held their annual election and dinner at the club house, the two being combined to make one of the pleasantest evenings of a like nature yet enjoyed by the club. About 175 gentlemen attended.

The annual election of officers and other business incident to the regular meeting of the club was carried out before and during the dinner, and proved a pleasing and unique feature of the evening. The election was held in the reception room of the club house just before the company entered the dining hall, the new officers being accorded a unanimous vote.

The new regime as elected is as follows:

President—Charles S Tenney.

Vice-president—Freeland E. Hovey.

Secretary—Edgar M. Young.

Treasurer—Herbert L. Larrabee.

Director for three years—Nathan H. Taylor, Daniel B. Badger, Dr. J. Churchill Hindes.

Director for two years—Charles A. Gleason.

Following the election the company assembled in the spacious hall, which was attractively set with tables decorated with cut flowers and candelabra. One of the best menus yet presented at the club for a like occasion was given to the satisfaction of all present, including Chairman Tenney of the dinner committee. Music by an orchestra was played during the dinner, it being accompanied by individual and chorus singing by those present, the tuneful selections from the Isle of Bamboo, the opera recently given by the club, proving the most popular on the impromptu program.

Mr. Edward S. Barker presided, and made a capital toastmaster. With the arrival of the coffee and cigars he opened fire with a few of his inexhaustable stories, which put the company in an uproar, and with his usual wit and geniality introduced the list of speakers. This included club members entirely headed by the retiring president, Mr. Wallace F. Flanders, and including president elect, Charles S. Tenney, Mr. Charles C. Rogers, Geo. Adams Woods and Mr. Roland H. Sherman.

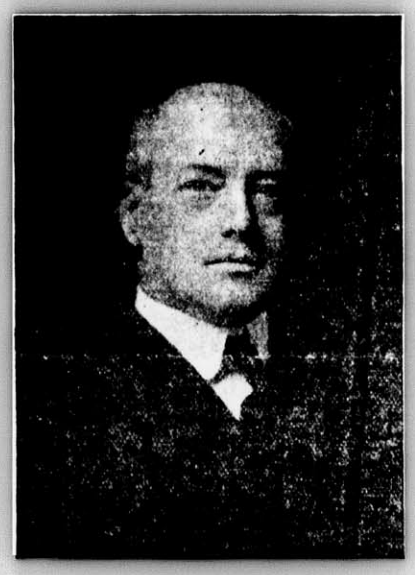

All of the gentlemen spoke in a most entertaining manner, but the remarks of Mr. Rogers, speaking for the show committee in charge of the recent opera, included the unique feature of the evening. Mr. Rogers gave the following report of the financial side of the show:

|---|---|
| Receipts from sale of tickets, evening performance | $856 50 |
| Premium on tickets | 430 50 |
| Receipts from sale of tickets, afternoon performance | 147 25 |
| | $1434 25 |
| Receipts from program | 820 00 |
| Gross receipts | $2254 25 |
| Gross Expenses | 993 46 |
| Net Receipts | $1260 79 |

With the close of the above report Mr. Rogers handed Treasurer Herbert L. Larrabee of the club a check for the amount of the receipts. This was the first public announcement of the amount cleared from the show, and the amount was most gratifying to all, its announcement being received with great applause.

President Flanders stated that it was the intention of the directors to use a part of the sum for the paying off of twenty bonds of the club, announcing that the drawing for these bonds would be held at once, and appointed Mr. George W. Fitch and Dr. Harry J. Olmsted to make the drawing. With the aid of a hat and the required number of pieces of card, the following bonds were drawn amid much enthusiasm:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Bond No. | 12 | Thomas W. Lawson |
| " | 95 | A. C. Richardson |
| " | 72 | A. T. Collier |
| " | 4 | Ralph E. Joslin |
| " | 14 | Thomas W. Lawson |
| " | 6 | George S. Littlefield |
| " | 10 | D. B. Badger |
| " | 18 | Thomas W. Lawson |

| " | 148 | A. C. Richardson |
| " | 174 | George A. Burgess |
| " | 161 | A. C. Richardson |
| " | 177 | Est. of H. F. Johnson |

FREELAND E. HOVEY
New Vice-President of Calumet Club.

CHARLES S. TENNEY
Newly elected President of the Calumet Club.

The remaining money, President Flanders stated, would be used in refurnishing the club house.

Mr. Flanders was given an ovation upon the success of his administration as president during the season closing and must certainly retire from the office with a feeling of satisfaction at what has been accomplished.

The introduction of the incoming president, Charles S. Tenney, was the signal for a burst of applause which has seldom been heard, even at that club house, and it signified beyond doubt that he is unquestionably the most popular member of the club today. When Mr. Tenney was finally allowed to speak he made a short address in appreciation, and stated that he preferred to be judged upon his merits of accomplishment rather than those of anticipation, and that he would endeavor to retain the good will of his fellow members during the approaching season.

Messrs. Woods and Sherman spoke entertainingly, touching upon the beauties and advancement of Winchester and the growth and prosperity of the club. During the evening a number of remarkably good solos were given by Mr. Erastus Badger, Dr. Charles W. Kelley, Mr. Edward W. Ashton and Mr. George E. Willey, all of the gentlemen being obliged to respond to repeated encores.

HERBERT L. LARRABEE
Re-elected Treasurer of the Calumet Club.

The evening was finally brought to a close with a laugh over Mr. Barker's final story and the singing of America.

SEVENTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hinds Receives Hosts of Friends.

One of the pleasantest events that has taken place at the Highlands for many years was the observance last Friday afternoon and evening of the seventieth birthday of Mrs. Elizabeth Hinds at her pretty home on Forest street. From four until seven o'clock there was a constant stream of people who called to offer congratulations to this honored woman and leave reminders of the happy event.

Mrs. Hinds was assisted in receiving by her daughters and her son James. The house was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants, roses predominating. Great quantities of beautiful flowers were sent as gifts from friends, as also a large number of books. Many other presents as well as the usual birthday cake were also received. Mrs. Hinds, who is in excellent health, enjoyed the occasion immensely as did the many old friends who met each other. The dining room, a most cheerful place, was decorated with cut flowers and the tea table was presided over by Mrs. James Hinds and Mrs. George Squiers, and light refreshments were served. It was an event long to be remembered.

Mrs. Hinds is a most remarkable woman and is deserving of the greatest credit for the rearing of a most interesting family under the most adverse circumstances. Her husband, who was a soldier in the Civil War, lost his life during that conflict, leaving his wife and six small children in practically destitute circumstances. Such a prospect would have discouraged the average woman, but not so with Mrs. Hinds, who entered on the one-sided battle with a grim determination to overcome all obstacles and feed, cloth and educate her little children. She won out, and today she lives to see her children grown up, some married and all in good circumstances, one of the boys being the town's engineer and ex-superintendent of streets.

It was to honor the worth of such a brave woman that so many persons called last Friday to offer congratulations and good wishes.

Thursday, April 1, the ladies of the Western Missionary Society met in the church vestry of the Congregational church. Business meeting was held at 3 o'clock when the President, Mrs. Emily J. Littlefield read a letter from our dearly beloved late Treasurer Miss Elizabeth E. Chapin. The letter was in the form of a bequest of money to be put on interest and used from year to year for the work of the society as long as the money lasts. It is intended to help them to do larger work. The sum of money was $500. Interesting letters were read from Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Smith of North Dakota.

State Board of Health Promulgates Rules and Regulations.

April 1, 1909.

To the Water and Sewer Board of the Town of Winchester.

Gentlemen:

I have the honor to transmit the rules and regulations adopted by the State Board of Health, in reply to your petition received at this office on March 11, 1909, relative to preventing the pollution and securing the sanitary protection of the waters of North, Middle and South Reservoirs. These rules and regulations were adopted by the State Board of Health at its meeting on April 1, 1909.

Respectfully submitted,
MARK W. RICHARDSON, M. D.
Secretary

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Rules and Regulations for the Purpose of Preventing the Pollution and Securing the Sanitary Protection of the Waters of North Reservoir, Middle Reservoir and South Reservoir and their Tributaries, used by the Town of Winchester as Sources of Water Supply.

The State Board of Health, acting under the authority of section 113 of chapter 75 of the Revised Laws, and every other act thereto enabling, hereby makes the following rules and regulations for the purpose of preventing the pollution and securing the sanitary protection of the waters of North Reservoir, Middle Reservoir and South Reservoir and their tributaries, used by the Town of Winchester as sources of water supply, which shall remain in force until further order, and which may be hereafter from time to time amended or added to by the State Board of Health:—

PRESERVE THE LAWNS.

It has come to the observation of the School Committee that more or less unconsciously persons living in the streets adjoining various school buildings have fallen into the habit of walking across portions of the school lawns. In most cases this has resulted in destroying the grass along the sidewalks or at the corners of lawns; at the Wyman School, a distinct path across the lawn has begun to be worn.

It is evident that the beauty of the town depends in some measure on the appearance of the lawns, on the school properties. The School Committee have taken pains to place their lawns in good condition and they feel that the citizens of Winchester wish them preserved. This cannot be done unless those who have occasion to pass the school buildings will refrain from walking on the grass, and in particular from making a path across any lawn.

In view of the conditions they ask their fellow citizens to use their influence to the end that none of the lawns shall be defaced.

By request of
THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

HIGH SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT

The High School Athletic Association has done the right thing in selecting a good old-time play like Lend Me Five Shillings for its benefit at the Town Hall next Friday night.

John Maddison Morton in his time wrote many successful comedies and farces, but never a better one than Lend Me Five Shillings, and though it is now over sixty years old, the love affairs and financial difficulties of the sprightly Mr. Golightly call forth as much genuine laughter today as they did when first witnessed at the old Haymarket Theatre, London, in 1846. The costumes are to be of the period of the original production and Mr. Taylor, who is directing the rehearsals, is giving the boys and girls the benefit of his familiarit with the stage business used by the late Joseph Jefferson when he played Mr. Golightly in the early eighties. An original sketch entitled Wishing, will be given as a curtain raiser.

It is hoped that a large audience will be in attendance, for the Association deserves hearty support, and certainly the performance, if it is anywhere near as good as the High school show last Christmas, will be worth seeing.

DENMAN THOMPSON HONORED.

The following extract taken from the Cheshire County (N. H.) Republican speaks volumes for the esteem in which the veteran actor, Denman Thompson, is held in his native state, and of the general rejoicing over his recovery from his recent severe illness. The following resolutions were adopted by the Cheshire delegation of representatives:

Mr. O'Neil offered resolutions of congratulations to Denman Thompson upon his recent recovery from serious illness which were adopted with enthusiasm after their author had supported them in an eloquent speech.

Mr. Barker of Newport moved to amend to include Sullivan county, and this again was carried unanimously.

The resolutions read:

"Whereas our respected neighbor, Denman Thompson, through a long and active career, as one of America's foremost actors, has, by honorable, consistent and legitmate means brought to the attention of the civilized world the true characteristics of the New Hampshire farmer and thereby the sturdy New Hampshire tiller of the soil to the attention of our country as he really is, and whereas he has never prostituted his ability to caricature nor ridicule and thereby has brought credit to himself and fame to his town, county and state and,

"Whereas our venerable friend has recently been afflicted with serious illness to such an extent that his life was despaired of,

"Resolved that we, the members of the Cheshire county delegation as representatives of the yeomanry of Cheshire county, and of the state, and voicing its sentiment, do hereby tender to Denman Thompson the congratulations of this county and state, upon his recovery and further tender to him our heartfelt and most ardent hopes for his continued good health and prosperity and a long and happy life in our midst, and,

"Resolved that the chairman and clerk of the Cheshire county delegation be instructed to spread these resolutions upon the records of the said delegation and to transmit a copy thereof to Denman Thompson."

PETITION LEGISLATURE TO LEGALIZE TOWN MEETINGS.

At last Saturday's meeting the Board of Selectmen voted to petition the Legislature for necessary legislation to legalize a town meeting held in a hall which will not accommodate the entire voting list.

As stated in the last Chronicle, State Inspector Charles E. Burtitt notified the Selectmen, through the Town Clerk, that observance of the laws regarding the attendance at town meeting in Lyceum Hall would be required. The legal limit set by the State for Lyceum Hall is 542. With more than twice that number of voters it would not be strange if any live town meeting subject brought out more than that number of voters. In such a case, to admit all would be in violation of the statutes: to execlude even one would make the meeting illegal.

Arlington and other towns are in a like situation as regards hall and have found relief in special legislation such as the Selectmen are after for Reading.

With the proposed legislation enacted, Reading town meetings may become a case of "first come, first admitted."

REAL ESTATE SALES.

George Adams Woods has sold for George H. Wood his two-family house of 18 rooms, 13-15 Elmwood avenue, and 7000 square feet of land, all assessed for $6975, to Elmer S. Davis, who buys for investment.

Through the same office, James H. Pickering has sold lot 7 on Everett avenue, consisting of 16,000 square feet with frontage of 150 feet.

George Adams Woods has sold for Mrs. Julia E. Doane her 10-room house and 17,950 square feet of land at 55 Fletcher street, to George H. Wood, who is to entirely remodel the house for immediate sale.

The same broker has agreements signed for Margaret Kimball for lot 22 on Lakeview road, containing 11,030 square feet. The new owner is to build at once an attractive house for her own occupancy.

Henry W. Savage has sold 30 Lebanon street, belonging to Anna G. Robbins, to Julia C. Wilson, for a home. There are 5931 square feet of land, and a frame dwelling of eight rooms, all taxed for $3000.

It has been the custom for some years in hundreds of towns (Winchester among the first) and many cities to elect an appropriation committee, whose duty it is to consider the necessary amount of appropriations for the expenses of their municipalities and report at meetings where appropriations are voted. This plan has proved of great advantage wherever tried, and now we notice that the United States Senate has established a like committee, whose work should be of the highest advantage to the public at large. Its field is that of curtailing appropriations for the expenses of the government so as to prevent a deficit in the treasury.

ORGAN PRELUDE. Gethsemane Malling

INVOCATION.

SOPRANO SOLO.

O, all ye who travel upon the highways, harken to me, and behold me: was e'er sorrow like unto my sorrow? For the Lord Almighty hath dealt bitterly with me. Call me now no more Naomi, from today call me Mara.

SCRIPTURES.

First Word.—Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do.

Tenor, Baritone and Chorus.

And the people clamor'd:
He is death guilty: take him, take him, let us crucify Him!
Be His blood on us and on our children!
Then they did crucify Jesus, and the two thieves: one at His right hand, the other at His left hand.

SCRIPTURES.

Second Word.—Verily, thou shalt be in Paradise today with me. Amen, so I tell thee.

Tenor and Baritone Duet and Chorus.

Hear me, O Lord, and remember me, when Thou comest into Thy Kingdom.

SCRIPTURES.

Third Word.—See, O woman! here behold thy Son beloved.

Soprano, Tenor, Baritone and Chorus.

See yon mother bow'd in anguish,
Who beside the cross doth languish,
Where on high her son is borne:
Is there mortal, who not feeleth
To behold her where she kneeleth,
So woeful, and all forlorn?

SCRIPTURES.

Fourth Word.—God, my Father, why hast Thou forsaken me?

Baritone Solo.

All those who were my friends, all have now forsaken me, and they that hate me do now prevail against me: and he whom I have cherished he hath betrayed me.

OFFERTORY, Golgotha Malling

SCRIPTURES.

Fifth Word.—I am athirst!

Tenor, Baritone and Chorus.

And the Jews then passing by Him all did rail upon Him, and wagging their heads at Him, they said unto Him:
Vah! Thou would fain destory the temple. If thou be Jesus, Son of the Father, now from the cross descend Thou, that we behold it and believe.

SCRIPTURES.

Sixth Word.—Father, into Thy hands I commend my Soul.

Tenor and Chorus.

For thou art my God and my Father: Thou art my Saviour.
Into Thy hands I commend my soul.

PRAYER.

Seventh Word.—And with a loud voice Jesus cried, exclaiming: It is finished.

Soprano, Tenor, Baritone and Chorus.

And He did bow His Head and rendered up His spirit.
And it was about the sixth hour; and the sun was darkened, and darkness covered the earth until about the ninth hour: and the veil of the temple was rent and all the earth did quake: and the rocks were rent, and all the graves opened wide.

Chorus.

Prayer.—Christ, we do all adore Thee and we do praise Thee forever: for on the holy cross hast Thou the world from sin redeemed.

DOMESTIC DENATURED ALCOHOL.

Since the internal revenue tax on denatured alcohol was reduced, many unique appliances have been perfected that depend upon this fluid as a source of heat. The cooking range has been markedly improved for this reason, and is now one of the greatly appreciated domestic equipments. The use of this type of stove makes it possible to eliminate a great deal of costly piping when one is erecting a house or apartment building. Here is an economy in the first place for the builder and may result in economy for the tenant, inasmuch as it is claimed the cost of operation for an alcohol stove is much less than any other.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

This is a season of big things at Keith's Theatre, both in the way of exceptionally strong vaudeville acts and the number of legitimate actors and actresses who are appearing in sketches. Perhaps the most notable example of this is William H. Thompson, the veteran actor who comes to Keith's next week with a sketch written for him by Sir Conan Doyle, the author of "Sherlock Holmes." This sketch is called Waterloo and in it Mr. Thompson has made one of the greatest successes of his long career. It will be seen in Boston for the first time.

There will also be another newcomer in Marie Dainton, the little English woman, who since her arrival here has been one of the biggest New York successes.

Still another feature is Wilfred Clark & Company in a sketch. Mr. Clark is is one of the very best comedians that vaudeville has ever had.

Still another attraction will be Ben Welch, the Hebrew impersonator, who also gives Italian impersonations which have won him a high place in the profession.

Others are the Four Harveys, World and Kingstonland Alcide Capitaine: Binns, Binns and Binns; Ila Grannan and a number yet to be announced.

For the first time since Keith's Theatre was opened "continuous" performance will be done away with and instead two shows will be given each day, the intention being to carry out this policy during the spring and summer.

TREMONT THEATRE.

"The Servant in the House," played by the famous original Henry Miller Associate Players at the Tremont Theatre, has set all Boston talking. "The Servant in the House" first attracted amazed attention because one of the principal characters, Manson, bears a startling resemblance in looks and demeanor to the accepted idea of Christ. But it retained its hold upon the public by the truth of its purpose, the dramatic intensity of its situations, and its vital, human story.

It is a drama of the most actable, understandable, feelable kind, appealing alike to the religious and the worldly. The fact that it pleases these opposite classes is one reason for the extraordinary popular success of the play. The cast, composed of Edith Wynne Matthison, Tyrone Power, Walter Hampden, Arthur Lewis, Mabel Moore, Ben Field and Frank Mills, presents more names of celebrated leading men and women than usually are found in any two companies. Matinees are given Wednesdays and Saturdays and seats are now on sale for Easter week. Seats for the week beginning Monday, April 19, will be placed on sale next Monday, April 12.

PARK THEATRE.

Next Monday night, April 12th, W. H. Crane begins the third and last week of his present engagement at the Park Theatre, in "Father and the Boys."

No better comedy than Mr. Ade's has been seen on the Boston stage in a long time. It simply exudes fun from every point—good, clean, wholesome American fun that keeps an audience in a gale of merriment from the going up of the first curtain until the dropping of the last. The playwright has supplied Mr. Crane with one of the very best parts he has ever had. It is the kind of role in which Mr. Crane made his best reputation, and it is sure to hold its popularity for a long time to come.

The soothing spray of Ely's Liquid Cream Balm, used in an atomizer, is an unspeakable relief to sufferers from Catarrh. Some of them describe it as a Godsend, and no wonder. The thick, foul discharge is dislodged and the patient breathes freely, perhaps for the first time in weeks. Liquid Cream Balm contains all the healing, purifying elements of the solid form, and it never fails to satisfy. Sold by all druggists for 75c., including spraying tube, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

PUT ON THE BRAKES.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The principal reason for the small attendance at town meetings is the practical monopolizing of the time by one individual. I am informed that at the meeting of last week this man took up eighty minutes of the time talking and on what? Practically on everything but the main question—Bryan, the 'Commoner," LaFolette, corporations, referendum and a great deal of other stuff of no interest whatever to the citizens who attend town meetings to promote the town's business.

Now, such a person who hinders and retards business and who keeps so many citizens away should be curbed for the benefit of the great mass of citizens who wish to attend, but who are deterred from doing so because of this abuse of time and I might add, the abuse of the patience of the citizens.

I would suggest that debate be limited to five minutes to each speaker and that an extension of time be granted only by the consent of a majority of the voters present. This would have a tendency to prevent meetings being monopolized by one man. It would also have a tendency to cause many of the stay-away's to attend to their civic duties.

MABEL, IT IS AWFUL.

GAIETY THEATRE.

Sam. A Scribner's Big Show, an organization well known to patrons of the handsome Gaiety theatre, will begin its annual visit Monday matinee, April 12. Manager Batcheller could not have chosen a more popular attraction than Scribner's Big Show.

The curtain raiser is a one-act musical comedy entitled, "Tourists in Egypt." The material is up-to-date, the comedians really humorous; the girls are pretty, full of snap, good singers and always nicely costumed.

A vaudeville olio of high-class acts, mainly of a comedy and acrobatic character, constitutes the customary middle section of the bill, the whole making an entertainment just to the liking of Gaiety patrons. The daily matinees are growing in favor particularly with ladies who enjoy a clean, lively burlesque and variety show as well as the men.

BAND OF MERCY DAY.

The American Humane Education Society, of which the late George T. Angell was the founder and life-long president, has arranged through its state organizer, A. Judson Leach, with the superintendants of schools throughout Massachusetts for the general observance of April 13 as Band of Mercy Day. This will be the fourth time in the schools of Boston, and the third in the schools throughout the state, that a special day has been set aside for humane teaching. While the immediate object is to teach kindness to animals, in harmony with the work of the M. S. P. C. A., the broad platform of the Society includes "Kindness, justice and mercy to every living creature."

Schools in all the towns and cities of Massachusetts, with 525,000 pupils, will hold special exercises on this day. This year a new pamphlet of thirty-two pages, the "Humane Manual," has been gratuitously distributed to the 15,000 teachers throughout the state.

Fishing in the Reservoirs.

We print in this issue the new rules and regulations regarding the preservation of our water supply promulgated by the State Board of Heath. In regard to fishing in the reservoirs the Board practically leaves the matter where it was before, by placing it in the hands of the Water Board. Something different was expected, but perhaps the State Board has not the authority to prevent fishing in the reservoirs. However, the citizens can be depended upon to back up the Water Board and prevent any pollution of the water supply hereafter.

THE SIDEWALKS WERE MADE TO BE USED.

The request of the School Committee published in another column will meet with the hearty approval of most of the people of Winchester. The suggestions are entirely reasonable and should be followed.

We judge that this public statement has been made because the assistance of parents and citizens is desired. The teachers in the schools have given suitable instruction to the children in their respective rooms and so far as instances of misconduct on the part of pupils going or coming from school come to their attention they will be corrected. The teachers are also careful to see that the school properties are not injured.

The school lawns are, however, not the only places where there has been thoughtless conduct not only by boys and girls but also by older persons. It is no uncommon thing to see men and women walk over church lawns, the Common and the lawn at the Town Hall. One particularly flagrant example of this may be seen at the entrance to Manchester Field. A wide, convenient and direct walk has been provided and it has been banked by shrubs. On the west side of this entrance one path has been made through the shrubbery and on the east side there are at least three. These are clearly unnecessary and inexcusable.

In view of the care taken to make the entrance of Manchester Field an attractive part of our beautiful town it seems a pity that we should not all of us exercise the little self direction and restraint required to use the walk provided for the purpose. Perhaps this general question is one in which the Winchester Improvement Association may have its influence teh. At any rate it is worth attention. Most persons would be more careful if sign boards were placed and if these were ineffectual other measures might be employed.

MISS SANBORN'S CLASSES CLOSE.

Miss Sanborn's dancing class for beginners closed on the last Wednesday in March. The children have all done remarkably well and they all did their best on this last day. Favors were used in the German and also candy, which served as favors and refreshments. The matrons for this class have been Mrs. George Fitch, Mrs. Arthur Hale, Mrs. William S. Forbes, Mrs. Arthur Lombard and Mrs. O. C. Sanborn and these ladies assisted Miss Sanborn by receiving the class and helping with the favors. Miss Sanborn received many beautiful flowers. This class will resume lesson November 3.

Miss Sanborn's Evening Class for young people held its final assembly on last Friday evening. It was voted by the majority to have a masquerade and invite a few guests. There were many amusing costumes. It was odd to see his Satanic Majesty dancing with a black robed Sister of Charity; a British officer with a Colonial Dame; a Clown and a dainty Dolly Varden. It would be hard to say who looked the best, but among the especially noted was the young man in white riding clothes, the two "Summer people," the West Point Cadet and the two or three Dolly Vardens. There were two clowns who furnished much amusement and were helped in their nonsense by a funny German. During the Portland Fancy everyone unmasked.

Carnations were used in the German, which was conducted skilfully by Master Eliot Barta—The Summer Man.

Refreshments were served and everyone had a most delightful time.

The matrons who assisted Miss Sanborn were Mrs. Marshall W. Jones and Mrs. Alfred M. Meincke.

These assemblies will be resumed in the fall commencing either the sixth or thirteenth of November, cards being sent out in due season.

The Bethany Sewing Society met Tuesday with about 40 at dinner. The day was pleasantly passed sewing and planning for the sale. A very handsome quilt was presented to the Society by Mrs. T. S. Hoyt.

PAYMENT OF LEGACIES

To the Home for Aged People.

Within the past few days, the Home for Aged People in Winchester has received the payment of two splendid legacies. The larger, five thousand dollars, was bequeathed to it by the late Mr. Caleb Chase, head of the great mercantile house of Chase & Sanborn. Mr. Chase was a relative of the family of Capt. Anthony Kelley of our town, and it was through this connection that Mr. Chase became interested in the Home. The charity being called to his attention at about the time of the making of his will, he said it appealed to him with approval, and his gift was the largest that the Home has ever received.

Mr. Chase's executors paid this legacy earlier than the law would strictly require, through a desire, as they expressed it, to carry out the spirit which they knew would actuate their testator. The thanks and the appreciation of the Home, and all its supporters, are due to the executors, as well as to the memory of the great hearted and distinguished benefactor, whose name will be preserved by many gifts in many places.

The other legacy was one thousand dollars, from the late Miss Elizabeth D. Chapin of our town, whose life was one of benefactions and kindness throughout. This legacy, also, was paid by Mr. Wallace F. Tenney, the executor, before the legal requirement would call for it, in the same benevolent spirit which induced the early payment of the larger legacy mentioned above. The same thanks and appreciation apply in this case, no less than to the former. Both rememberances were generous, both payments handsome.

The Directors of the Home have deemed it due to the public that this public acknowledgment should be made, in behalf of the institution which the Winchester people have sustained with kindly interest.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

So we are going back to a superintendent of streets and a town engineer, but so long as we try to do business under the present system, results will not be what they should be, regardless of who may fill these positions. Our last committee on the question of changing the system made absolutely no study of it and its given reasons for its conclusions were far from the true facts. Undoubtedly it reported its opinion but opinions without investigation are not worth much and this report was not.

As all grade crossing abolition commission reports have to go to the Railroad Commission finally, it certainly is not right that the engineer of that commission should be one of the crossing commissioners. Will anyone dispute that?

The present legislature gives evidence of being below the average of recent years and some of the House voters, are, to put it mildly, dangerously near the line of violation of the oath of office. This oath should be printed and framed and hung up in each chamber in plain sight.

Lawson Road should be made a public way from Main street to Highland avenue when the abutters will deposit a sufficient sum to put the easterly end of it in reasonably good condition, and not till then.

If the business men in the centre had any kick in them they would go up to the Selectmen's meeting some Monday night and say things about that street watering that would result in its being attended to. There is absolutely no excuse for this neglect. Put it up to the board.

In case we are not to have any band concerts from the Metropolitan Park Board or none in the evening we could appropriate money for some at the June town meeting. The law now permits it. Is the Winchester band alive?

While we are waiting for the grade crossing abolition and the report of committees we should in the meantime do something towards cleaning up the pond near the centre. It looks very slovenly and badly now and it would not cost much to improve its appearance greatly. People newly come or passing through the town cannot understand why this conditon is allowed to exist.

THIS FOR YOU.

There is only one way to obtain a clear Transparent and flawless Complexion: massage treatment makes the flesh flabby, the so-called beauty creams containing oiley and other greasy substances, fill up the pores of the skin, preventing them from doing their work properly, and also induce the growth of a fine, fuzzy hair on the face. If you would have a face entirely free from Pimples, Blotches, Eczema, Blackheads and kindred diseases of the skin, get the following prescription put up at any reliable Drug Store and your troubles will soon be over: Clearola one-half ounce, Ether one ounce, Alcohol seven ounces. Mix. Shake well and apply to the face night and morning allowing it to remain at least ten minutes, the longer, the quicker results you will have. In extreme cases apply four or five times daily.

The filmy powder deposits on the face may be wiped off after a reasonable time. Do not use any soap, instead wash the face with oatmeal and a little powdered orris root tied up in a cheese cloth bag, and no matter how bad your face is, or what the cause may have been, this will surely cure it. This prescription is perfectly harmless and can be used on the most delicate skin.

The pole at the foot of Stone avenue has been painted white and is now a stopping point for the electric cars.

AN UNRECORDED VOTE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In your report of the last town meeting you failed to tell of the motion made by Mr. Underwood and voted that the Light Contract be not read. It was not right to ask the voters present, 94, to do this on a subject of a 10 year contract—involving about $8700 a year and not give all the information possible to every one. I am told that there is not money enough appropriated to pay the amount of the contract: so look out for another town meeting asking for more cash. We have about 1500 voters, about 94 at the last meeting voted and 66 gave the 10 year contract to one of the monopolies of Massachusetts.

There is no such thing as a good monopoly. Two of the committee did not act, another is reported as against the contract, but was silent, another was a Selectman, acting as two men. How is this, for popular government?

I thank you for giving an account of my motion for a referendum and the ruling of the Moderator. A most unjust ruling it was. It is not for him to prevent a referendum, but the 94 voters assembled, and they should have been allowed to vote on it.

I ask your readers to see what the Boston Traveler said last Saturday the 3rd as to 10 year light contracts.

The play will be staged under the direction of William Parke, and the cast will include Theodore Friebus as Geoffrey Cliffe, George Hassell as Lord Grosville, Donald Meek as Eddie Helston, William Evarts as Dean Winston, Minnette Cleveland as Lady Tranmore, Gertrude Binley as Madame D'estrees, Mabel Colcord as Lady Farham and Beverly West as Mary Lyster.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The local union met last Friday at the home of Mrs. F. A. Newth, 15 Park avenue and continued the work of sewing for next week's sale to be held April 13, 14 and 15 in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple.

At the business session the following delegates to the county convention to be held in Westford about the middle of May, were chosen: Mesdames Hamilton, Winn, Kelley, Gage, Adams, Newth and Robie.

The plans for the anniversary meeting in May were placed in the hands of a committee consisting of Mrs. Newth, Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Gage. Two new members were added to the list. At the close of the business session refreshments were served.

Lunch will be served during the Easter sale and members are urged to plan at least one day in attendance. The proceeds are to go towards the state work, as new opportunities are coming faster than the means to make them available.

The members of the Union will sympathize with the president, Mrs. Hamilton, whose little daughter is in quarantine for scarlet fever.

A NEIGHBORING HISTORICAL SOCIETY MEETING,

The Medford Historical Society, a live and flourishing institution, has held a series of stated meetings during the present season at which interesting papers have been presented and discussed. Roswell B. Lawrence, Charles F. Gettemy, Frank Gaylord Cook and others have been among the speakers. The next speaker, April 19, will be Francis Hurtubis Jr., Esq. of Boston, whose subject will be "The First Inauguration of John Hancock." On Saturday evening last, Arthur E. Whitney of Winchester was the guest of the society and gave an interesting and somewhat amusing account of three ancient legal contentions, all occurring about 1660, between citizens of upper Medford and citizens of what is now Winchester. The first dispute was between Josiah Converse and Edward Collins as to who stole a mare and her colt which both parties claimed. The second contention was between Rev. Zachariah Symmes and Edward Collins about flowing the Symmes meadows, near the present Wedgemere station, by a mill dam situated on the Mystic river near old Mystic pumping station. The third legal complaint was against Usilla Cole for talking disrespectfully about the minister, Rev. Zachariah Symmes. According to the Medford Mercury, Mr. Whitney's subject was very interesting and well presented. Our contemporary promises a fuller abstract next week which the STAR will reprint as Winchester is much interested in local historical topics. Would it not be a good thing for Medford, Woburn and Winchester to join in one large historical society as the history of all these municipalities so runs together that one society could well represent all three! We believe the Winchester Historical Society is still alive although not very active during recent years.

Few Buried Alive.

"It might be incidentally mentioned for the relief of anxious souls," says Dr. Woods Hutchinson in the American Magazine, "that the risk of any individual passing into a trance and remaining in it long enough to be buried alive is exceedingly slight. There is no authentic instance of this having ever occurred. I took occasion to investigate this question some years ago and communicated with a number of leading undertakers, and they all unanimously denounced it as one of the myths of the times. One of them, at the time president of the National Funeral Directors' association, informed me that he had carefully investigated every instance of 'burial alive' reported in the newspapers for fifteen years past and found every one of them to be, in his own language, 'a pure fake.'"

Legs and the Alps.

In the visitors' book of one of the Swiss hotels an observing traveler has inscribed the following lines:

Some dashing young tourists, I see,
Wear trousers which end at the knee.
'Twere better by half
Just to cover the calf
At least where the calf ought to be.

Only those who have seen the scrawny legs, incased in mountain climbing costume, of some of those tourists who "do" the Alps can fully appreciate the humor of the "limerick."

Gordon's Last Chance.

By TAYLOR WHITE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Jimmie, do you speak slang?" demanded Maud Tolliver suddenly as her small brother came into the room.

"Do I walk on my feet?" demanded Jimmie in surprise. "Pipe your lay, angel face. I'll get you somehow, even if your speaks are all to the muddle. Turow it off your chest."

"It's this way," explained Maud. "You know Mr. Gordon?"

"I've seen him once or twice," admitted Jimmie, with a grin. Gordon was a regular visitor at the Tolliver home.

"Papa wants me to marry him," explained Maud. "He's so strict and proper that I hate him. I thought that if I were to talk slang and 'act up' perhaps he would leave me in peace. He hates a slangy girl. He said so last night."

Jimmie grinned appreciatively. He had no great liking for the eminently staid and correct Gordon. He hated men whose suits always looked as though it was the first time they had been worn.

His own preference was for Barry Spaulding, who occasionally offered him a cigarette and who talked to him precisely as though he was a grownup.

Gordon never seemed to see him, never laughed and joked, and Jimmie entered into the conspiracy with his whole heart after being assured that Maud would never disclose the source of her education in slang.

Before the week was out Gordon looked troubled. He was very much in love with Maud after his own fashion. There was no want of real affection, but Gordon was no gallant wooer. He had been accepted by the family, and in his quiet, patient fashion he was laying siege to Maud's heart.

He had fancied he had been making headway until she developed a trick of interlarding her speech with slang expressions.

At first he was shocked, but as Maud acquired proficiency and grew more and more slangy Gordon withdrew from his campaign. Though he loved the girl as much as ever, he assured himself that a wife who used slang was utterly impossible.

In secret Maud gloated over the fact, but bore herself demurely when her father sharply questioned her concerning her treatment of Gordon, for the latter's visits had fallen off, and, though Gordon had pleaded business as an excuse, Mr. Tolliver had an idea that there was something else that might explain the lover's sudden lack of interest.

Then fate took a hand, and so it happened that Jimmie Tolliver, crossing the avenue, slipped on the muddy paving and fell directly in front of a rapidly advancing automobile.

There was a cry of horror from the spectators, but one man sprang forward and with an easy movement grasped the boy's arm and carried him to safety.

For a moment Jimmie was too dazed to comprehend; then he slowly came to realize that Gordon, unmoved as ever, stood beside him, answering the questions of the crowd, but refusing to give his name.

"All right, old man?" he asked as he saw that Jimmie was pulling himself together. "Suppose we move on. This crowd is a little too eager."

He signaled a passing taxicab and directed the driver to go to a tailor's where Jimmie's muddied garments might be made presentable. The rush of cold air drove the last of the cobwebs from Jimmie's brain, and, gazing admiringly at Gordon, he decided that Maud was wrong in her estimate of the man. There was fire under the ice, red blood beneath the waxenly, immobile expression, and Jimmie's heart warmed to his rescuer.

"Say, Bo," he demanded suddenly, "are you still dead nuts on Maud?"

"I esteem your sister very highly," admitted Gordon.

"You're all right," declared Jimmie admiringly. "If you want to win cast your port ear over this way and make a noise like a listen."

The noise of a listener was continued long after the visit to the tailor's was concluded. Gordon's face was as expressionless as ever, but there was a twinkle in his eye.

Some evenings later Maud, coming downstairs, reached the lower hall just as Gordon was admitted by the butler. Jimmie had been cautioned under pain of losing his promised reward to say nothing of his rescue, so it was merely "that tiresome Kenneth Gordon" whom Maud greeted with perfunctory cordiality.

"I butted in to tear off a piece of talk with the boss bloomer wearer. Is he in?" asked Gordon.

"If you mean my father"— began Maud icily.

"That's the guy," interrupted Gordon. "Will you tell the delegate from the wax works to ask him to grease his heels and slide down here?"

"I will go myself," offered Maud nervously. Gordon was as coldly correct in appearance as ever, but perhaps he was drunk.

"Nix on the scamper," declared Gordon, raising a detaining hand. "Use the butler for the wireless, and we'll call out some conversation while he makes a home run."

"I must go," explained Maud. "I forgot something upstairs, and I must see about it at once."

"Tell it to wait," commanded Gordon. "I'm the head of the procession just now. Don't you bother about the water carriers."

"But"— began Maud. And Gordon interrupted again.

"Don't be a goat and butt in," he urged. "Hit the plush."

He pointed to a chair, and timidly Maud seated herself. As she had led the way into the parlor the butler had disappeared, supposing that he would not be required further. To ring for him now would only make a scandal among the servants. Perhaps her father would come down in a few minutes.

He usually spent the evening in the library when he did not go to the club, and in either event he must pass the open door. If the worst came she could call for the butler, but meanwhile perhaps she could induce Gordon to leave quietly. She took the chair indicated, sitting nervously on the edge, ready to spring up and run should occasion demand.

"It doesn't cost any more to have a whole chair," reminded Gordon as he sank into a seat between her and the door. "I want you to put me wise to some things. What's your grouch against me?"

"I have no grouch," protested Maud eagerly. "Indeed, I like you very much."

"I never saw you on the front steps waiting for me," said Gordon grimly. "Let it come out with a rush. I'm in wrong. How can I square myself?"

"There is nothing to be squared," insisted Maud. "I don't see how you can imagine such a thing."

"Naughty, naughty!" reproved Gordon, shaking his forefinger at her admonishingly. "Look here, kiddo, put me next! You don't like me, and I like you. I can't help it if I've got a frozen face. It was wished on me, and it's none of my doings. Tell me how I can loosen up so you'll have a yin for me."

"A yin?" repeated Maud uncertainly. This was a word not in Jimmie's vocabulary.

"A yin—a yearning," explained Gordon. "I want you to think that I'm the whole works, and you won't even let me be the second hand. Fix me up so I can come into the big tent and be a part of the program. I'm the 'what is it' out in the freak tent, and I don't like the job. I may not be quite your style, but I can learn. I'm the star pupil in the little red schoolhouse, and I'll always be at the head of the class if you'll be the teacher. I love to love my teacher."

Maud sprang to her feet, her eyes blazing.

"Mr. Gordon," she said coldly, "I will not prolong this interview. I do not know what is the matter. I do not want to know, but you must go, please. I cannot listen to you when you talk this way."

Gordon had sprung to his feet when Maud rose, and now he smiled down into the flushed, angry face.

"It seems," he said a little sadly, "that my latest effort is no more successful than the earlier attempts. They say that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, and yet you are not pleased."

"What do you mean?" gasped Maud in astonishment.

"You learned slang for my benefit," he reminded. "When I do the same thing you object. Of course my slang is more pronounced than your own, but then you have only Jimmie, while I have the valuable assistance of several elevator boys, my office boy and the janitor's son, who qualifies as an expert. You use slang to disgust me—with yourself. I am using it to disgust you—with slang."

"And you know?" gasped Maud. "Jimmie has told?"

"Be it said to his credit that the temptation was great," said Gordon gently. "Do not blame the lad. He meant well in giving me my last chance to win you. He saw beneath the surface and was sorry for his part. I foolishly imagined that if I could excel you in the use of slang I might startle you into an interest that I see now you never can feel. It was a foolish experiment, Miss Tolliver, and I ask your pardon for having bored and then frightened you. It was my last chance, and I hoped that it might succeed."

"I gather from Jimmie's remarks that you fear paternal pressure will be brought to bear on you. I beg to assure you that I will so contrive the situation as not to involve you. I am—sorry that—the last chance—failed."

The little pauses in his speech were Gordon's only evidences of emotion. They were only little halts in the evenness of his soft, even voice, but they showed the strength of feeling, and it touched Maud with a sudden emotion.

"Don't go," she said softly, laying a detaining hand upon his arm. "Perhaps the last chance has not—I mean"— But she could say no more. Gordon's arms were outstretched, and in his face, no longer expressionless, there was a look of such appeal that she suffered herself to be drawn within their protecting circle. The last chance had won.

A FABLE OF NIGERIA.

The Crafty Spider and the Way He Paid His Debts.

The following fable of the spider is one of the folk tales of northern Nigeria:

A spider, it seems, had occasion to borrow a sum of money. A journey round to the generously disposed brought him 2,000 cowries each from the cat, the dog, the hyena, the leopard and the lion. When pay day came round, the spider remained at home to receive the visits of his creditors in a certain prearranged order. First came the cat to claim repayment of his loan. "Hush!" said the spider. "I hear a noise outside. It is a dog come to see me. You must hide under this calabash for safety." The cat was scarcely hidden when the dog, coming in, made a similar request for his money. Says Master Spider, "There is a cat under that calabash. Take him and consider the debt paid." No sooner said than done. Just then a snuffling and scrapping were heard at the door. The third creditor, the hyena, had arrived. "Don't be alarmed, my dear dog, but hide here till he has left." And the spider bustled him under the calabash. "I smell a dog," said the hyena, routing about. "Under that calabash," the spider replied. "Eat him up, and your debt is paid." The dog paid the penalty of his simplicity, and all was quiet once more. The hyena was preparing to leave, when he heard an ominous sound that sent him crouching against the wall. It was the pattering of the leopard's feet at the door. "Quick! Under this calabash!" cries his host, and the hyena curls up in the fatal cache, only to meet a like fate from his more courageous enemy. "My debt is repaid," said the leopard, and ran against the lion coming in. A terrible fight ensued, for the leopard and the lion are equal in strength, so the natives say. When blood and dust make havoc in the house and both animals are exhausting their strength the spider is busy at the fire. Seizing a pot of boiling grease, he pours it over the clawing mass. Leopard and lion roll apart in their death agony, and the spider has only to straighten and clean up before resuming once more the humdrum life of fly catching. No wonder he is known as "Malwayo," the crafty one.

AUTOMATIC FOOTBALL.

Actions of One Player After a Kick In the Head.

"Speaking of queer things in football," said an old player, "I recall a game that was played at Annapolis some years ago between Columbia and the Naval academy teams.

"One of the men on the Columbia team, the quarterback and a very prominent player of the year, started the game in good condition, but after part of the first half he was kicked in the head in one scrimmage. It took some time to get him around, but he suddenly arose and gave a signal. The two teams lined up and play went right on.

"This man went through the game, and no one noticed that anything was wrong with him. When the game was over and the Columbia team was on the way back to New York in the train this player, who had appeared to be in a brown study, suddenly turned to the man next to him and asked, 'Who won the game—what was the score?' and a number of other questions that made it seem as if he hadn't been anywhere near the field of play.

"The players were greatly surprised and thought perhaps the kick in the head had hurt the man so that his mind was affected. Later they learned that he was unable to tell what happened from the moment he got the kick in the head until the time he recovered consciousness, so to speak, on the train.

"His playing of quarterback and his giving of signals had been entirely automatic, or, rather, subconscious. That case was referred to frequently in the psychology courses at Columbia, you may well imagine."—New York Sun.

Bismarck and Music.

Bismarck's utterances regarding music are compiled in a book by Kendell, "Furst und Furstin Bismarck, Erinnerungen aus den Jahren, 1846-1872." Kendell once saw the man of blood and iron shed tears during a performance of Beethoven's Sonata Appasionata. His favorite composers were Beethoven and Schubert. The only thing he did not like in their works was the variations. These, he said, "do not speak to the heart." Concerning the sonata just referred to he remarked: "This is like the singing and sobbing of a whole human life. If I heard this music often I should always be brave."

Ma Meant Well Anyway.

A young woman overheard an old negress call to a pickaninny, "Come back, Exy, Exy!"

"Excuse me," said the young woman, "but isn't that a queer name for a baby, aunty?"

"Dat ain't her full name," explained the old woman, with pride; "dat's jes' de pet name I call fer short. Dat chile got a mighty grand name. Her ma picked it out in a medicine book. Yessum, de chile's full name is Eczema."—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Basis.

He—I wonder if we can get along all right. She—Certainly. We can buy the auto with the money father left me, and you will surely make enough to pay for running it, don't you think?—Puck.

The more one speaks of himself the less he likes to hear another talked of. —Lavater.

THE NEW WATCHWORD.

Confidence and Co-operation Between Corporation and Customer an Ideal Quite Possible of Attainment.

According to Professor Meyer of the railroad commission of Wisconsin, one of the chief aims of a public utilities commission should be to bring about a hearty co-operation between the cities and the utilities companies which serve them, the ultimate purpose being to secure for the consumer the best service at the lowest price compatible with a fair return upon the capital invested. According to his view, the commission is not merely on the one hand to protect companies from the open attacks of demagogues and the insidious attacks of grafters and on the other to protect cities from the rapacity of corporations whose motto is "charge all the traffic will stand." It is beyond and above this to bring the two parties to a franchise agreement into a spirit of cordial and intelligent cooperation.

Agitators tell us that the interests of the corporation and of its customers are necessarily antagonistic. That is not true, and any city or corporation which acts upon that false assumption does so at its peril. Every day it is becoming clearer that a corporation that has a monopoly is no exception to the general rule that no business can afford to antagonize its customers and that good service is a better guarantee of permanence than a long contract. On the other hand, a city that demands the impossible is likely to get half hearted service and to involve itself in vexatious litigation and experiments. Professor Meyer reminds corporations and cities alike that it is time to abandon childish squabbles and puerile efforts to obtain petty advantages over each other—which can only be temporary—and to approach the solution of the great problems which confront them in a large and manly spirit, with open minds and, if necessary, open books. That this is no day dream is proved by the increasing number of cities, large and small, where mutual suspicion and hostility have given place to confidence and co-operation.

MUNICIPAL BANKRUPTCY.

Just as Staggering as In the Case of Private Enterprise.

Over in Massachusetts some of the cities at least are not worrying over their "debt limits." They are letting "the other fellow" walk the floor. Haverhill, for example, which some weeks ago had a slight spasm of municipal "reform," has now found out that after spending her income and exhausting all her available borrowing resources she cannot raise enough money to pay her regular bills for the current month. And in Brockton the public school teachers failed to get their salaries last week because the school department had exhausted its appropriation and overrun its available funds to the extent of $28,000.

These incidents move the Boston Herald to remark that "the question whether or not a city can become bankrupt seems to be answered in the affirmative. Private enterprise in such financial straits," it adds, "would be bankrupt. And the law of compensation is as inexorable as applied to cities as to individuals. The day of accounting cannot be forever postponed." Yes. And in all probability there are in both Haverhill and Brockton municipal ownership faddists by the hundred who would like to put the municipalities "into business"—into gas and electric light and ice manufacture, into printing and street traction and "municipal trading" in general—when the disquieting truth is that neither city can "run" its present business efficiently. What is needed is not municipal ownership, but private enterprise to conduct affairs municipal economically and profitably, and it may yet come to that.—New York Commercial.

The Real Taxpayer.

The taxes the poor man pays are the largest single item in his expenditure. If he pays $18 a month for rent, $2.50 to $3 of this is for taxes. Every pound of meat, suit of clothes and pair of shoes he buys costs more because of the taxes due to graft, waste or inefficiency. If the cost of running the city of Boston could be assessed directly so the people could know what the city was costing them, each family would have to pay about $170 a year. If 20 per cent of this amount is wasted or stolen, which under present conditions is probably setting it low, the graft cost for each family is about $35, as much as the average mechanic can earn by two weeks' hard work.—Boston Traveler.

Doubly In Debt.

Dowagiac is in the attitude of a man who must consider the purchase of a winter overcoat while his summer underwear is yet unpaid for. Twenty years ago Dowagiac put in its water works system. Bonds were issued, and in all these years not one cent of the waterworks bonded indebtedness has been paid for. Now the plant must be rebuilt. — Dowagiac (Mich.) News.

Those Whom It Attracts.

Socialism is of all creeds that which it is easiest to present to the ignorant, and in these days, like "patriotism" in the days of Dr. Johnson, it is often the last refuge of a scoundrel or of a desperate and ambitious fool.—W. H. Mallock.

City Employees.

Municipal ownership means the creation of an immense civil service that would vote always and solidly in service interests and hold an invulnerable "balance of power" in any and every election.—Brooklyn Standard Union.

The Devilfish In Action.

A naturalist who observed devilfishes in action says that he thought no more diabolical creature could be imagined. They resembled enormous bats and in following one another around in a circle raised the outer tip of one of the long winglike fins high out of the water in a graceful curve, the other being deeply submerged. They might be seen now gliding down with a flying motion of the wings, sweeping, gyrating upward with a twisting vertical motion marvelous in its perfect grace; now they flashed white, again black, so that one would say they were rolling over and over, turning somersaults. While swimming along the two great arms or feelers of the devilfish are whirled about in constant motion, like the tentacles of a squid. When these tentacles come in contact with anything they close upon it. It is generally believed that this clasping, although at times doing considerable harm to fishermen and their boats, is largely automatic and that, upon the whole, the devilfish is timid rather than a fighter.

The Rust of Custom.

The bitterness toward innovation is just the same in an army as out of it, but perhaps with more reason. A new thing cannot possibly be accepted until it has proved itself better than that which it displaces. The first cannons were possibly rejected, and the Christian inventor took them to the Turk, who used them at the siege of Constantinople. The first firearms were bitterly opposed because they destroyed the soldierly bearing of the troops. The British navy strenuously objected to the first large guns because one charge would cost as much as one of Nelson's broadsides. Ericsson's Monitor met with more opposition in Washington than it did in Hampton Roads. At the outbreak of the civil war it is said that congress ordered the adoption of the new weapon, over the objection of the chief of ordnance, who kept a specimen of the old one in his office to show visitors how good it was.—Army and Navy Life.

Living Lights of the Sea.

One of the marine curiosities fished from the bottom of the Indian ocean by a dredging vessel chartered by the Calcutta Society of Natural History was a mammoth sea crab, which continually emitted a bright white light, similar to that seen in the spasmodic flashes of phosphorescent luminosity kindled by the common fireflies. The oddity was captured in daytime and placed in a large tank, nothing peculiar except its immense size being noticeable in the broad glare of the tropical sun. At night, however, when all was in pitchy darkness, the crab surprised the naturalists by lighting up the tank so that all the other sea creatures, great and small, occupying the same tank could be plainly seen. When the luminous crustacean was prodded with a pole he emitted flashes of light, which enabled the experimenters to read small print, even though otherwise they were in total darkness.—London Chronicle.

He Was Guilty.

The great Irish agitator, Daniel O'Connell, was at one time defending a man accused of murder at Clonmel. The circumstantial evidence was so strong against the prisoner that the jury had already determined upon their verdict of guilty, when the man supposed to have been murdered was brought into court, alive and unhurt. The jury were desired to return their verdict at once, and they did so, but it was one of guilty.

"What!" exclaimed the astonished judge. "What does this mean? If the man has not been murdered how can the prisoner be guilty?"

"Please, your honor," said the foreman, "he's guilty. He stole my bay mare three years ago."—Omaha World-Herald.

Grote and His Wife.

The wife of the historian Grote must have been an extraordinary woman. She rode without a saddle, she was not afraid to put off in a boat without a man, and she was plucky enough to marry her lover without permission and return home without saying a word about it. Sydney Smith described this lady and her lord in his happy fashion, "I do like them both so much, for he is ladylike, and she is a perfect gentleman."

Sartorial Monstrosities.

There are men we meet every day who take such sartorial liberties as almost drive one to despair. We have to tolerate such monstrous combinations as brown boots and frock coats, silk hats and lounge suits and frock coats and bowlers, and we are even nerving ourselves to the expectation of seeing a kilted highlander in a silk "topper."—London Outfitter.

Practical.

"A young man has telegraphed me that he has just wedded my daughter."

"I hope he's a good practical man."

"I guess he is. He wired me collect."—Kansas City Independent.

Reached Too Far.

"Yes," said the bankrupt, "I lost my fortune reaching for an ideal."

"Very interesting. And what was your ideal?"

"A bigger fortune than I had."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Desirable Contributions.

Bulzer—Pennster told me that the best magazines were clamoring for his contributions. Knolorham—No wonder. He writes full page ads.—Lippincott's.

Ambition, like a torrent, ne'er looks back.—Ben Jonson.

A Story of Development.

There are over 310,000 telephones connected with the system of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company in the four northern New England States; to be exact, the figures as of Feb. 27, 1909, showed 310,440 of which 42,533 were sub-licensees.

This tremendous growth here in northern New England shows:

That this section of the country is a unit in its closely interwoven business and social interests;

That there is a necessary interdependence of city and country;

That the Telephone Company has anticipated the needs and desire of all classes of users—the large manufacturer and the small dealer—the metropolitan merchant and the country storekeeper—the office and the home;

That its foresight has been approved, that its service is efficient and that its rates are equitable; this is manifest from the mere recapitulation—310,000 telephone.

This is a business argument, not a contented retrospect. We want the business man to picture a possible customer at every telephone. We want the residence subscriber to appreciate the telephone's potential value to the home.

We will send a contract agent to explain different classes of rates and their cost, and to advise the subscriber as to the kind best adapted to his individual needs. A word to the Local Manager will suffice.

HOW PRICES CLIMB UPWARD

As an example of the growth in value during recent years of property in Winchester, take land on Sheffield Road. In 1895 it sold for 15c per foot. The other day it brought just 35c per foot.

There is an opportunity for all who have a little capital to invest to make money out of Winchester real estate. It is getting more valuable every year.

Whether you buy for speculation, or a steady, interest-paying investment, you cannot fail to profit if you make a good selection. I can help you in that.

On the market today are, a number of good lots on the West Side which will show a larger appreciation in the next few years than the example cited above.

A YEAR'S WORK.

What the Visiting Nurse Association Has Done the Past Year.

A Large Meeting Listened to Encouraging Reports.

Briefly summed up, 24,000 visits have been made by the nurses of the Visiting Nurse Association during the ten years since its organization, hundreds of mothers have been taught to some extent first aid in sickness, the necessity for cleanliness and sanitation have been explained with good results, and in many other ways scores of people have been helped to a better understanding of the laws of health and the prevention of disease. Dr. Cabot at the meeting Tuesday afternoon said that in the future the services of doctors and nurses would be less in demand than they are today, because the people would be taught how to live and this would mean a great deal less sickness. This is one of the missions of the Visiting Nurse Association through its experienced nurses—to teach people how to live.

The good done by the local Association will never be fully known. Much of the good work is seen from year to year in scores of instances, but this is only a part of what is being accomplished, the real progress will be found in the educational features which will grow and spread with corresponding beneficial results.

The tenth meeting was held in the small Town Hall Tuesday afternoon. The hall was hardly large enough to accommodate all who desired to attend. It was the largest gathering of association members we have yet seen, and perhaps next year the large hall may be necessary. Financially and also in every other way the past year has been one of success. With a balance in the treasury of $5957.34—including a gift of $1000 from the late Elizabeth D. Chapin—the association is now pretty well equipped to continue the work. The reports of the several officers were received with much pleasure as was also the brief remarks on the work of the association by the president, Mrs. Joshua Coit.

Miss Best of New York gave a most delightful and interesting talk on settlement work in New York and Dr. Richard Cabot of Boston spoke on Social Service of which he is a strong exponent.

Previous to the talk the following officers were elected:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Good nursing has always been recognized as an important factor in the cure of illness, and the frequency of operations, due to Modern Surgery, has made it necessary that the physician's skill should be supplemented by the trained nurse; and has also made it a duty to provide the same help for one's poorer neighbor.

For this purpose, district nursing was established in the large cities, and the suggestion of the need for similar work in Winchester, resulted in the organization of "The Winchester Visiting Nurse Association" on the first of February, 1899, "for the purpose of giving to the sick, and especially to those of limited means, the best home-nursing under existing circumstances, and developing its work along appropriate lines, and establishing and maintaining a hospital."

Thanks to the energy and enthusiasm which guided its beginnings and to the generous cooperation of friends and townspeople, the Association has grown year by year, in favor and helpfulness. Its success has made it a model for similar institutions, and requests are constantly received for instructions as to its organization and methods of work;—lately, its recognition as part of a world-movement has come, in an invitation to send delegates to a Congress of District Nursing, to be held in Liverpool, England, with Queen Alexandra as patron.

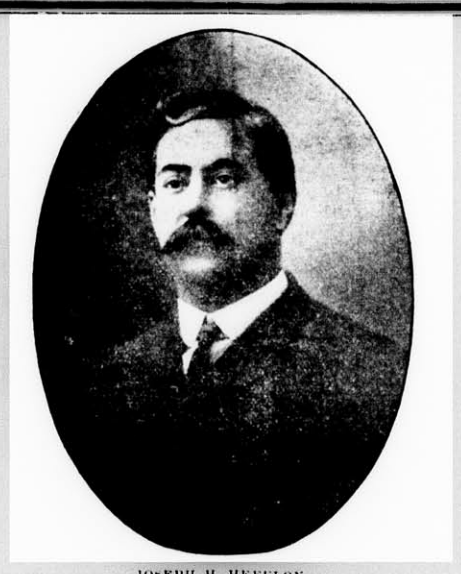

Every year the income of the Association has been more than its expenditures, and the fund set aside for an emergency or for a hospital has increased steadily—during the year a legacy from Miss Chapin has added to this a thousand dollars. The plan for a Hospital, which has been cherished by the Association, is now to be carried out by others, and the establishment of a Memorial Hospital, in the near future is assured: but with the same aims for the common good, one organization will be able to supplement the other, and make possible the best equipment of modern means for help and healing.

The expenses of the Association, for the tenth year, have been three times more than for the first—its income is obtained from membership fees, contributions from individuals and church organizations, nurse services, the sale of supplies, an allowance from the Fletcher Fund and the June Breakfast.

For six years this institution has kept its hold on the interest of the town; during that time, no other appeal has been made for money; and, year by year, on the first Saturday of June, from six o'clock in the morning until nine, 2000 people gather in the Town Hall for breakfast, served by the willing hands of two hundred more.

A paper published in behalf of the Association: Auto-

JOSEPH H. HEFFLON
New principal of the Wadleigh Grammar School.

M. ARTHUR P. BRIGGS

Resigns as Principal of the Wadleigh Grammar School.

After five years of service as Principal of the Wadleigh Grammar School, Mr. Arthur P. Briggs has tendered to the School Committee his resignation to take effect at the end of the school year. Mr. Briggs is a graduate of Brown University and before coming to Winchester was principal of the Berkeley Grammar School, Cumberland, R. I., and of the Eliot Grammar School, Natick, Mass.

His work in this town has been characterized by earnest effort to do the best possible for the pupils in his charge. With all the seventh, eighth and ninth grades in one building and with an inadequate play ground, it is to his credit that the discipline of the school has been uniformly good. It has been a matter of particular pride to Mr. Briggs to make the school rooms attractive. The plants in the building and the pictures purchased each year by the pupils are in large part due to his care. In carrying out his belief that the boys and girls while in school, should gain as broad an outlook as possible he has arranged excursions for them to historic points of interest and one year ago he and Mrs. Briggs chaperoned the High School class of 1908, most of whose members graduated under him from the Wadleigh grammar school in 1904, on their trip to Washington. Mention may also well be made of the positive moral influence exerted by him over the many hundreds of pupils who have during his principalship finished the elementary school course.

Mr. Briggs has been prominent in the Winchester Teachers' Club and is popular with his fellow workers. He has also been the efficient Superintendent of the Baptist Sunday School and an active member as well as deacon in his church. Mrs. Briggs has been closely associated with her husband in church work and is a member of the Fortnightly.

Both have many friends among teachers, parents and pupils who will regret their departure and who will be interested in their future welfare.

After careful consideration the School Committee has elected as Mr. Briggs' successor Mr. Joseph H. Heffion of Saco, Maine.

Mr. Heffion is a native of Connecticut. His college work was taken in Wesleyan University, Connecticut, and in Illinois Wesleyan University he being an alumnus of the latter institution. He has had a varied and successful experience as principal of the Grammar School in Cochituate, Massachusetts, as principal of the High School in Townsend, Massachusetts, and as Superintendent of Schools in the city of Saco, Maine. Confidential inquiries and personal investigation made under the direction of the School Committee have indicated that he is a skilled teacher, an excellent disciplinarian, an efficient administrator and a good citizen. The Board of Education in Saco have released him only at his urgent request and with expressions of their confidence in his abilities and of regret that he is to leave them. He will visit our schools in the near future and will, with his family, move to Winchester in July.

Mrs. Heffion is a graduate of Boston University and they have a daughter.

It is a matter of satisfaction to note that the School Department of Winchester and the town itself seem attractive to a man of Mr. Heffion's type.

The work of the Wadleigh Grammar School is highly important, the present teaching force is excellent, Mr. Briggs has been a conscientious principal and it is expected that his successor will fully meet the requirements of the position.

Grading stakes have been placed on the Main street end of the High school lot. It is proposed to cut down the knoll at the corner of the parkway that was left there to preserve a worn out tree when the lot was originally graded.

PEACH—HOLMAN.

Frederick Coffin Peach, son of Gen. and Mrs. B. F. Peach of Ocean street, Lynn, and Miss Dora Holman of Winchester, daughter of Walter A. Holman of the John Holman Co., Boston, were quietly married on Monday evening at quarter after seven at the home of the bride's parents on Dix street.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. William I. Lawrance, pastor of the Unitarian Church, it being of a very simple nature and witnessed only by relatives of the couple and a few intimate friends.

Mr. Charles Irving Porter of Beacon street, Brookline, was groomsman, and Miss Katharine Holman of Bangor, Me., a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor.

The reception which followed the ceremony was attended by about 250 guests, Mr. and Mrs. Peach being assisted in receiving by their parents. The ushers were Messrs. Guy Bancroft of Cambridge, Edwin F. Breed of Lynn, Edward Lawrence of Brookline, Samuel Titcomb of Augusta, Me., and Lawrence Holman of Winchester, brother of the bride.

The residence was handsomely decorated for the occasion with green, cut flowers and potted plants, the Easter colors of green and yellow predominating. Throughout the lower floor the mantles were banked with asparagus, laurel and smilax surrounding vases of daffodils, while the ceilings and chandeliers were draped with festoons of green and roses.

The bride is well known among the younger social set of Winchester and her husband is connected with the firm of Kidder, Peabody Co. of Boston. They will make their home in Lexington.

ALARM TELEPHONED FOR FIRE HALF A MILE AWAY.

On Monday morning shortly before the wind reached its height word was telephoned from the George W. Blanchard lumber yard on Main street to the central fire house that the house of Jeremiah McCarthy almost next door to the firemen was ablaze. Members of the department ran out with hand chemicals and found the roof of the house blazing fiercely. With the aid of a ladder and the chemicals it was extinguished without sounding an alarm.

It appears that employees of the Blanchard Co., nearly half a mile away, saw the roof burning and lost no time in telephoning their discovery to the firemen. The occupants of the house knew nothing of the fire until the firemen arrived. The fire burned a considerable sized hole completely through the roof, and had it been allowed much more headway might have resulted seriously. As it was the damage was slight.

FREE FROM DEBT.

For the first time in many years the Unitarian church stands free from debt. Some years ago the church building was totally consumed by fire, and in its place was erected the handsome stone edifice at the corner of Main street and the Parkway, at considerable expenditure of money. Year by year the debt has been reduced until this year but $3,000 remained. Last Sunday (Easter) this was wiped out, and this fact affords much pleasure not only to the members, but likewise to all friends the Society.

THE ARTEMIS CLUB.

In the forthcoming production of "The Faraway Princess" by Sudermann and "Moving Out" by Miss Searle, the Artemis Club will have the assistance of Mr. Henry Groff Dodge, Yale '05, Harvard Law School '09; Mr. Norman Sturgis, Harvard '10, and Mr. Erastus Badger, of Winchester.

THE LOCAL NATIONAL BANK

Has 617 Depositors. Are You One of Them?

Persons who have never had a checking account sometimes think such a thing is a complicated affair. On the contrary, it is very simple. You deposit your money in the National Bank which supplies you with a check book, and does your bookkeeping. You pay your bills by writing checks for the amounts, which are simply orders on your bank to pay the money. Any odd number of dollars or cents can be as easily written as even sums. The inconvenience and danger of making change are avoided, and there is no disputing the payment of the money, for all the checks are returned to you after payment, with the endorsement of the recipient.

WINCHESTER BOAT CLUB MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Winchester Boat Club was held at the Club house on Tuesday evening with the largest attendance in years.

The following officers were elected for the coming season: President, George B. Smith; Vice-President, Charles A. Gleason; Secretary, T. Price Wilson; Treasurer, William Adriance; Fleet Captain, Fred M. Bates; Directors, Vincent Farnsworth, Schuyler F. Herron, Robert W. Armstrong, Dexter P. Blakie, James H. Gerlach, Ralph S. Vinal, Alfred W. Lombard, Hermann D. Murphy.

During the meeting a request was made by a representitive of the non-resident members of the Club that the by-laws be amended, alowing the non-residents the privilege of voting and holding office in the Club. The matter was discused at some length, but no action taken. The non-resident membership of the Club is full, it being limited to 25.

A vote of appreciation was given to the retiring officers. Following the meeting lunch was enjoyed.

ENJOYING HOUSE PARTY.

Sixteen boys and girls of the High School are enjoying a house party at Gloucester this week during their Easter vacation. The young ladies eight in number, are the guests of Miss Esther Somes at her father's cottage, Fernwood. They are chaperoned by Mrs. Somes. The boys are the guests of Harold Farnsworth, stopping at Mr. Vincent Farnsworth's cottage, under the care of Mrs. Farnsworth. The party includes Miss Esther Somes, Miss Ruth A. Lawrence, Miss Carline Gleason, Miss Mildred Stone, Miss Emma Farnsworth, Miss Hannah Locke, Miss Dorothy Armstrong and Miss Gladys Spaulding. Among the boys are Harold Farnsworth, Courtney Gendron, Paul Tenney, Eliot Barta, James Hazeltine, Charles Marshall, George Neiley and George Proctor. The young folks left town last Saturday, returning tomorrow.

PLAYGROUNDS.

The regular April meeting of the Mother's Association will be held in the High School Assembly Hall on Wednesday, April 21, at 3 p. m.

The Fortnightly joins with the Mothers' Association in this meeting open to the public. Mr. Thomas Curley of Boston will speak on the subject of Playgrounds, and their possibilities, both summer and winter. He will tell of very successful experiments in other towns.

The usual social hour will follow, entertainment to be furnished by a joint committee of The Fortnightly and The Mothers' Association.

The Librarians and the Treasurer will receive books and new members.

The Assembly Hall should be well filled, regardless of weather.

NEW BUSINESS BLOCK ON MAIN STREET.

Work was commenced this week by Frank L. Ferguson of Jamaica, L. I., formerly of this town, for the erection of a new block upon the vacant land on Main street adjoining the Middlesex County bank.

The building is to be of brick, one story in height, and will have five stores, it fronting on Main street and Converse place.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY HOLD SMOKE TALK.

The members of the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Church to the number of two hundred, enjoyed a social evening at Waterfield Hall last Wednesday. Howard Cosgrove and Fred Donovan in piano solos; Daniel J. Daley, John S. O'Leary and Master Willie Coty, in vocal selections; Richard J. Lynch and Harry Donovan in violin solos; Charles J. Harrold in readings, contributed to the pleasure of the gathering. The feature of the evening was a lecture on: "Columbus, His life and time," by Mr. John A. Bishop of Arlington.

Rev. D. J. Kelcher, Ph. D., and Rev. W. J. Roche were present among the invited guests.

The Committee on entertainment reports a second smoke talk to be held at a near future date.

MRS. AARON C. BELL.

Mrs. Claire Josephine Bell, wife of Mr. Aaron C. Bell of Forest street, died at her home last Friday afternoon of pneumonia. She was 65 years of age. For several days previous to her death she had been critically ill, although hopes of her recovery were entertained by the family up to the last.

Mrs. Bell was born in Hudson, N. H., Aug. 12, 1844, being the fourth of a family of six children. Her parents were Olivia and Hiram Marsh whose memory is highly esteemed in that place. During her long residence in Winchester, Mrs. Bell endeared herself to all who came in contact with her and her death is deeply mourned throughout the town.

She leaves her husband and two children—Mrs. John Park and Mr. Clyde W. Bell; also two sisters, Mrs. Moses Richardson and Mrs. Whitford, matron of the Home for Aged People, both residents of this town, and a brother, Mr. Walter Marsh of Cambridge, well known here.

The funeral services were held at three o'clock on Easter Sabbath at her home on Forest street. The services were conducted by Rev. C. A. S. Dwight of the Second Congregational Church, assisted by the Rev. H. E. Hodge of the First Baptist Church, of which she had been a faithful member for thirty-five years. Mr. Hodge gave a very warm, eloquent and truthful tribute to the life and character of Mrs. Bell. The floral offerings were magnificent, expressing the great love and esteem in which she was held by everyone who knew her. As she lay in her lovely grey casket, her face was serenely beautiful and left a blessing in death as it always bestowed on one in life.

At the conclusion of the services, which were largely attended, the remains were taken to Wildwood and interred.

"Sweet be Thy sleep where soft winds play,
And wild birds trill their sweetest lay,
Through all the livelong summer's day."

"Dear loved One."

Voted, to write the County Commissioners and ask them to extend the time limit for building Cross street to September 1, 1909, as the putting in of water pipes would probably delay the work.

Adjourned at 9.45 p. m.

GEORGE H. LOCHMAN, Clerk.

A GOOD REPORT.

The State Gas & Electric Light Commissioners stated last week that the candle power of the gas furnished by the Arlington Gas Light Company is 21.6 or over 30 per cent. above the legal requirement. Thus the standard of purity is more than fulfilled. This announcement will be received with gratification by all users of gas in this town. It means bright light and an overflowing measure of heat units for the gas stoves, of which there are a great many in Winchester. This is more satisfactory than cheap gas at a low price. During the summer season, there is nothing quite as satisfactory for cooking purposes as the gas range. No doubt the Company would be pleased to assist all those who desire to install a gas range.

THE SIX FIRE ALARMS.

With a wedding, a pop concert and six alarms of fire, all on the same evening, Winchester was a fairly lively town Monday. Accounts of the first two affairs will be found elsewhere and the story of the six fire alarms is as follows:

The first alarm, from Box 44 on Main street opposite Canal, was for a pile of burning sleepers beside the railroad tracks near the Swanton street bridge over the Woburn loop. No damage.

Following the all-out signal for this fire came an alarm from Box 37 on Harvard street. No sooner had this alarm sounded the four sounds than a second alarm came in from the same box. This fire was in a chimney in Thomas Jones' house. No damage. Just why or how the second alarm was sounded is not known.

The apparatus had just returned to the centre from the fire when after several erratic blows, Box 23, located in the centre, sounded. This was followed by Box 21, also in the centre. By this time most of the inhabitants who were not in attendance at the festivities were on the streets and all pa hs led to the centre. Neither of the boxes sounded had been touched and the firemen could not find any fire. While the excitement was at its height Box 41 at the corner Lake and Main streets sounded. Hose 3 was left in the centre while the rest of the apparatus was rushed to the new danger point. At this time it was feared that a serious fire was in progress which could not be located on account of some disarrangement of the alarm. Box 41 was found, however, to be shut and locked and showed no signs of having been tampered with. The apparatus returned to the centre and the excitement subsided, no further alarms coming in.

Later in the evening the police found two alarm boxes at the corner of Pond and Cambridge, and Wildwood and Cambridge streets had been broken into both the outside and inside doors being smashed. This exposed the tapper which is used to sound the all out signal and the culprit had rung in the different boxes by this means in perfect safety.

The firemen and horses were given considerable exercise answering the different boxes, and made quick time for every alarm.

A YEAR'S WORK.

mobile Service, and the sale of cake and candy add to the interest and the income.

Before the close of the first year, the necessity for more than one nurse, was apparent, and since that time, two regular nurses have been employed, supplemented by special nurses, sent to homes for a day or a week, as may be necessary: the Association has also hired a room in a private house for patients, and paid expenses at the Rutland Sanatorium.

The room in Waterfield Building has proved most useful for various needs of the Association, and the Directors wish that it would commend itself to all who are interested in the work: here, on Tuesdays and Fridays may be found two of the Board, with material prepared, ready to be made into bandages, sponges and dressings.

The Tuberculosis Class has held several meetings, and the three patients cared for, are reported as doing well.

At present, there are no patients for class-treatment—those in charge of the Association are cared for by the nurses in their homes. The patients sent to Rutland have made good recoveries: all but one, who is in a Southern Sanitorium: and it is worth noting, in this connection, that for three years, a daily supply of eggs has been furnished a patient, by an individual of the town.

Besides the comfort and help brought into the lives of the needy, there is an added value in the education of people to think and act for themselves. This is illustrated in the case of a family, visited by the nurses for a surgical operation, at three different times. The first time there was absolutely nothing for use, and necessary utensils were borrowed from a neighbor: the second time, hot water and various articles were supplied; while the third time, the provision was as complete as was possible in a private house.

The Association feels that it is indebted for much of its success to the two nurses, Miss Stevens and Miss Billings, who have served one for seven and one for eight years. With devotion to their work, they extend their friendly sympathy throughout the household, and they have been able to discover and supply many a need which would have been undone, but for them.

The beginning of a new year brings a call for contributions and membership fees: but, mindful of the helps that has maintained it in the past, the Association is sure nothing will be lacking for another year of successful service.

ANNA B. GILMAN,
Secretary.

REPORT OF FINANCE COMMITTEE.

The year closes with a good financial showing. The proceeds of the Annual June Breakfast including the gift of $100 by a gentleman of the town were $959.35—the largest sum ever realized from this event.

Two hundred and four (204) people paid the membership fee of $3.00.

Subscribers numbering one hundred and twenty-two (122) have given in sums large and small, $181.10.

The offering from the Union Thanksgiving Service added $11.32 to our treasury and a gift from The Holy Name Society of the Catholic Church $10.00.

Miss Elizabeth D. Chapin, whose life was so largely spent in ministering to the poor and suffering, bequeathed $1000 to The Winchester Visiting Nurse Association as one avenue through which her work may still go on.

For special nursing in private houses only $10.00 has been expended. $24.00 more paid for board and care of one patient, and for substitute nurses, $194.00.

One patient was sent to Rutland at an expense of $112.55.

Respectfully submitted,
DELIA R. HALL,
Chairman of Finance Committee.

REPORT OF THE SUPPLY COMMITTEE.

The tenth annual report of the Supply Committee varies little from those which have preceded it. The kinds of work done are much the same from year to year: the amount of work and the aid received seem always to increase a little, as more and more people are helped by the Association, and as its needs are better known in the community.

During the past year, as in previous ones, your committee has been able to meet all demands made upon it by the nurses, and to keep always on hand a surplus of supplies.

Since April, 1908, we have purchased 1400 yards of hospital gauze: 200 rolls of lint: 18 rolls of absorbent cotton: 2 pieces of outing flannel and 6 dozen sheets of wadding, which by the hands of many ready workers have been prepared for the nurses' use.

The total number of supplies made during the year is as follows: 249 dozen small pads: 9 large pads: 142 dozen sponges: 194 bandages: 17 night-gowns: 26 towels: 13 small cotton bags.

Of this total, 128 dozen small and 6 large pads were made by the following organizations: the Western Missionary Society of the First Congregational Church: Woman's Benevolent Society, First Baptist: Ladies' Friendly, Unitarian: and St. Mary's Benevolent Society, Catholic.

The Mission Union, First Congregational, made 34 dozen sponges, 26 towels, 1 night gown. Sixteen night-gowns were the work of the Bethany Society, Second Congregational, and the Ladies' Aid Society, Methodist. Mrs. Frank White made 144 bandages.

The remaining 121 dozen small and 3 large pads: 108 dozen sponges: 50 bandages and 13 bags have been made by members of the Board at the Association's room in Waterfield Building, or at their homes.

To the Woman's Guild, Church of the Epiphany, we are indebted for 5 dozen infants' shirts, garments much needed. The Western Missionary Society has made its annual gift of 18 slips. Parcels from Mrs. George F. Parker, at intervals through the year, contained 31 dainty garments for babies. A sewing circle of Catholic ladies has contributed 18 articles of infant's clothing. From the "N. K." Society came a gift of 4 flannel gowns and 20 towels. The Mission Union added 18 towels to our stock. Seven pairs of wool half hose from Mrs. Brackett, and 2 cotton slips from a group of young girls of the First Baptist Church, complete this list, making the total number of new articles received during the year 176.

Of partly worn articles, we have received 327 pieces of wearing apparel, including 33 pairs of children's shoes and rubbers: 3 sheets: 15 pillow slips: 26 towels: 16 bundles of old cotton and linen.

Miscellaneous gifts comprise 18 packages of medicines and foods: 10 sick room appliances: 1 cabinet: 1 bureau: 3

ANCIENT DISPUTES.

Medford People of Two Hundred and More Years Ago Went to Court Over Horse Trades, etc.

At a meeting of the Medford Historical society, held Saturday evening, Arthur E. Whitney, of Winchester, gave an interesting account of three ancient legal disputes between citizens of upper Medford and citizens of the territory now called Winchester. The first contest was between Edward Collins, of Medford, and Josiah Converse who then owned the "corne mill" and farm now know as the Whitney mill in Winchester. Collins claimed that a mare and colt "detayned" from him by Converse belonged to Collins and not to Converse. In the first trial of the case, in which most of the witnesses were Medford men the verdict was for Collins but Converse promptly obtained a re hearing and a second jury decided for Converse, most of the witnesses being for Converse. The evidence from the court records regarding clipping the mare, branding her, looking into her mouth to determine her age and the fact that she would not stay at the Collins farm was all told in graphic Colonial language and indicated that a "horse trade" or dispute about horses was as interesting in 1670 as at the present time.

Another interesting legal dispute was that of Rev Zachariah Symmes (ancestor of the Winchester and Medford Symmes family in complaint against Edward Collins and Thomas Broughton, of Medford, "in case of a nuisance done his meadow lying at or near to Mystick ponds by stopping the flow of water course by a mill damme." The Collins mill dam was located near the old Mystic pumping station, Medford, and the Symmes meadows were situated below the parkway bridge near Wedgemere station, Winchester. Symmes claimed he could not "main ain his cattle in winter and part of the summer" on account of the flowage of his meadows. The jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff, Symmes, giving him damages of "Forty and One Shillings," and costs of court, "Three pounds, thirteen shilings and eight pence." Even in the "good old times," justice was an expensive article when it was sought for in law, the cost of court amounting to much more than the damages in this case. This record is dated June 16, 1675. The speaker remarked that this must have been a fair verdict as one of his ancestors, Johnathan Whitney, of Watertown, was a member of the jury.

The third legal trouble which Mr. Whitney called attention to was on account of a "presentment" in court against Usilla Cole, wife of John Cole, of Charlestown, who owned a farm in what is now Winchester, as many Charlestown people did at that time, 1663. After a long trial and examination of many witnesses it was proved that she had not shown proper respect to the minister, Rev. Zachariah Symmes, nor paid as much attention to the ordinances of religion as the times required. She was fined five pounds and cost of court, to be paid by her husband, or to be publicly whipped. The amount of the fine was considerable for those times, and it is not recorded if her husband paid it or allowed his wife to be whipped. It is plain, however, from the evidence in the case that the sum of her offending was principally this: it was proved beyond a doubt, that she had said she "had as leif hear an old cat mew as to hear the Rev. Zachariah Symmes preach." In the old days, talking about the minister could not be indulged in as it can now.

Mr. Whitney was listened to with close attention and was greeted with hearty applause at the finish. A vote of thanks for the paper and for a few historical records given the society by the speaker was unanimously passed. —[From Medford Mercury, April 9.]

There was a time when the man who bought a suit of ready-made clothes had the creases removed before he donned his new attire. The creases were supposed to be a certain mark of ready-made clothing which custom-made clothes did not show. Now, it is very proper and a mark of careful dressing to have one's clothing well creased. An electric device has been patented that will put in the creases while you wait—with the clothes on. Electrically heated plates that squeeze together by means of levers are fastened either side of the properly located slack portion and the creases are installed at once.

A YEAR'S WORK.

chairs; 3 lamps; 1 bed. A few remnants of flannel and cotton have been given to us and these have been taken by the nurses to thrifty mothers, glad to make garments for their children. This may suggest to friends of the Association a use for "juices" that usually find their way into bags and boxes and often do not find a way out.

A few glasses of jelley have added to the comfort that our nurses carry to the sick, and more supplies of this sort would be very welcome.

Paper napkins have been among our supplies the past year, being used by our tubercular patients in place of sputum cups, as more sanitary.

The amount of supplies sold is always small—244 yards of gauze; 31 rolls of lint and 38 dozen dressings being the total for the past year.

The Association room in Waterfield Building has proved to be all that was anticipated in point of comfort and convenience. It has been open on Thursday and Friday mornings throughout the year for the work of the various committees, and an occasional visitor has found her way there to make some inquiry about the work.

We believe that all parcels left at the room, with names of the donors attached, have been gratefully acknowleged and we feel equally grateful for the many anonymous gifts.

We desire to thank heartily all friends for the interest shown in the Association's work the past year, and to bespeak for it an ever-increasing interest and support in the years to come.

Respectfully submitted,
ANNIE A. PAGE, Chairman.

THE POP CONCERT.

The pop concert for the benefit of the hospital aid, which has now become looked upon as an annual event in the social events of Winchester, was held Monday evening in the town hall. The largest attendance in the history of the concerts graced the occasion, there being 86 tables, all seating from four to eight persons, and a large number occupying the balconies.

The decorations in the hall were by far the handsomest ever seen in the building, the place being transformed into a beautiful arbor, alive with green vines and plants and blossoms. With the exception of a large number of palms the decorations were entirely of tissue and crepe paper. No daintier color scheme than the pink, green and white selected could have been employed. From balcony to balcony, forming a latticed roof were stretched streamers of white, to which were hung garlands of roses, green, and easter lilies. At intervals hanging through the latticed roof were large urns of multi colored flowers. The windows were attractively curtained in white, while the stage, heaped with palms, was banked its entire width with roses, lilies and green to a height of some two feet. The walls and pillars were most attractively draped with crepe paper and twined with pink roses. To the average attendant at the hall the place was transformed into a place of beauty undreamed of. The decorations were designed and arranged by Mrs. F. S. White of Somerville.

The music for the evening was given by the Salem Cadet band, Jean Missud, leader, and a varied and interesting program of ten selections was given with numerous encores. An attractive menu of flowered design was in keeping with the spirit of the evening, and ices and liquids were enjoyed with the music.

The committee in charge was as follows: Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn, Mrs. Frank A. Cutting, Mrs. George H. Root, Mrs. William E. Beggs, Miss M. Alice Mason and Percy W. Witherell.

The committee desires to thank all persons who assisted by contributions and services to the success of the evening.

Following the concert the floor was cleared and dancing enjoyed until a late hour.

The young ladies who assisted at the tables were Misses Joan Newell, Hazel Corey, Pauline Blank, Barbara Blank, Isabel Hunt, Katherine Edgett, Pearle Longley, Ruth Carpenter, Dorothea Chase, Evangeline McPhie, Lina Mayo, Dorothy Ayer, Eleanor Platt, Ruth Pettingill, Annette Symmes, Ruth Dunning, Marion Cole, Ruth Lawrence, Elizabeth Winn, Marguerite Waldmyer, Marjorie Root, June Root, Nancy Brigham, Sadie Felber, Ruth Roberts, Dorothy Furbish, Grace Hatch and Beatrice Tuck.

The following young men also assisted: Theodore Main, Walter Badger, Edmund Cottle, Kenneth Grant, Theodore Hurd, August Guilford and Earnest Evans.

The serving was under the direction of Mr. George H. Root.

The original object of the pop concert was to raise funds for the establishment of a Winchester hospital. As this has been done through the generosity of Mrs. Harrington, the funds raised by the ladies of the pop concert committee will probably be used for the equipping and maintaining of a free room in the hospital.

OVERDRIVING.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

A Woburn paper says that "Fred, the big bay horse that for some years has done more than his share of work on the hook and ladder truck of the local fire department is about all in."

Now, Mr. Editor, as I witnessed the horses from the hose house on Swanton street being driven at a dead gallop from the house to the box at the corner of Cambridge and Church streets, a distance of two miles and other long distances, I wonder how long it will be before those horses are "all in." Quick time is necessary but not record time, as it appears to be the aim of the driver not only of this part of the fire department but the others. Take a little more time Messrs. Drivers, and be merciful unto your horses.

MAZEPPA.

An added electric invention is a self-dumping oyster cooker, which by the simple pressing of a button drops the cooked oysters into the proper receptacle.

A REMARKABLE MAN.

Mr. Francis Chisholm, who resides at the corner of Highland avenue and Forest street, is believed to be the oldest man in town. He is 90 years of age, and for a great many years has lived in the same house that he is now passing the autumn of life after long years of toil.

Quite a few years ago Mr. Chisholm retired from active business and his time since then has been devoted to caring for his place and doing farming on a moderate scale. Today, despite his advanced age he is practically as sound as a nut, so to speak, takes much interest in the every day affairs of life and is determined not to rust out. Last week Friday, for instance, he went over to his wood lot at the rear of his house and passed a portion of the day in sawing and splitting wood a task that many men half his age could not do without suffering great fatigue. This is only one of the many in the lists of chores that he daily performs about his extensive estate. Mr Chisholm has always been a hard worker. We remember that twenty-seven years ago he took the first train for Boston at the Highlands shortly after six o'clock in the morning, and returned to his home in the evening at about seven o'clock. For a great many years this was his custom and he never missed a day because of sickness.

Unknown to the greater part of the people of the Winchester of today, Mr. Chisholm years ago was well known and took a deep interest in town affairs and was a constant attendant at town meetings. Mr. Chisholm comes from sturdy Scottish ancestry and promises to enjoy life for many years to come.

SUNDAY ICE CREAM.

The following bill which has been unanimously agreed to by the Committee on Legal Affairs, promises to be enacted by both branches of the Legislature:

Section 1. The licensing board or officer in any city or town, and if there is no such board, the mayor and aldermen of a city, or the mayor and city council, in case there are no aldermen, and the selectmen of towns, may grant licenses to reputable persons who on secular days are retail dealers of ice cream, confectionery, soda water and fruit, to keep open their place of business on the Lord's day for the sale of ice cream, confectionery, soda water and fruit.

Section 2. . . . . The licenses shall take effect on the first day of May in each year, but may be granted prior to that time, and they shall expire on the thirtieth day of April of each year. The fee shall not be more than five dollars a year, and the license may be suspended or revoked at any time by the officer or board granting the same.

Section 4. Whoever on the Lord's day keeps open his place of business for the sale of the above described articles, without such license, shall be punished by a fine of not more than fifty dollars.

Section 6 This act shall take effect in the city of Boston upon its passage. In all other cities, it shall take effect upon its acceptance by the city council, and in towns it shall take effect upon its acceptance by the voters of the town at an annual town meeting. For the purpose of submitting this act to cities other than the city of Boston, and to towns, it shall take effect upon its passage.

BOY THROWN FROM WHEEL AND BADLY INJURED.

Last Sunday afternoon about three o'clock a boy riding a wheel along Cambridge street received a bad fall when going down hill in front of the Sheridan place near the Country Club. Owing to the bicycle breaking the lad was thrown heavily to the macadam road. He was discovered lying in the road unconscious by a passing automobile, the occupants of which carried him into the Sheridan house. Dr. Maynard was summoned and it was decided to have him removed to the hospital, the ambulance being called. Upon its arrival he revived somewhat and it was found that he was Harry Taylor, son of Sidney Taylor of Harvard street, recently moved here from Cambridge. The boy was removed to his home. He was unconscious for about an hour and a half, and had several bad cuts about the face and head besides loosing a number of teeth. A bad cut over his temple was probably the chief cause of his continued unconscious state. Later reports are that he is recovering nicely and will suffer no bad effects from the accident.

Two hundred eggs cooking at the same time make an unusual sight, especially if they are being boiled in electrically heated receptacles. An automatic egg boiler is now in use on the ocean steamships, "Lusitania" and "Mauretania," which allows the eggs to remain in the water a definite time, which is regulated in half minutes up to six.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

A generous contribution of the work of the local members, was sent to the sale at Tremont Temple Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, besides a cash donation towards the state work in the interest of which the fair was held.

The Easter box was given to the sick in Winchester this year, according to the vote at the last meeting. The Flower Mission work is now in the hands of Mrs. A. A. Rowe who has returned from her extended visit in California and Nebraska.

The members of the Union are reminded that the annual fees are now due, and Miss E. E. Elliott, the treasurer will be glad to receive them without further notice as the National, State and County dues must be paid promptly

So many sections of the country went dry at the April elections that great alarm is shown by the organs of the liquor dealers who realize that "new occasions teach new duties" and they must reorganize their plan of campaign if they wish to maintain their sorely battered prestige. The editorials in some of their papers read remarkably like those in the organs of unpopular reforms or the advocates of protection of infant industries like steel and oil. They plead for fair play and cite the great disadvantages under which they labor, in fact, play the baby act. All of which is distinctly encouraging to the temperance workers.

The present Legislature instead of expediting its business is said to be falling behind, being considerably behind its none too rapid record of last year. The session is expected to finish up some time in July. Too much legislation is not beneficial to the State.

Congressman McCall has introduced a resolution requesting the President to open negotiations with the various nations, looking to an agreement for the neutralization of the Philippine islands, and for the recognition of their independence whenever it is granted by the United states.

THE FISHING QUESTION.

The fishing in the reservoirs question is left by the State Board of Health about where it has been all the time, in the hands of our local Water and Sewer Board elected by the town. Probably the State Board considerd the matter a purely local question and Winchester should settle it for herself. As the matter stands, there will probably be no present contention against the well known opinion of the Water Board that fishing should not be allowed even to the most restricted degree. In the mean time the fish cultivated or maintained by restricted fishing ever since the water works were establishied will no doubt increase so that there will be good fishing for poachers at present and also good sport for coming generations or whenever the town wishes to allow fishing in the future, for the town still controls the matter under the state board decision. The majority of citizens certainly do not want to antagonize our present Water Board and they will go without fishing rather than instruct them again to allow fishing at the cost of so much feeling as has been displayed in carrying out the last fishing vote of the town. Peacefulness in administering town affairs is worth more than fishing pleasures, and no doubt the town will now enjoy peace from the fishing question for a time. This is a conclusion reached by the STAR after talking over the situation with a few leading town fishermen.

As a graceful thing to do, the Water Board might allow a little fishing on Saturdays during the summer vacation in the middle reservoir, and such action would probably be approved of by a majority of our citizens, but it is not probable it will be done this season at least. The town will stand by its Water Board whatever it does regarding fishing.

Our new spring box papers have arrived. Wilson the Stationer.

W. H. S. PLAYS.

Two plays will be given by the Athletic Association of the High school in the town hall this evening.

The dress and last rehearsal of the plays took place Wednesday evening and everything went off satisfactorily. There were no serious hitches, everyone was letter perfect and in their old fashioned costumes, in Lend Me Five Shillings, both boys and girls handled themselves as tho' to the manner born.

There was considerable tendency to speak indistinctly, to rattle off sentences with too much speed and to jumble syllables and words together in a most careless and slouchy manner. This fault is general with young people who cannot seem to appreciate the beauties of clear and careful enunciation and though it was more noticeable among the boys, Wednesday evening, than among the girls, there were several of the latter decided offenders in this respect.

Otherwise the performance is first rate. The lines are funny, the business quick and snappy and the situations laughable. Everyone who wants to see a good farce should attend the performance this evening for it is well worth seeing.

The casts will be as follows:

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The Woman's Guild will hold its regular meeting next Tuesday afternoon, April 20th, at 2.45. The meeting will be at Mrs. Suter's, 113 Church street, and is in charge of the Charities Committee. Miss Best who spoke at the annual meeting of the Visiting Nurse Association will be present to tell stories of her experiences on the East Side. It is intended that this should be especially social meeting and every woman of the parish whether member of the guild or not, is cordially invited to attend.

The Guild of the Epiphany is to hold sale from 2 to 5 on Wednesday afternoon, April 21, at Mrs. Anthony Kelley's, 45 Fletcher street, and invites the interest and patronge of the people of the parish generally.

The Choir Guild will hold its regular meeting Wednesday evening, April 21st.

Next Thursday, April 22, is the date assigned for the spring meeting of the Sunday School Union of this district. The meeting is to be held in Grace Church, Medford, and the presence of every Sunday School teacher and, officer of our parish is earnestly desired.

The annual convention of the diocese will be held in Trinity Church, Wednesday, April 28. Delegates from this parish are: E. B. Page, Leland H. Stetson and Hales W. Suter.

The Treasurer asks that pledge envelopes be carefully sealed before being placed in the alms basin. These envelopes are small and unless sealed, the amounts enclosed are likely to fall out.

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES.

Easter was a day long to be remembered for its excellent music and impressive baptisms. In the morning a chorus of twenty voices, under the inspiring leadership of Albert Edmund Brown, rendered most excellently the beautiful cantata, "The Resurrection" by Manney. The soloists were Mrs. Arthur T. Downer and Mr. Brown. Following the cantata were the baptisms, taking the place of the sermon. Seventeen were baptized in the morning and eight in the evening. The grouping of the baptisms according to families was an impressive feature of the day. The church was crowded at both services. This was the largest number of baptisms for any one day in the history of the church—57 years. The total accessions to date from the recent meetings are over fifty, raising the membership of the church over three hundred. Others are awaiting baptism next Sunday.

During the past nine years one hundred and twenty-five have been baptized.

On Tuesday evening a Roll Call-Reception will be given to the new members.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES.

Easter Sabbath was a great day at the Methodist Church, both morning and evening. Unusually large congregations greeted the pastor, and in the evening the children's Easter concert was especially bright and entertaining.

The sermon in the morning by the pastor, Rev. John R. Chaffee, was an inspiration to those who heard it. Spiritual food is what the people want, and they certainly receive it from the pastor's sermons.

Last Sunday's attendance at the Men's Bible Class broke all previous records. All men who want to know the truth, are cordially invited to attend. Time is twelve o'clock. It closes just as promptly, at one o'clock. Place, is in the auditorium. The annual election of officers of the Epworth League took place last evening. The result will be noticed next week.

PRICE OF GAS REDUCED.

Following the report of the State Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners that the Arlington Gas Light Co's gas was 50 per cent above the required standard, comes the announcement made today by the company that it has reduced the price of gas to $1.25 net.

RINDGE TAKES OPENER.

Rindge Manual Training School defeated Winchester on Manchester Field, Thursday afternoon by the score of 9 to 8. With the score 9 to 4 against the home team at the last part of the ninth inning they started a great rally. Barbaro and Collins reached first on 2 errors and then on Sharon's hit to short, an attempt was made to get Barbaro at third, but failed, filling the bases. Le Duc hit for two bases along the 3rd base line scoring Barbaro and Collins. Hurd flied to first base and then Thompson drove the ball between left and centre field for three bases. This hit scored Le Duc and Sharon. The next two men went out in order leaving Thompson on 3rd with the score 9 to 8.

This game didn't discourage the team any because Rindge has one of the strongest teams in the suburbs of Boston. Good support will help it out greatly.

WINCHESTER 10, TECH '11, 5.

Winchester defeated Tech '11 Saturday by the score of 10 to 5 in an easy game. The weather was too cold for good base ball and many errors resulted from it. Winchester opened the game by scoring 3 runs in the first inning, and gradually added to their number throughout. Thompson did some good batting, getting a home run and a single. Small also got a three base hit which rolled to the band stand.

The team has got going now and a successful season is looked forward to. George Le Duc has consented to coach the team.

V. N. A. MEETING.

At the meeting of the Visiting Nurse Association Tuesday afternoon in the Town Hall (an extended report of which can be found elsewhere), Mrs. Coit after a few words of welcome, and appreciation of the interest shown for the work of the Association, introduced Miss Best of New York.

The speaker has a most interesting personality and the stories of her experiences in settlement work were unusual and fascinating. They illustrated the keen wit and quick perceptions of those whose home is in the slums, and the eagerness with which they watch out for opportunities for larger life—Miss Best is directress of a literary circle, which includes working girls from fourteen to eighteen and Darwin seems to be their favorite author.

Dr. Richard Cabot then gave an instructive and suggestive address on Social Service, which he called Applied Christianity.

He said that the private doctor and the private nurse would soon be abolished, and that the change in the spirit of hospital work and its management was so great that public service was beginning to be a guarantee of reliable services; that the new field covered by Social service was preventative, educational and social.

He emphasized the responsibility of the public schools for the health of the pupils and said that this had been recognized by the appointment of school nurses who followed pupils into their homes finding out conditions, and helping families to a knowledge of hygiene and proper methods of living.

Tea was served immediately after the adjournment of the meeting.

"Do you gain your living by your intellect? Then do not allow your arms and legs to grow stiff. Do you earn your bread by your pickaxe? Do not forget to cultivate your mind and to enlarge your thought." In either case you will want a home and a system for saving money. A new series of shares will be issued May 3. Subscriptions may be made any Wednesday or Saturday evening or by mail.

OBSERVATIONS.

It's a poor excuse for staying away from a town meeting, because some citizens talk too much. The thing to do is to regulate the talking. Make a rule that when the previous question is moved not more than so much time may be taken in giving reasons why it should not prevail at that particular time, speakers should be limited to so many minutes each. Cut the speaking time on each motion down, to be extended only on vote of the meeting. Hold speakers to the question. Any meeting can control its own action, but of course it should be fair to all. Wake up. Don't sulk.

The motion was, "that the report of the committee be not read." There was no motion to have the contract form read. The price for the street lighting is $7200 not $8700. The contract had not been made at the time of the town meeting, of course. A few hundred dollars more may be needed to settle up back bills, but not for this year's lighting. The policy of Massachusetts is monopoly in public service with regulation. The motion for postponement of action to a future town meeting to have the vote taken by ballot was probably in order, but one meeting cannot bind another. The town meeting where discussion goes on is better than anything else.

Our share of the county tax for this year will be a thousand dollars more than last year's. Next will come the state tax and the Metropolitan Park and Sewer taxes, which should not be any higher, but you never can tell.

The Railroad Commissioners are making their annual inspection of the properties under their control. If they were obliged to make a detailed report of their trip it would be more valuable. The trouble with this commission is that it does not live up to the laws and never has. Laws concerning life and limb should not be dead letter laws.

With water, carts, horses, Selectmen, Superintendent, permanent firemen and police, why is it that the dust right in the centre is able continually to steal a march on them all?

The legislature will enact the bill authorizing the sale of fruit, ice cream, etc. upon Sunday, but unless its present form is changed, towns cannot come under it till next year, because it provides that its acceptance must be voted at the annual town meeting before it becomes operative.

The laws should permit the election of playground boards as the park boards do not seem to fill the bill. I trust the high schoolhouse meeting next week on playgrounds may result in some common sense action in the use of Manchester Field. We have been asleep on this matter and the W. I. A. dead, and it is too bad. Citizens who spend the open season out of town, naturally do not take the interest in such things as those who cannot be away. Our Park board has great hopes but they appear to be for the dim future.

The "inside" of the eighty cent gas bills is the sliding scale bill which the companies are trying to get. But no Boston paper would mention it. Our representative voted against both this bill's reconsideration and that of the bottle liquor bill. He was in queer company.

MASS. COLLEGE BILL.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I want to ask everyone in town to write our Senator Crosby of Arlington, and Frank E. Barnard, our representative, to work for and vote for House bill No. 787, giving our people a Mass. College, where every high school boy and girl can get a college education at a very small cost and live at home.

Every man and woman in town should see last Sunday's Boston Herald which gives a fine account of this proposed college.

I will gladly give any information I can to any one on the subject.

To my mind this is the most important bill before the Legislature, to benefit all the people, and everyone can help to get it. WHITEFIELD TUCK.

WEST POINT APPOINTMENT.

The announcement of the recent examination of the candidates for West Point held under the direction of Hon. Samuel W. McCall was made public this week.

Mr. McCall's appointment to the academy is Mr. James F. Brown of Belmont, who was the foremost candidate in the examinations.

Mr. John F. Neiley of Winchester is the first alternate, and Mr. Earle E. Clough of Somerville the second alternate.

Scientific scalp treatment will cure baldness, dandruff, stop falling hair and induce a new growth. Mrs. Annie M. Phillips will treat you at your home or at 11 Pleasant street.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Frederick Thompson's notable scenic melodrama "Via Wireless," which opened at the Boston Theatre for an extended engagement last Monday evening, exhibited two examples of novel and effective stage mechanism which were in all respects the most impressive ever displayed in connection with any play seen in Boston. The first of the two great scenes is laid in the forging room of the Durant Steel Works at Pittsburg, where a huge gun is lifted from the furnace and plunged into the oil bath in full sight of the audience. The other great scene depicts a hurricane at sea with a huge liner tossing on the waves, bent on rescuing a wrecked yacht, from which has been sent by wireless telegraphy an appeal for help.

The play is provided with a story of love and villainy but its action is of a quiet and subdued order and is wholly devoid of the sensational "thrillers" which generally pervade the melodrama of the present day stage. Mr. Thompson has provided the play with a thoroughly competent enacting company, with many local favorites. The production in its entirety is an impressive illustration of the advance in stage realism. Regular matinees are on Wednesdays and Saturdays. There will be a special matinee on Monday (Patriots' Day.)

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

With the opening performances of "A Runaway Girl" on Monday, the Castle Square will again ring with the merriment and the tunefulness of musical comedy. Among its best known solos and choruses are "The Boy Guessed Right," "Soldiers in the Park," and "Follow the Man from Cook's." "A Runaway Girl" is one of the best of the many musical comedies that have come to us from across the water from the London birthplace of the musical comedy, the Gaiety Theatre.

Chorus, orchestra, scenic display, costumes, dialogue, music, and last but not least, the actors, will all contribute towards the success of "A Runaway Girl," at the Castle Square.

The cast will be made up of the entire John Craig Stock Company, with several notable additions, including Miss Le Baron.

Mr. Craig will appear as Guy Stanley, and Mary Young as Winnifred Grey, and in the other important roles will be seen William Evarts as Lord Coodle, Donale Meek as Flippper, Theodore Friebus as Pietro Pascara, Bert Young as Hon. Bobby Barclay, George Hassell as Brother Tamarind, Al Roberts as Signor Paloni, Doane Gardiner as Mr. Creel, Gertrude Sinley as Alice, Esther Evens as Dorothy Stanley, and Mabel Colcord as Lady Coodle.

Readings were given at the church of the Epiphany Wednesday by Miss Sarah Fuller, a writer, who read her own stories. It was given by the Children's Epiphany Circle under the guardianship of Miss Lucy Jenkins. The receipts are to be used to install a ventilator near the organ.

MONEY NOW COUNTED ELECTRICALLY.

Even the men who can add four columns of figures simultaneously have been unable to keep pace with the enormous increase of banking business. The adding machine, at first operated by hand, now by the electric motor, was introduced, then came the question of counting money. Every sort of device was tried until an electric coin counter was finally invented.

This little machine will sort and count coins at the rate of 72,000 pieces an hour, which is seventy times faster than the most expert cashier in the world can count and sort manually.

The coins are dropped into a basket like receptacle at the rear of the machinery and from this they are distributed over the surface of a tray which is filled with regular indentations or mortises that can be adjusted to the size of the coins the operator desires to pick out and count. For instance, if twenty five cent pieces are to be selected the little mortises are adjusted to that size and as the coins slides across the surface of the tray the quarters will drop into places. The operater can then touch another lever and the coins will be stacked in little paper tubes ready for convenient handling.

GAIETY THEATRE.

The newest of burlesque companies—Andy Lewis and his Mardi Gras Beauties—will come to the Gaiety Theatre, playing an engagement of only one week with daily matinees beginning April 19.

Everything is new—scenery, accessories, costumes and electric light effects. In the singing line the company approaches in effectiveness a light opera company, for in addition to a chorus of two dozen girls with good voices there are twelve men whose singing aids in making the musical numbers a highly attractive feature. "Whirl-I-Fun" is the name of a one act review and travesty in which Maud Elliott, a sprightly and dainty comedienne; May Bryant, Virginia Roydon and Georgie Cummings have leading parts. Mr. Lewis is assisted in the fun making by Joseph Emerson, Edward Brown and William Doyle. "The Pooloolah in Ireland" is the title of a second satire. In the olio will be seen the Alrona-Zoeller Trio in a comedy acrobatic act; Groves and Doyle, in a clever comedy and dancing number; Andy Lewis with Maud Elliott and Company in "Won at the Wire"; Harvey and Cummings in a neat turn; Joe Emerson in a monologue and the Gaie Sisters in a dancing specialty.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Those who have laughed over "From Zaza to Uncle Tom," which has been played over 800 times by William H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols, will welcome something new from this pair of favorites. It is called "A School of Acting," and is built something after the style of the old favorite, but is even more funny and enables Miss Nichols to appear in her great character, the stage soubrette.

This will be the headline feature at Keith's Theatre during the week of April 19th. Other big features will be Marie Dainton, "A Night With The Poets" and Gus Williams.

"A Night With the Poets," is one of the very best musical productions that has been seen. Also on the bill is that old time favorite, Gus Williams, the original of the German comedians and who is to-day brighter and more up-to-date than ever. Also on the bill will be Clifford and Burke in a black face specialty; Wormwood's Animals; Josephine Davis; the Yomamoto Brothers; Alba and others.

The bright mind grasps the opportunity. Now is the time to buy Winchester real estate. Geo. Adams Woods will advise you rightly as to values and locations.

To the casual observer Miss Kilroy did not seem exactly fitted for an investigator of sociological problems. The government had probably been prompted by some wise head when it appointed women to that branch of work.

Formerly when men, important in uniforms and brass buttons, or men in plain clothes, augmented by much pomposity, had made the rounds of the foreign settlements such dignity had frightened or embarrassed the women and children to such an extent that it was an impossibility to obtain freely spoken opinions as to what they liked in America, what they did not like, what they expected Uncle Sam to do for them or what they themselves could offer as a just reason for Uncle Sam doing anything at all for them.

Nobody, however, could possibly take fright at pretty Miss Kilroy, who, dressed in the nobbiest white shirt waist suit, a rather gay ribbon on her hat, knocked at the humblest door of the humblest tenements and generally found a welcome.

Grantley, in charge of the temporary quarters provided while the investigation was being carried on in this city, looked up as she entered the office in the afternoon, tired, but jubilant.

"Seems to me I have secured enough information today to make a complete report upon the sociological problem in America," she said, throwing her notes upon her desk.

"Good work," he answered, wondering why she ever undertook such a job. "It's strange that the youngest, most—er"—

"Oh, don't mind me! Go on and say it—the doll baby of the force, the woman who is so pink faced and blond haired that one wouldn't suspect her of having an idea concealed about her, had"—

"No, by George, I didn't mean that! I hesitated because I didn't know that it was exactly proper for me to finish my sentence. I was going to say, since I must refute your impression, the 'most attractive, dainty girl, who looks like a piece of high art'—I don't see how it is that she beats the others all hollow when it comes to turning in the results from a day's labor. Would you mind telling me about your methods of procedure, Miss Kilroy?" Grantley was clearly interested in knowing how she did it.

Miss Kilroy laughed somewhat shamefacedly. "I'm afraid I'm not really businesslike," she admitted, "but I proceed upon an instinctive knowledge of human nature. Today I went to interview a great big Irishwoman. When she came to the door and saw me, notebook in hand, she positively glared. There certainly wasn't a glimmer of hospitality in her face. 'What would the likes av ye be afther wantin?' she demanded.

"When I reeled off my set of questions her indignation increased. 'How long have I bin in America an' what av the wurrik I have done? Faith, an' I think it impudence for a yellow haired chit of a gurrel who lividently spends her time dressing up an' wearing blue ribbons on her hat to come an' call an honest woman from her wurrik to ask questions about her private family. Ye might as well be afther taking yesilf off. Bridget Maguire don't answer no fool questions.'

"I believe, Mr. Grantley, that if she hadn't been so scathing about my blue hatband I would have walked off and abandoned the interview, but that hatband and the 'yellow haired chit of a gurrel' had to be avenged.

"I leaned against her door dejectedly, tried to turn pale and said: 'You mustn't think I want to do it, for I so hate to be rude, but I have to do it for my living. I'm so tired and so warm'—leaning against the door with an attitude indicating an early approach of tears—'and if I don't find out things for them they will dismiss me and I'll have nothing to live on.'

"Mrs. Maguire's bark was fiercer than her bite. Her face changed, she took hold of my arm gently and led me into her one room. 'Ye poor little craythure,' she said, 'I'll make ye a cup of tay right off, an' you'll soon be better.'"

Miss Kilroy waved her notes gayly. "I felt somewhat hypocritical, but I have fitted her into the proper place in the sociological report."

Her chief smiled approval. "It takes a woman to beat all," he said. "Don't you ever meet with more serious annoyances?"

The girl blushed. "Sometimes the men stare at me a little more than I like. There is a party of Syrians in Jing's court. One of them is a fine specimen. He was dressed in beaded jackets and—er—things and had a red sash and a red fez or something fantastic on his raven locks. He would inspire an artist to paint a 'Son of the Desert' or a 'Type From the Orient.' I have had several interviews with him because he speaks less fractured English than the others, and yesterday he insisted upon presenting me with a string of red glass beads. He—well, he was slightly effusive and called me a maid of the dawn whose hair was kissed by the rising sun. I decided that I wouldn't interview him any more. He seemed inclined to be impulsive."

Grantley chuckled. "Good thing you have closed the episode. The next chapter might have disclosed the oriental son of a gun desert bearing away upon a flying steed the maid of the dawn, who struggled and protested that she preferred Americans and their customs. Might have caused international complications by abducting you. Even as it is, he may spot your window ledge and twang a guitar or a zither, or whatever it is that Syrians do twang. He may cause you to lose a whole night's sleep."

Miss Kilroy commenced transcribing her notes tranquilly. "He's relegated to the past," she declared airily. "His song is sung."

The elevator boy stuck his head through the doorway. "There are two queer looking females, fixed up in some kind of foreign trappings, that want to see Miss Kilroy," he announced.

"Show them in, Tommy—that is, if you don't mind, Mr. Grantley." She looked at him inquiringly.

"Not at all. I will step into the adjoining room if they will be embarrassed, or I'll listen to your style in interviewing," he said teasingly.

Miss Kilroy smiled when her visitors entered in the very evident throes of formality. "Oh, it's you, is it, Zulieka, and your pretty daughter."

The old woman smiled and nodded until her ear pendants jingled. "We come see maiden like dawn," she announced genially.

Miss Kilroy remembered the origin of the compliment and had the grace to blush. "Did you come to tell me some more about your beautiful country?" she asked graciously.

The woman shook her head. "Come to tell-a you of my son," she beamed.

"Has he succeeded in getting a position?" interestedly.

"No, not on the work we come, is it, Hareede?" She appealed to her daughter delightedly.

The girl's black eyes glowed with importance. "We—we women—it is always so," she explained ingratiatingly, "it is for us to tell the fair one that she is beloved"—

"An' you marry my son—yes?" broke in the mother eagerly.

Miss Kilroy sank back in her chair weakly. "Of all things"—she gasped.

"You like-a my son?" urged Zulieka, leaning over and patting caressingly the limp hand of the object of her son's affection.

Miss Kilroy looked dazed. "I—I can't marry your son," she announced feebly.

"But my son—my son! He like-a you, he marry you. The way you smile make him happy. I ask you to marry my son!" her gestures expressing a fervent solicitude that exceeded her vocabulary.

"But I don't want to marry your son. I—hate your son!" declared Miss Kilroy desperately.

The eyes of the two matrimonial agents flashed and their voices rose angrily. Miss Kilroy put her blond head upon the desk and sobbed. Grantley considered this an auspicious moment for interference. He rose and spoke blandly to the mother, who stood parting with indignation at the slight to her offspring.

"It is perhaps best for me to explain the situation, madam," and he bowed low in a manner which he hoped would impress them with an idea that he had learned his manners in foreign court circles. "It is not that Miss Kilroy scorns your son; it is that"— He hedged for time to invent something soothingly plausible. "It is only that you have come too late. Miss Kilroy is already betrothed," he added gravely, "and therefore expresses regret that she cannot consider your son."

The blond head of the sociological investigator was raised abruptly from the desk. Zulieka, however, repeated uncomprehendingly "Betrothed?"

Grantly said slowly, "Betrothed—affianced—to be wed—espousa," he added desperately.

The mother and sister of the rejected looked at each other with a flash of understanding. "Ah-h!" they breathed.

"To me—to me." Grantley tapped his breast convincingly.

The woman's face was again wreathed in smiles. "I tell-a my son. I tell-a him that the beautiful maid not strong to cook—to wash. He marry Syrian now. May the rising sun forever kiss your hair, mees, and may your children be as many as the pomegranite seed," she said to Grantley with growing cordiality.

When the door closed behind them Grantley stood with his feet apart and his hands in his pockets, according to the method of meditating man.

"By Jove!" he said finally.

A slight sniff was Miss Kilroy's only contribution toward relieving the awkwardness of the situation.

"We're engaged," he announced cheerfully.

"You're a brute!" she answered chokingly.

"I must say your interviews are conducted upon rather original lines," he teased.

Miss Kilroy's shoulders were shrugged resentfully. "I'll never interview another foreigner so long as I live," she declared.

"Certainly you must give that up—when we are married," he suggested, a twinkle in his eye.

She showed for an instant a pair of indignant, tearful eyes. "We are not engaged," she declared stormily, and her head went back to cover of the desk.

Grantley leaned over her gently. "I wish—we were," he suggested softly.

A sudden tense quietness settled on the bowed figure.

"I have wished for a long time—that we were," he repeated insistently.

He stooped down until he could whisper, "Aren't we, dear?" and the blond head nodded acquiescence.

The Man's Way.

"Is your husband suffering from the toothache?"

"Well," answered the woman with a tired expression, "he says he's suffering, but from the way he's bragging about it I'm half suspicious that he's enjoying it."

M. O. WAVE RECEDES.

The Country Is Learning Its Lesson. Why Experiment Extravagantly and Disastrously?

The entrance upon a new year finds public sentiment in a more subdued and thoughtful state on the matter of municipal ownership and operation of utilities. The country experienced a sort of wave on this subject, but the wave is receding. It has been something of a fad, and fads have to possess some pretty good staying qualities if they are not swept away.

The failure of Cleveland to make a success of a street car system managed by the city is a case in point that has excited much comment and much serious reflection. And the more the people of that city reflect the less liable they seem to be to make another effort in that direction.

But this one city serves to illustrate a general principle applicable everywhere. It is a truth that municipal operation of all such utilities is expensive to the taxpayer. It is a truth that all business, whether conducted by the city or by a private corporation, must be conducted with the same regard for economy, the same regard for making the investment self sustaining and profitable.

And it is true, whether it ought to be or not, that those who manage a municipal enterprise do not exercise the care in this regard shown in private enterprise. The tendency is directly to extravagance and waste and toward doing things on a lavish scale. This is so notoriously true in enterprises undertaken by the government that the utmost watching is necessary to prevent the treasury from being raided and wasted.

When it comes to the municipality precisely the same danger is found. The idea is inbred apparently that whenever the public undertakes anything money is not to be spared. Wages and salaries are more thought of than the cost of the investment and the need of making a business showing. Men do not plan or think or work for the public with the same idea of conserving the interests of the proprietor that they do in a private enterprise.

These fundamental difficulties confront every municipally owned enterprise in the country. And the feeling is now gaining ground that the city that undertakes any scheme for itself must make a showing alongside of any private concern that may offer to render the same service. There is no sentiment any longer in the case. It is a matter of business strictly. The public have no pride longer in the thought that they own and operate any utility if the tax they pay to maintain it is more than would be the expense of private operation.

And all these considerations operate to force the municipal plant of whatever name to make a showing which in the nature of things it is most difficult for it to make; hence the receding of the municipal ownership wave. It gives away to perfectly natural and inevitable conditions.—Kankakee (Ills.) Republican.

MORE WORKERS, LESS WORK.

The London Water Board Has Too Many Employees and a Big Deficit Besides.

At a recent meeting of the metropolitan water board of London, reported in the London Morning Post, it was stated that the anticipated deficit for the current financial year would be nearly $400,000. One of the members, Mr. Musgrave, gave some figures which are very interesting in this connection. He stated that five years ago, when the water was being supplied by several private companies, their employees numbered only 581. Now, in spite of the consolidation under the municipal authorities, their employees number 792. In other words, it takes 37 per cent more municipal employees to do the same work that was done by the private employees, for there has been almost no increase in the amount of water supplied. In fact, the larger number of employees under the board are actually accomplishing less, because the board pays the Bank of England more than $60,000 a year to handle some financial matters which under private management were taken care of by the companies' employees.

A Return to Contract Labor.

The Leeds corporation at its meeting on Dec. 2, 1908, decided to abolish the works department which was set up in 1906 and wherever practicable to revert to the course of letting by contract the work of the corporation. The mover of the resolution said that his experience was that work done by direct labor was not carefully thought out in every detail before it was commenced and that it had led in every case to much unnecessary expenditure. It was an interference with private trading and was a Socialist measure and to abolish it would be in the best interests of the ratepayers and citizens generally, the traders and the better class of workers.—Yorkshire Post.

Had to Sell.

Mishawaka, Ind., installed an electric light and water plant in 1890 at a cost of $60,000. It was forced to sell the electric plant, presumably because it could not meet payments on it, though definite information cannot be obtained from the city officials. The city rents and operates the plant, but since 1904 has purchased most of its current.

Auditing Alters Appearances.

Most of the "successful" municipal lighting plants in the United States are so merely by helpful methods of bookkeeping. Impartial auditing generally tells a vastly different story.—New York Commercial.

IT WAS A FINE COD.

A Little Story of William M. Chase, the Portrait Painter.

Several years ago I had a studio at Hammersmith and was hurrying into London one morning to transact some business. Just as I swung around a corner occupied by a fishmonger's market my eye was attracted to a magnificent cod steak laid out for exhibition on a clean slab of white marble. Whatever my mood for color was that morning that fish completely fitted and filled it. I must paint it, I decided.

I called out the proprietor and told him what I wanted. I was a bachelor, I explained, and did not want to buy the big fish. I only wished the use of it as a model. Could I rent it?

"Ow, now, sir," he said, with true British stolidity, "I'll never rents my fish. You see, it's Saturday, too, sir. Hi must sell him today, sir."

However, I explained that I needed the fish for only a few hours, and directly we struck a bargain. If after two hours I still wished to keep the fish I should buy it. At the end of the stipulated time the boy came. I was not quite finished. "In a few minutes," I said, and when I looked up he was gone.

Shortly afterward the proprietor came, tiptoeing in and peeping over my shoulder. I could hear him softly sighing, and I said nervously, "In a few minutes now, in a few minutes."

"Don't 'urry, sir; don't 'urry," he urged. "She's gettin' on! Hi'll take my chances, sir!"

When the painting was finished he refused at first to accept any remuneration, but at length, with a muttered apology, he charged—a shilling! The painting was hung and shortly afterward purchased by the Corcoran Art gallery for a very substantial sum.

On my next trip to London I determined to call up my fishmonger, tell him of the good fortune that had attended the painting and tender him some fitting reward. To my great surprise he not only refused again any sort of fee, but evinced no surprise whatever at the figure the painting had brought, though the price paid represented several times over the investment of his shop.

"Ah, but it was a fine cod, sir!" he said, and his eyes glowed with pride. "Now, wasn't it?"—William M. Chase in Dollheister.

ORIENTAL RUGS.

Made to Resemble the Antiques by Chemical Washings.

The United States buys annually many thousand dollars' worth of what are known to the profession as washed rugs. Brightly colored oriental rugs sometimes are washed with a solution of chloride of lime, a treatment which partly bleaches the colors and imparts a soft appearance to the rug.

This chemical treatment is a process of washing which produces the effect of age and a peculiar sheen to the surface, which is pointed out by the unscrupulous dealer as a proof of superior quality. The fact is that the process of washing as described invariably weakens and in some instances destroys the materials of the rug.

The progressive effect of the chemicals on the materials in the rug is this: The chlorine gas contained in the chloride of lime attracts oxygen and moisture from the air, by which muriatic acid is formed. This eats away the vitals of the rug. Sooner or later the wool and cotton in the rug become brittle and thus weaken the warp and deteriorate the wool.

When this deterioration is complete the pile of the rug may be swept away by the ordinary process of sweeping, and the warp, which is the foundation of the rug, becomes so weak that holes appear here and there, and soon the rug is worthless.

It not seldom happens that a Persian rug is too staring in some bright hue, perhaps red, and is not salable. The unscrupulous dealer will subject the rug to a series of washings in chemically prepared water. In this way he turns out a rug possessing a soft antique sheen that is truly captivating and finds a ready purchaser at an advanced price.—Chicago Tribune.

Partners In Debts.

"My tooth is just killing me," she complained.

"Why don't you go to the dentist about it?" asked he.

"Because," said she, "I owe him money."

"You and I seem to be in hard luck," said he. "Now, look at me. Every time I go out in my automobile it breaks down right in front of some store where I owe a lot of money."—New York Press.

Honeyed Words.

"How are you getting along at home? The last time I called your wife was giving you the dickens."

"Quite true. I had been a bad boy. But she relaxed. Last night she came very near calling me honey."

"You don't mean it! How was that?"

"She called me old beeswax."—New York Press.

No Hurry.

"Of course, Tommy," said the Sunday school teacher, "you'd like to be an angel, wouldn't you?"

"Well—er—yes'm," replied Tommy, "but I'd like to wait till I can be a full grown angel with gray whiskers."—Philadelphia Press.

Didn't Agree With Him.

"You should never take anything that doesn't agree with you," the physician told him.

"If I'd always followed that rule, Maria," he remarked to his wife, "where would you be?"—London Express.

Large Users and Small Users

A WELL DEVELOPED telephone system is the consensus of many desires, not the narrow reflection of the wishes of some individual or group of individuals.

In planning such a service it is necessary to have many different classes of rates, so that it may be placed within the means of everyone. Each subscriber to the service, be he large user or small user, adds strength and value to the whole.

To realize this interdependence—to emphasize the value of a service connecting all classes of users—and to offer its product (telephone service) in lots suited to the needs of all classes—this has been the effort of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

That its forecast of possibilities has been verified, that its campaign of education has been effective, and that its distribution of classes of service to meet varied requirements has been approved, needs no argument other than the repetition of this conclusive fact—310,000 telephones connected to its system.

If you are not represented among the 310,000 telephones now connected with the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company's system, let us show you how a telephone would be helpful.

If you don't need one your wife may. Count the steps it will save, the comfort it will bring, the emergency service it will render, and you will say a residence telephone at our rates is an economical investment.

REAL ESTATE IN WINCHESTER AN ACCUMULATIVE INVESTMENT

The population of Winchester in 1912 will be—well it will be much greater than it is now.

An investment in real estate here made at the present time has an accumulative value. It will enhance in proportion to the growth of Winchester and every indication points to a rapid increase in population here during the next few years.

Fortunes in realty are made by getting in on a rising tide and now is your opportunity. Don't wait until spring opens and prices go up. Buy now. I want to show you some special bargain just at this time.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY.

Unitarian Church will Observe Important Event.

Prosperous and Enters on New Year Free from Debt.

The Winchester Unitarian Society will celebrate the Tenth Anniversary of the Dedication of its present Church, and of the Installation of its present pastor, Rev. William I. Lawrance, on next Sunday and the following Tuesday. On Sunday morning Mr. Lawrance will preach on "Ten Years in the New Church." The Sunday School Service will also be of a memorial character, and will be read by Miss Alice F. Symmes, so long and so efficiently connected with the school. Mr. Lawrance will speak on the relation of the school to the history of the church.

Before 1855, the Unitarians of Winchester attended church in Woburn and

UNITARIAN CHURCH.

Medford. In that year, a Sunday School was organized, with Mr. Edwin A. Wadleigh as superintendent. The sessions were held in Livingstone Hall, in the home of Mrs. Mary Sharon, and in the Mystic Schoolhouse, and occasional evening services were held in this schoolhouse, with preaching by some representative Unitarian clergymen. But in 1858 both Sunday School and evening services were discontinued, partly because of difficulty in getting a suitable place of meeting, and partly because the Unitarians of the town were not yet willing to sever their connection with the churches in other towns which they were then attending. The seed had been planted, however, and the real start for a church, when it was made, found the field ready for the harvest.

It was on the 19th of November, 1865, that the Rev. Samuel R. Calthrop, L.H.D., now in the forty-first year of his ministry at Syracuse, N. Y., came to visit his friends, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Winsor, and preached, in their parlor, to a company of invited guests. So pleased were all with this service that Dr. Calthrop was engaged to preach again the following Sunday. Three days later, Nov. 29, 1865, a group of gentlemen gathered at Dr. Winsor's house and organized the Winchester Unitarian Society. The Winsor home then stood at the corner of Main and Pleasant streets, where the Brown-Stanton block now is.

The subsequent history of the church has been marked by a steady growth, the result of hard work, willing sacrifices, and wise leadership. Men and women whose names are unknown to many of our people today, gave of their time, means and service with unstinted generosity. Those still living who remember those early days of struggle tell of acts and even lives of devotion such as is to be found only in the history of struggling movements, and is rarely observed in these days of multitudinous interests. And none are more hearty than these in their joy over the fullness of the Church's present prosperity. "When I saw one after another of our workers drop out, through death or advancing age," said one of these early workers a few days ago, "I wondered what we should do. But for every one we lost, two seemed always ready to step in and take his place."

The Church was particulary fortunate in its first minister, the Reverend Richard Metcalf, who for fifteen years, from 1866 to 1881, not only was a wise and efficient pastor, but who lived a life of so uplifting power in the community that its influence is easily tracable to this day. After such a ministry, the Winchester Unitarian Church could not be other than a recognized power for righteousness in the town.

Mr. Metcalf died in office. He was succeeded by the Rev. Theodore C. Williams, who, in a little less than a year, was called to succeed Dr. Bellows in the large work he had built up in New York City. The Rev. John L. Marsh was the next minister, serving from 1884 to 1888. The Rev. Herbert H. Mott was called in 1889 and resigned, to accept a call to Providence, in 1892. In the same year the Rev. Arthur W. Littlefield became pastor, remaining until 1898, thus holding the position longer than any of his predecessors, since Mr. Metcalf. The Rev. William I. Lawrance was settled on April 27, 1899, his installation taking place concurrently with the dedication of the new church. It is the tenth anniversary of this double event that is now being celebrated.

Between three and four years after the Society was formed, the first house of worship was erected. It stood on Main street, opposite what is now known as Fairview Terrace. This church was dedicated March 17, 1870. Twenty-seven years later, on November 16, 1897, this structure was burned to the ground. This event seemed to many an irreparable calamity, but proved to be in some ways a great blessing. The other churches of the town immediately placed their auditoriums at the disposal of the Unitarians, thus showing that any antagonisms that had been were now extinct, and that a genuinely Christian spirit of brotherhood prevailed. On the Sunday following the fire, the congregation united with that of the Congregational church, and the Rev. Mr. Newton preached a discourse whose breadth and warmth are greatfully remembered to this day.

The Unitarian Society at once engaged the small Town Hall and continued services. Committees were formed and steps taken to build a new house of worship. The result was soon apparrent, and the new stone structure rose on the corner of Main street and the Mystic Valley Parkway. Many regard the building of this structure as the beginning of a new architectural era in the town. It was unquestionably the beginning of a new era in the history of the church.

When the congregation entered their new church home, they assumed a debt of ten thousand dollars, which the Building Committee had incurred in what has proved to be a wise forecasting of the increasing needs of the Society. After about three years they began reducing this debt, paying it at the average rate of a thousand dollars a year. Except for a generous legacy of five hundred dollars, by Mrs. Julia R. Holbrook, these annual reductions have been made through the generosity of members of the congregation, the Lend-a-Hand Club, and the Ladies' Friendly Society. During the last twelve months, in view of the approaching anniversary, a special effort has been made, and the final amount due, four thousand dollars, has been raised. This happy circumstance adds much to the rejoicing among the people of the Society at this time. With their House of Worship all their own, with a growing constituency, and with perfect harmony among themselves, the Winchester Unitarian Society enters upon a new period of history, with renewed hope and deepened purposes.

THE HIGH SCHOOL PLAYS.

The entertainment for the benefit of W. H. S. Athletic Association, at the Town Hall, April sixteenth, proved one of the entertainments that entertain, and the audience of proud parents, sisters, cousins and aunts — besides "others"—evinced their pleasure by frequent laughter and applause.

The clever original sketch—"The Wishing God," by Mr. Sylvester Taylor, was written as a curtain raiser for the occasion, and it gave opportunity to a veritable "rosebud garden of girls," and a few youths

The scene was laid at an English fair and the stage setting for this was unusually effective and pretty. The hero, and likewise victim, of the occasion, admirably played by Ernest Evans—was Sir George Bentick, who, after buying innumerable useful and ornamental articles offered for sale by charming girls, rashly took up a Chinese image, "The Wishing God," endowed with miraculous power to grant to a man, one wish in a thousand years. Sir George, in a moment of exasperation at the telephone, inadvertently threw all the girls into a state of deaf-and-dumbness, by wishing that all women might become mutes! Amusing complications arose, which were finally adjusted satisfactorily.

The cast was as follows:

THE WISHING GOD.

| | |
|---|---|
| Lady Mathilda Chetwynd | Majory Root, '10 |
| Miss Agatha Brownlow | Dorothea Chase, '09 |
| Cynthia | Nancy Brigham, '11 |
| Molly | Ruth Carpenter, '11 |
| Polly | Marjory Waldmyer, '11 |
| Kitty | Sadie Felber, '11 |
| Jennie | Annette Symmes, '11 |
| Mattie | Dorothy Ayer, '09 |
| Susie | Joan Newell, '09 |
| Sir George Bentick | Ernest Evans, '11 |
| Maguire, a janitor | Robert Leland, '11 |
| 'arry, a messenger | Walter Badger, '10 |

Then followed a farce, in one act, the well known "Lend me Five Shillings," which was preceded by the old-fashioned lancers. As the actors were costumed in the period of 1846, the dance proved quaint and charming, (though most of the women present must have mentally congratulated themselves on the absence of the crinoline in the costumes of today.)

The play was indeed "the thing," and was remarkably well acted by the youthful cast which was as follows:

LEND ME FIVE SHILLINGS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Mr. Golightly | Walter Badger, '10 |
| Capt. Phobbs | Theodore Main, '10 |
| Capt. Spruce | Robert Leland, '11 |
| Mr. Moreland | Edmund Cottle, '10 |
| Sam, a waiter | Ernest Evans, '11 |
| Mrs. Capt. Phobbs | Dorothy Ayer, '09 |
| Mrs. Major Phobbs | Joan Newell, '09 |

Joan Newell, as an old-time "Merry Widow," made other captives than the susceptible Golightly, the combination of youthfulness and aplomb in her acting producing an effect altogether bewitching. Dorothy Ayer, as Mrs. Capt. Phobbs, was sweet and winning.

Walter Badger, as Golightly, acted with real cleverness his exacting part, and evinced much natural ability in bringing out the spirit of the many humorous situations.

Theodore Main as Capt. Phobbs was indeed roaringly funny, and Ernest Evans, as the waiter, gave quite a finished performance.

Throughout the evening the careful training of Mr. Taylor was in evidence, and the result must be a source of mutual congratulation to pupils and instructor.

HANDICRAFT SOCIETY ELECTION.

At the annual meeting of the Handicraft Society, held April 2nd, the following officers were elected:

President—Sylvester Taylor.
Vice-President—W. H. W. Bicknell.
Secretary—Mrs. Leicester K. Ely.
Treasurer—Mrs. Anthony Kelley.

The five new members of the Council elected were, Mrs. W. S. Forbes, Miss Margaret Hill, Mrs. Harrison Parker, Miss Marian Lawrence and Mrs. Joseph M. Witmer.

The Treasurer's report showed a very satisfactory financial condition. The President reported than an increased number of High School pupils were making use of the plant under the instruction of Miss Hill as a part of their regular work in the school and an evening class has been formed to work under Miss Hill during the Spring term. Mr. Murphy reported on his negotiations to secure a permanent instructor who would take charge of the shop and be there at all times to give lessons to members desiring instruction and who would act as a curator and as a salesman of finished articles left at the rooms for exhibition and disposal. He confidently expected that some such arrangement would be established when school opened in the autumn.

GRADE CROSSING RUMORS.

There have been persistent rumors for the past three or more weeks that the grade crossing commission are divided in their opinions on the way the crossing at the centre should be abolished, and that there will be two reports filed with the court. One member of the Commission is reported as favoring the elevating of the tracks of the steam road, while the other two are committed to a bridge over the tracks of the steam road, commencing at Dix street, passing through the centre of the common and over to Thompson street. As the citizens have rejected both of these schemes by voting them down at public meetings, it looks as if there would be a warm time, if the rumors regarding the Commissioner's findings should prove to be correct. The decision of the Commission is expected to be made public from day to day, and until then nothing authoritatively will be known.

However, there is but little doubt the citizens will to a man oppose the taking of the Common and also elevating the tracks. The whole question promises to be threshed out before the Railroad Commissioners before a final decision is reached. The only two plans that have been favored by the citizens are raising the centre of the town and bridging the tracks of the steam road, or the so-called Redfern two bridges scheme.

TEACHERS WILL DINE.

The Winchester Teachers' Club is to hold a banquet in the gymnasium of the High school on next Thursday evening. Sub-master Benjamin F. May of the High school is to be the toastmaster and Mr. James E. Burke, Assistant Superintendent of the public schools of Boston, will be the principal speaker of the evening. Other speakers will be selected from members of the Club, and a full orchestra will furnish music.

The committee of arrangements is as follows: Miss Mary A. Lyons, principal of the Chapin School, chairman; Miss Marjorie Weeks, High School; Miss Florence Estes, Wadleigh; Miss Elizabeth Spencer, principal of the Prince School; Miss Eunice Young, Chapin; Miss Gertrude Howard, Gifford; Miss Bessie Small, principal of the Highland School; Miss Elizabeth Cullen Rumford; Miss Mercy Davis, Washington; Miss Ethel Woodbury, Wyman.

MRS. LUCY BROOKINGS.

Mrs. Lucy Brookings of Chelsea, mother of Mr. Henry S. Brookings of Mason street and formerly a resident of the town, passed away at her home on Sunday. She was 92 years of age, and her death was due to natural infirmities.

Owing to scarlet fever in the household the services were held at the grave in Wildwood Cemetery on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Henry E. Hodge, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of which she was a member, officiated.

Besides Mr. Henry S. Brookings, the deceased left one son and two daughters.

GENTLEMENS' SUPPER

And Club Organization at Congregational Church.

THE HON. SAMUEL J. ELDER
Toastmaster at Gentlemen's Supper

The "Gentlemens' Supper" at the First Congregational Church next Friday evening, April 30th, at 6.45 marks the initial step along still another line of progressive church organization for which this, one of our largest and most prosperous parishes of the town is already noted. For on this occasion to which all men of the parish, including all sixteen years or older, are invited, it is to be expected that some definite step looking toward a permanent mens' organization or social club will be taken.

The Hon. Samuel J. Elder has consented to act as Toastmaster for the occasion and other well known men of the parish will also speak. Mr. Elder's appearance at this time is a matter of particular interest because in the coming months he is to appear before the Hague Tribunal as senior counsel for the United States in the United States-Great Britain controversy over the North Atlantic fisheries, a fact that of necessity limits his time and may mark the close of his public appearances this season.

The musical program of the evening guarantees entertainment for all tastes and includes Dr. J. Churchill Hindes as soloist, Mr. Joshua Phippen at the piano, and the latest $1000 Victola Talking Machine. The supper will be served by a caterer and something worth while is assured from oysters to demi tasse.

The committee on arrangements include Mr. Alfred S. Hall, chairman, Mr. Samuel J. Elder, Mr. Henry C. Robinson, Mr. William H. Herrick, Mr. Marshall W. Jones, Mr. Charles A. Lane, Mr. Maurice F. Brown and Mr. J. Harper Blaisdell.

The tickets are 75 cents each and are on sale at the office of Parker & Lane and at the Church on the evening of the 30th.

ANNUAL MAY PARTY.

ROXBURY 5, WINCHESTER 1.

Winchester High School was defeated by Roxbury Latin School on Manchester Field last Wednesday in an interesting game by the score of 5 to 1. Frequent errors by the home team was responsible for the defeat. The pitching of Foley was the feature of the game. He succeeded in striking out fourteen men. Thompson also did great work with the willow getting three hits out of four times.

Winchester High defeated Reading High Monday morning in a classy exhibition of fast ball by a shut out 4 to 0. The game was the fastest seen on the field for some time. A base on balls, a hit and two errors clinched the game for the locals in the sixth inning. A one-hand stop by Matthews and Foley's catch of a fast liner were the features.

NEAR DROWNING IN MYSTIC.

The first accident of this year on Mystic Lake occurred on Patriot's Day. That there was no fatal result is due to the prompt and heroic work of the young man in the case and two Winchester boys — Loring Gleason and Eugene Howe.

About four o'clock, when the wind was at its height, a canoe containing a young man and woman from the Medford Boat Club capsized in the narrows opposite the Winchester Club. The heavy wind kicked up a big swell, which swept through the narrow opening in a dangerous manner. The young man allowed his canoe to swing broadside and it went over in a twinkling.

The young woman was under the canoe after it capsized, her companion going after her and bringing her to the surface, endeavoring to find a hold on the overturned craft. Nearby were Loring Gleason and Eugene Howe.

Both boys paddled at once to the rescue, and by supporting themselves on the boy's boat the unlucky couple were towed to the shore, it being deemed unwise by the boys to try to take them aboard in the rough water.

The upset was seen by members of the Winchester Boat Club on the float, and Fred Bates, Captain of the Club, with Jack Sheridan, lost no time in lauching a canoe and paddling to the aid of the couple. Their assistance was not needed however, as the party had reached the shore when they arrived.

After draining the water out of their canoe the couple paddled to the Winchester house, the young lady being taken by Miss Carline Gleason to her home and provided with dry clothing, and her companion making the best of it in front of the fire at the club house. Later in the afternoon they were taken to their homes in an automobile. A peculiar feature of the accident was that the canoe in which they were paddling was named the "Hard Luck" and is said to be a very cranky craft.

The accident resulted in nothing more than a ducking for the parties concerned, but had it not been for the prompt and efficient work of the young man and the Winchester boys a tragedy might easily have occurred.

SNYDER—WILLS.

On Monday noon Miss Anne Thompson Wills, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Wills of Eaton street, was quietly married to Mr. Frederic Sylvester Snyder of Sheffield road at her mother's home. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William I. Lawrance of the Unitarian Church and was private. The couple left immediately for an extended southern trip, and will be at home after November 1st, at No. 17 Sheffield road.

The annual convention of the diocese will be held next Wednesday at Trinity Church. The preacher of the morning at 9.30 will be the Rev. Dr. van Allen, rector of the Church of the Advent. The Bishop's address will be at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Now that the tariff bill is before Congress we do not hear so much from the Democratic Congressmen who have been yelling for tariff reform. Many of these Congressmen have become ardent stand patters when their protected interests have been assailed.

In reward of faithful political service an ambitious saloon keeper was appointed police magistrate

The newly made magistrate frowned upon the trembling defendant.

The house committee announce a "house cleaning day" at the club house on this Saturday afternoon. At this time the house and grounds will be put in condition for the opening, and although help is to be employed, all members are asked to assist in the work. It is suggested by the committee that all cleaning and overhauling of the lockers be done at this time.

The club will be open for use on Saturday afternoon and Sunday, it being expected that the Steward will be in attendance May 1st, when the house will be open permanently.

A number of members were at the Club on Sunday and Monday, the club boats being in use throughout the two days.

GOOD AUTHORITY FOR FISHING.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Now that the State Board of Health has decided (contrary to the Winchester Board of Health) that fishing is not harmful to Winchester's water supply and gives the water board authority to issue fishing permits as it has done for years, why cannot we have a little fishing, say one day per week during the summer months? It would be a graceful thing for the water board to allow this much just at this time and their action would be highly appreciated by stay-at-homes who crave a little recreation of this kind. Saturdays and holidays would be good days to reserve for this purpose and as the highest authority in the state has said it is all right to fish if we want to, why not allow what the town has fostered and practiced for years and what a large number, if not a majority, of our citizens much desire. It seems a shame after the town has cultivated and maintained fish in the reservoirs for so long a time that no Winchester citizen can catch them out now. Strict prohibition from all fishing does not seem reasonable after reading the proclamation of the State Board of Health and if the Water Board would also be reasonable in issuing restricted permits, all would be happy and a disagreeable dispute would be happily ended. STAY-AT-HOME.

IT IS ALIVE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In last week's issue "Observations" wants to know whether the Winchester Band was alive or not.

It is, Mr. Editor, and ready for any business coming our way, and if "Observations" will come up to the I. O. O. F. banquet hall on any Thursday evening the manager or secretary will talk business with him, or any one else looking for good up-to-date music.

HOUSE LOTS AT AUCTION

The well known real estate firm of Atwood & Pattee announce a sale of house lots on May 1st, commencing at 2 p. m. These lots which are on Cross street near Washington street, are very desirable for building purposes in a part of the town where vacant houses are very scarce. This sale will afford an opportunity to secure a lot of land at genuine bargain prices.

That the sale may be attractive in a social way a prominent band will discourse music during the afternoon.

Don't whine!
That's a thing that a baby may do.
But the world doesn't look for such conduct from you.
What if you are down and out?
If you know you are right,
Show the world you can fight.
Don't sit like a school girl and pout!
If you've got a kick coming,
Just start things a humming,
You'll find things will get into line;
There's a time for a howl,
There's a time for a growl,
But the world has no time for a whine.

An exchange inquires why the especial moan about taxing the breakfast table as well as the dinner table? Why not tax the breakfast table as well as the dinner table or the supper table? All these tables are already taxed, from the tables themselves to the table cloths, the napkins, the dishes, the cutlery and to the foods and condiments. Yet proposals to tax tea and coffee are treated as in the nature of a crime. It may well be inexpedient to tax tea or coffee, but the argument that they should not be taxed because the breakfast table should not be taxed loses its sense in view of the truth that the breakfast table is aleady piled high with taxes.

HOW SONGS BECOME POPULAR.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

A question which has long perplexed the mind of many a publisher and composer is, what makes certain songs and music popular, and their demand so great? The chief answer is their simplicity: their easy, simple though catchy melody, and which originated in the actual inspiration of the composer; a melody which is easy to sing, within the natural compass of the human voice, that which can be whistled by the average small boy, and lastly with fitting words to the melody.

Successful music must also be different from any that has preceded it. Just as sure as a musical publication has become popular, you will notice that an imitative piece shortly follows, but the latter generally finds a poor sale. This is especially noticeable in the well known inspired song, "The Holy City," which has a score of imitations—mere adulterations—claiming to be "improvements," "perfectos," etc., but being uninspired, are really an insult to the original composition, as well as to Mr. Adams, its author. I can cite many more such instances which this brief article will not permit.

It is not necessarily those who are in high or advanced classics who are capable of producing the most attractive music; it usually comes from the brain of one "naturally musical,"—wholly through inspiration. Such a composer as Claude Weber seems to be a type of this latter class of composers, who absolutely defies imitation.

The highest circulation, to my knowledge, of one song, is known as "Rosa Lee"; which in five editions exhausted two million three hundred thousand (2,300,000) copies. Four editions of the great "Carolina" song, five editions of "Take Me Back to Dixie" and "Belle of Broadway," have been insufficient to meet the demand. Although but three editions of "Cottage By The Lake" have been issued, yet its sale reached nearly 300,000 in a short time after publication. Such songs are destined to live forever. A police officer recently asked the author: "William, how can I easily make a big pile of money? I'm tired of this monotonous job." Knowing him to be naturally musical, as well as a fine singer, told him if he had a musical talent, to try composing some new songs and music, and become a publisher. "How much could I make out of it?" he asked. I simply told him if he could compose a song that would guarantee a sale of one million copies, he would surely realize $50,000 for his efforts. I am not positive yet not at all surprised, if he is trying it.

Some composers of very fine music are very unfortunate in remuneration for their work among whom may be mentioned Sir Arthur Sullivan, who missed a fortune on "The Lost Chord"; and Mrs. Hall composer of "My Tennessee," also swindled by unscrupulous publishers.

The plantation song known as "My Alabama Belle," will possibly reach the "million mark," it being very melodious and exceedingly catchy; but as above stated, success results chiefly in simplicity and orignality of any musical composition.

Medford, Mass. W. H. BROWN.

AMOUNT ALOTTED FOR GYPSY MOTH WORK.

State Superintendent Rane, of the work for suppression of the gypsy and brown tail moths, is now working out the amount that he will allot to each city and town of the infested district, when his appropriation bill is signed by the Governor. Meanwhile he has given out figures of what each city and town is liable for and which have a bearing on the amount that it will receive from the sum he is allowed to spend.

Towns having a valuation of $12,000,000 or less are expected to expend on this work .0025 per cent. Cities and towns having a valuation of over $12,000,000 are expected to expend $5000. Cities and towns which expend more than the amount are required to be given a partial reimbursement. Those wealthier towns expending over $5000 are reimbursed one-half of the extra amount, and towns between $6,000,000 and $12,000,000 are refunded 80 per cent.

The State superintendent can require cities and towns to spend up to the full amount of their liability, if necessary. He is required to state the facts of each case to the Governor and get his authority to institute court proceedings. In cases of the emergency, with the sanction of the Governor, he can go ahead without court proceedings and order the necessary work done; the bill will be later sent to the city or town which has neglected to act.

The soothing spray of Ely's Liquid Cream Balm, used in an atomizer, is an unspeakable relief to sufferers from Catarrh. Some of them describe it as a Godsend, and no wonder. The thick, foul discharge is dislodged and the patient breathes freely, perhaps for the first time in weeks. Liquid Cream Balm contains all the healing, purifying elements of the solid form, and it never fails to satisfy. Sold by all druggists for 75c., including spraying tube, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

The First Electric Lights.

John Hollingshead was the first man to use electric light in London. In 1878 he installed six arc lamps at the old Gaiety theater and startled the Strand. The price of gas shares fell immediately. The cost of the lamps was $200 a week, and he ran them for nine months. An attempt to plant one inside the theater at the foot of the grand staircase was a failure. The women objected to the fierceness of the light. One of them, for instance, "pretended to be very anxious that the secret of her soft complexion should not be discovered." Professor Erasmus Wilson said of electric light at that time, "With regard to the electric light, much has been said for and against it, but I think I may say, without fear of contradiction, that when the Paris exhibition closes the electric light will close with it, and very little more will be heard about it." Mr. Hollingshead, by the way, had fitted up the Gaiety as early as 1869 with an electric searchlight, which flashed the length of the Strand. But he soon withdrew that for fear of scaring the horses.

To Find Your Affinity.

Your affinity is your mate, but unless you know the six types of happy married folks on Olympus, up to date, you may miss yours. Jupiter, king of heaven, ruler of men, house and business, must marry Juno, the queenly woman, plump, domestic, wise as Minerva, yet loving as Venus. Venus should mate with Apollo; but, being fond of all men and usually pretty, a Venus woman marries any one, often several times. Marry and be petted and adored she must or die. Minerva, on the contrary, can be happy only with a Vulcan, a man her counterpart, wise, lofty, patient, a reformer, teacher and philosopher. Both have contempt for frivolity and meanness and vice. Most all of the elderly single women in the world, especially those descendants from Puritan or Calvanistic stock, are single just because they are the Minerva type and too wise to marry any one but Vulcans. And Vulcan men, being the best of their sex, are scarce.—Nautilis.

Not What It Was For.

When Miss Julia Bryant, daughter of William Cullen Bryant, was a little child an aged lady, who was for a time a neighbor of the poet and his family, had been shown into the parlor of the house, where she was making her first call. She found the small Julia seated on the floor with an illustrated volume of Milton in her lap. Although she knew, of course, that it must be the artist, not the author, in whom at that early age the child was interested, she asked genially by way of beginning an acquaintance:

"Reading poetry already, little girl?"

Julia looked up and regarded her gravely. Then she explained, with an air of politely correcting inexcusable ignorance:

"People don't read poetry. Papas write poetry, and mammas sing poetry, and little girls learn to say poetry, but nobody reads poetry. That isn't what it's for."

Then He Landed.

"Beauty is a woman's most important attribute," said a New York beauty doctor. "She who increases beauty is woman's greatest benefactor. Husbands, brothers, even fathers—in their inmost hearts beauty is the thing they desire most to see in their feminine relations. Only the other day a gray, fat old gentleman entered a newspaper office and said:

"'Are you the managing editor?'

"'Yes,' was the reply.

"'I suppose that on you, then,' said the visitor, 'rests the responsibility for this morning's reference to my daughter Patty as Fatty. Take that!'"

An Ungallant Rascal.

"I suppose," said the angular spinster, "that you never had a romance?"

"Dat's where youse is wrong," replied the unlaundered hobo. "I wunst had a sweetheart wot wuz a dead ringer fer youse."

"And did she die?" asked the angular spinster as she helped him to another hunk of pie.

"No, ma'am," answered the hobo. "When leap year come round she asked me t' marry her—an' I run away from home."—Chicago News.

Dead Heat.

A schoolmaster who is in the habit of selecting extracts from his morning newspaper for dictation exercise read the other day a passage in which occurred the term "dead heat."

"Jones," said he, addressing an inattentive pupil, "what do you mean by 'dead heat?'"

"Please, sir," the youngster replied, "it's the heat of the place bad people go to when they're dead."—London Schoolmaster.

Giving Advice.

Professor—What is the matter with Mr. ——?

Learned Student—He is seriously afflicted with a paroxysmal inflammation of the vermiform appendix.

Voice From the Rear Seat—Aw, cut it out!

Caustic.

"Does your representative in congress entertain much?"

"No," answered the caustic constituent, "he doesn't entertain; he only amuses."—Washington Star.

His Definition.

"Pa, what is an 'interior decorator?'"

"I'm not quite sure, Wilfred, but I think it's a cook."—New York Times.

Every individual is a marvel of unknown and unrealized possibilities.—Jordan.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

In the bill at Keith's Theatre for the week of April 26th there will be two well known stars of the legitimate. The first is Andrew Mack, the Irish comedian and singer, who will appear in a sketch supported by an excellent company, which will give him an opportunity to sing some of his latest Irish successes. The other is Ben Johnson, who made one of the big hits of recent years in "Paid in Full."

There is no more amusing fellow in vaudeville than Charles F. Semon, who will always be remembered as "The Narrow Feller," who plays strange instruments, sings songs and engages in general merry maxing of his own peculiar kind.

Others on the bill are the Bellclair Brothers in their wonderful casting act; Butler and Bassett, that remarkable team of skaters who use real ice on the stage, and who do all sorts of stunts under the most picturesque conditions; Barnes and Crawford, John C. Bowker, who has just returned after several years travel in Africa; Annie and Ethe Connelly and the Marlo Trio.

GAIETY THEATRE.

Weber & Rush's "Bon Tons," aptly styled the big, bright, fun and beauty show, will open at the Gaiety Theatre next Monday matinee for an engagement of one week.

Two new and sparkling burlettas entitled respectively: "Affinity Beach" and "The Cow Girl's Round Up" will be staged and costumed in elaborate fashion, and are said to contain more fun and good musical numbers than half a dozen average shows combined.

In the vaudeville section will be seen —Guy Rawson, the clever character comedian, and Frances Clare, the Dresden doll soubrette, in their well-known creatation "Just Kids"; Woods & Greene, who will do their laughing knock-out "The Ball Room Boys"; Niblo and Spencer, the swellest dancing act on the stage; Joy and Clayton, the two acrobatic girls, and the imported novelty act "The Six English Barmaids." The extra feature is a stunner and is entitled "Mi Reflexione." It will be performed by La Belle Minna and her eight willowy beauties.

BOSTON THEATRE.

No theatrical attraction in recent years has attained such a sensational success, as has Frederick Thompson's great scenic and dramatic triumph "Via Wireless," which is turning hundreds of people away at every performance at the Boston Theatre. The two big scenes of the play are in the second and third acts and are in themselves worth the price of admission. The one shows the foundry room in the Midvale Steel Works where a 12-inch naval gun is forged in full view of the audience. The great wireless scene in the third act, which shows the wireless room on board an ocean liner, is an exact duplicate of a room on the S. S. Republic from which Jack Binns, the wireless hero, sent out his "C. Q. D." calls which were the means of saving upwards of two thousand lives in the recent marine disaster.

The run of "Via Wireless" at the Boston is positively limited, for on Monday, May 3, comes the popular actor Chauncey Olcott in his new play, entitled "Ragged Robin." Mr. O'cott will have several new songs to sing, such as "The Eyes That Came From Ireland," "The Laugh With a Tear In It," "Sweet Girl of My Dreams" and "I Used to Believe in Fairies."

ELECTRIC CLOCK TO TIME HORSES.

One of the innovations at the Blue Bonnets race track, located on the outskirts of Montreal, which will be introduced at the spring meeting, is an electric timing device used for the first time in Canada for the "clocking" of horses during their contests.

An electric clock, operated by the official timer, will be started by pressing a button just as soon as the flag held by the man at the starting post is dropped. The dial of this clock will be located in a conspicuous place, in full view of the patrons of the track. As the horses dash around the track the hands of the clock will follow them, as it were, from start to finish.

In this fashion the spectators will be able to keep in touch with the running of the horses and will be able to tell just how fast their favorites are running each quarter of a mile or fraction thereof. If it is necessary the times of both the winner and second horse may be recorded.—Boston American.

MYSTIC BATH HOUSE.

The legislative committee on metropolitan affairs has reported favorably on the bill for a bath house on the shores of the upper Mystic river basin. The bill authorizes the Metropoliton Park Commissioners to expend $6,000 in the construction of a public bath house and appurtenances, with accommodations for 150 men and boys and 50 women and girls, on the basin on South street, Medford, near y opposite the Lawrence Armory.

All inks can be had at Wilson the Stationer's.

Too Nerve-Racking.

It is reported that Charles N. Harris, Esq., has thrown up his hands and that he will no longer consent to serve as Moderator at town meetings. The duties have become too strenuous and nerve-racking, and besides he believes that he has done his full duty as a good citizen in serving for three years. Mr. Harris made a good moderator and the citizens will be sorry to lose his services.

Fishing In The Reservoirs.

Evidently the Water Board has not promulgated rules against fishing in the reservoirs as yet. Last Monday dozens of fishermen were seen along the shores uninterruptedly enjoying fishing. Apparently these rules cannot be put into force too quickly to suit the wishes of the inhabitants who believe the water should be kept as free from contamination as possible.

It Did Pay.

The question "did the recent evangelistic campaign pay?" Can be answered in the affirmative. All the churches have felt the effect of the services, some more than others. At the First Baptist the accessions have been up to the present time 49, and more will be heard from, from time to time, on account of the great moral awakening. Large gains have been made to the membership of the First Congregational Church. Aside from this is the fact that many people are giving more serious attention to their future.

SUBURBAN LIFE FOR MAY.

The beautiful pansy cover of the May number of Suburban Life creates a delightful spring atmosphere, which prepares one to enjoy the varied contents, dealing largely with outdoor life in the suburbs and country. The leading article is entitled "The Grand Army of Commuters," and is followed by such alluring titles as "The Romance of the Rose," "The Changing Fashion in Dogs," "When It Comes to Keeping Bees," "How a Flock of Hens Paid For a Farm," "Is there a Walking Club in Your Town?" and "On the Trail of the Three-Borer." An unusual article, entitled "Midget," is the tale of a splendid friendship between a man and a horse. Some of the many essentially practical articles in this number are, "Bulbous plants to start in May," "Why not Abolish the Mosquito?" "Making Over an Old Farmhouse," "When the Lightning-rod Is a Real Protection," "The Newest Things in Summer Furniture," and "Vacation Problems solved by the Portable House." A special feature is a double page of pictures, showing summer homes of many kinds, and ranging in price from $400 to $4,000.

MRS. MARY ST. C. GOULD.

Mrs. Mary St. Clair Gould, aged 53 years, died of a liver trouble on Monday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James E. Campbell, 11 Eaton street.

Mrs. Gould was born in Boston, her parents being Charles and Margaret Dixon. She had made her home in this town for about three years.

GRADE CROSSING BILL.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The following House Bill passed on the 20th, 116 to 91. Our Representative, Mr. Barnard, voted no. If he had his way Winchester will pay 10 per cent. and not 5 per cent. If every voter will write our Senator Crosby at Arlington, to work and vote for this bill, they may be able to help to make it a law, and I hope many will.

WHITFIELD TUCK.

AN ACT

Relative to the Abolition of Grade Crossings.

In cases where a grade crossing is abolished according to the provisions of law therefor, the whole cost of the abolition and all expenses incidental thereto shall be paid by the railroad company or companies concerned, except that in cases where a street railway company also uses the grade crossing such company shall pay fifteen per cent. of the cost. In case a city or town petitions for the abolition of a grade crossing, the city or town shall pay such amount not exceeding five per cent. of the cost of the abolition of the grade crossing and of the expenses incident thereto as the commissioners having the matter in charge may determine and the commonwealth shall pay twenty-five per cent. of the same except that any street railway company which also uses the grade shall pay fifteen per cent. of the said cost and expenses, the same to be deducted from the twenty-five per cent otherwise payable by the commonwealth.

AN EXPENSIVE PET.

Is the City Justified In Paying Such Enormous Board and Keep?

Every citizen of New York and particularly every direct taxpayer should read most carefully the speeches of William H. Ivins and Edgar J. Levey on the expenditures of the city of New York. If after perusing those speeches he has any doubt that the question of getting our house in order is urgent, then it is difficult to see what can convince him outside of the actual suspension of payment by the municipal treasury.

It has taken us ten years to find out how little we know about running a city. But yet, short as the time is, the result has been reached gradually. We have passed from one unwarrantable expenditure to another until we have placed ourselves in a position where there is practically no demand which we can logically refuse. As Mr. Levey pointed out, the loss on the Staten Island ferry annually is $750,000, and this is almost exactly the taxation paid by Staten Island toward the administration of the city. It now receives, therefore, its police, lighting, water, roads and administration generally for nothing and is in a position to make a demand for a free ferry on the theory that anybody can walk over the Brooklyn bridge for nothing.

It takes fifty-four men to run one of the Staten Island ferryboats for twenty-four hours against eighteen men on a Lackawanna or a Pennsylvania boat. We simply cannot afford it. We are taxed up to the limit. As Mr. Levey says, manufacturers are moving out beyond the city limits because of taxation. Ultimately rents will come down in consequence. Large districts will deteriorate and their taxable value will be lowered.

Our enormous expenditure and our enormous debt, presumably contracted to help the city, is hurting it. We are doing much which individual effort and pride should do a great deal better, and incidentally we are sapping the self reliance of our people in a way that would cause our grandfathers to turn in their graves.—Wall Street Journal.

Marlborough House.

Marlborough House is one of the numerous buildings of Sir Christopher Wren. It was built at a cost of £44,000, the whole of which was defrayed by the duke. Here the great duchess lived till her death in 1744, waging an incessant warfare upon the society of her time. Here, too, she received a deputation of the lord mayor and sheriffs of London while still in bed, an incident which was satirized by Gay:

Acquainted with the world and quite well bred
Drusa receives her visitants in bed.

In the earlier years of the nineteenth century Marlborough House was rented by Leopold, king of the Belgians. It was afterward bestowed by the crown upon Queen Adelaide, the dowager of William IV.—London Chronicle.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

When our ponds have been cleaned and the water becomes pure enough for fish to live in, let fishing permits be issued there, but not for our reservoirs. Let us not open up that question again.

Now that we are to do so much important street work this year, the Selectmen should keep in mind that they have the right to consult with the State Highway Commission upon any matter relating to such work. It is a valuable right and should be availed of.

Unless this legislature shirks its duty and throws problems back upon the commissions, which it seems ready to do, it looks now as if it will be in session till the 4th of July. The speaker has no control over the House, and its so-called leaders cannot lead a little bit. It is generally acknowledged to be the poorest legislature for years.

The Selectmen should take their spring drive over town and order the slicking up of things. The old town yard and the new one particularly need attention. There is also some mean looking street signs that should come down.

The walk on Manchester Field parallel with the railroad tracks should be lighted at night. Many people who would like to use it are deterred because of the darkness and some other people who should not use it do, for the same reason. Turn on the light.

Pole and wire consolidations have not received much attention for several years now and it should be taken up anew. Many poles should be planted, others replaced and a great many removed and consolidated. What excuse can the Selectmen give for that wretched pole in front of the main entrance to the Town Hall? On Common street the wires are run through the trees, and those particular wires should be removed as they are not needed. Here are possible improvements all over town that will cost us nothing but a little exertion on the part of some of the town officials. Will they exert?

If the special commission on our grade crossing abolition cannot come to a decision, it better throw up the job and let us go directly to the Railroad Commissioners. It's time to wipe these special commissions out anyway.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Runaway Girl" is here for another week. Her reception at the Castle Square has been a hearty and enthusiastic one, and there is every outlook for as great a triumph as was "The Circus Girl." This latest musical comedy is even better than its predecessor. Its tunes are brighter, its humor is merrier, its scenes and costumes are at least as brilliant, and in variety it is fully up to the greatest expectation.

Among the song hits are "The Sly Cigarette," "Soldiers in the Park," "The Boy Guessed Right, and "Follow the Man from Cook's."

Mary Young as Winnifred Grey is as lovely as ever, and it is merely necessary to mention the fact that the cast includes Mr. Craig, Mr. Friebus, Mr. Meek, Miss Binley, Mr. Evarts, Miss Colcord and Mr. Hassell. Performances of "The Runaway Girl" will be given every evening at the Castle Square, and also every afternoon with the exception of Monday.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

The next meeting of The Fortnightly will occur on Monday, April 26. The speaker of the afternoon will be Anna Seton Schmidt on "Glimpses of French Life." This will be the last entertainment of the season as the May meeting will be a business meeting with reports of committees, election of officers and a social half hour.

Attention is called to the recital by Miss Chamberlain on Saturday, April 24, in Town Hall at 3 o'clock, under auspices of Philanthropy Committee.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

One does not need to read the papers that claim to be distinctively temperance organs in order to note the trend of public opinion as expressed in positive ways. The news columns of the daily press are full of straws enough to make a very respectable stack. In connection with the recent "drying up" of Michigan, President James B. Angell, head of the University at Ann Aarbor, took occasion to issue a pronunciamento that follows the line of President Eliot's saying that he would as he had intend d vote for the prohibi ion policy as applied to the county. The vote was by coun ies, the town organization being of less importance in nearby all Western States.

Nebraska is the first state to try the "daylight saloon" plan, the bill to prohibit liquor selling after 8 p. m. having become a law by the signature of the governor.

The dramatic feature of the passage was the sudden death of ex-Governor Poynter within a few minutes after finishing an urgent plea for the bill. The re ults of this entirely new plan for restricting the traffic will be watched with great interest.

Omaha is the one large city of the state and its brewing interests have been fighting the bill vehemently but the majority of the legislature comes from the country districts where the sentiment in favor of temperance is strong.

The Winchester Union has again suffered the loss of a member by the death of Mrs. Anna Burbank, who has been on the rolls for many years although resident for some time in Maine.

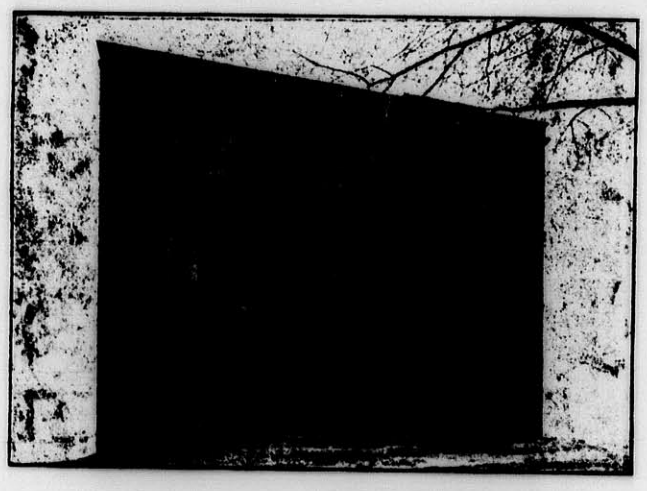

It was impossible for any of the members to attend the funeral services but a floral tribute was sent as an expression of sympathy.

The Influence of Bath.

Is there any town in the world that has so imposed itself as much as Bath upon the life and language of the nation? For some there are Bath buns, for others Bath Olivers, and the militant ladies who find the buns too soft may throw Bath bricks at office or other windows if they disapprove of the Bath chaps. When we become infirm it is the Bath chair we seek. And that "thousand years" of the middle ages "without a bath" seems now horrible.—London Chronicle.

I believe in laughter, in love, in faith, in all distant hopes that lure us on.—Groves.

Adversity borrows its sharpest sting from our impatience.—Horne.

The Savage Pike.

There are several instances on record of bathers being attacked by pike, and an old writer, Crull, tells of a giant pike inside which was found the body of an infant. Not long ago a good sized retriever which was swimming in the Thames just above Chitty's boathouse at Richmond was tackled by a pike, which bit one of its hind legs so badly as to sever an artery. It was another Thames pike which attacked that well known naturalist and fisherman, Mr Cholmondeley-Pennell. He had actually landed the fish, when it sprang from the ground and fixed all its sharp teeth into his leg just above the knee. The creature hung so fiercely to its hold that a stick had to be used to pry its jaws apart.—Chambers' Journal.

The Winning of Edmonia.

By JANET CHRISTINE STEPHENS.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press

There was nothing of the knight errant about Percivale Bonney. In the thoughts of Edmonia Turner, thoughts which invariably formed the frowning background to Percivale's waking hours, he was discouragingly and modernly inoffensive.

She had once stated succinctly, as was Edmonia's way, that the only thing about him that remotely suggested standing up for itself was the cowlick at the back of a square and otherwise irreproachably groomed head. The subject of this rather doubtful approval was secretly encouraged in the belief that the cowlick indicated an aggressive spirit which seemed to be the heroic attribute in the imagination of Edmonia's set.

Edmonia's faintly appreciative remark had been inspired in her mother's attic during the rummaging of a rain bound house party, when, upon the discovery of an ancient coat of mail, Percivale had pulled it out from under the eaves and had fallen speedily to calculating how many chain dishcloths it would have made for Mrs. Turner's carefully ordered kitchen.

This was too much for Edmonia. A man who could evolve dishcloths from the fabric of romance must be lacking in the most rudimentary instincts of chivalry. It counted for naught with her that Percivale Bonney was evincing a business ability that made his father prouder every day or that she had never had a rival in his loyal devotion to her.

She dreamed of the clash of armor and the risks of joust and tourney, a knight who should perform feats of arms for her sake and rescue her, if need be, from a tyrant's might. In the free wholesomeness of American society the tyrant had not appeared, and to do Edmonia justice she really did care a great deal for Percivale's allegiance, only she desired a more daring proof.

It was therefore incumbent upon this thoroughly consistent young lady that she steel her heart against the pleasing picture which a tall, broad shouldered, gray clad figure, hat off and light hair tossing in the breeze, made against a morning sky on the first day of one of his erratic autumnal visits near her country home.

She accordingly let her disdainful glance dwell upon his offensively ruddy cheek and ignored his unaffected stare of astonishment at her modern equipage, a brilliantly red automobile at a standstill upon the country road.

"What, ho, Rebecca!" he greeted her when within speaking distance of where she sat in the crimson rambler. "Armed cap-a-pie I see! Is the drawbridge down?"

Edmonia smiled tolerantly and gave him her hand.

"But why linger so far from the paternal castle? Has thy gentle palfrey gone lame?"

Edmonia glanced suggestively back along the highway. "I'm waiting for a friend." She said it with conviction.

The dusty road stretched in two long, undeviating lines in either direction. No one was in sight. Percival's gaze abandoned its quest and returned suspiciously to the crimson rambler. "Could I," he asked anxiously, "figure in that capacity?"

She reddened in turn, then scanned him critically. "Perhaps." She was still rather doubtful of his capabilities. Mentally scorning as inexcusable a devotion to his business which had made him hitherto ignore the automobile craze, he flattened himself out after the manner of the ardent automobilist under her car and confided his despair to her tonneau.

It was bad enough not to be romantic, but not to be even useful was unbearable. He had not the slightest idea of how to start the machine. He crawled out from under the machine and mounted to the driver's seat.

Her sudden accession of trust, inspired by his businesslike manner, provoked him to fresh endeavor. He made a great show of moving brakes, tightening useless screws and peering into the machine while she scanned the scenery.

Whatever he finally did to that automobile to start it Percivale does not know. Suddenly it slid out of the shade into the road like a bird from under his hand. "Aha," he cried, with an assurance that he was far from feeling, "I thought so!"

He held a trembling hand upon the wheel and answered irrelevant questions at regular intervals. They were now gliding along between hedgerows of gorgeous autumn color. He began to feel more at ease. Edmonia hummed a little sing as old as it was sweet:

The rose that all are praising
Is not the rose for me.

He looked at her and in that look forgot his new responsibility. She was gazing steadily down the dusty turnpike, a little smile upon her lips, as though she would see the knight of her dreams in plumed helmet and shining armor riding to bear her away.

"He couldn't catch us," said Percivale in response to her thought. She started and looked with more interest at her companion. He had spoken in the confidence that is born of ignorance.

"Say, Ted," he continued, "I don't know much about your 'flowers of chivalry.' I don't even understand the first thing about an auf"— He caught himself up. He positively would not divulge this humiliating fact. He went on more confidently: "But you are the rose for me, sure, Ted. You must say you will marry me this time," he ended, with an air of desperation, "or I'll"—

The threat was not completed. In the earnestness of his plea Percivale had forgotten that he was running an automobile for the first time in his life. They were now going at a tremendous speed and every instant gathering momentum. Edmonia gripped his arm as they lurched around a curve and bounced over a culvert.

"Hang on!" yelled Percivale as they approached a slight descent. In his clumsy efforts to control the machine he inadvertently put on more speed.

"What are you doing?" screamed Edmonia. "Stop! Why, you are running away with me!" she laughed tremulously.

"Why not?" he shouted wildly, as she thought, recklessly. The idea of stopping was a delectable one now to Percivale, but one which he felt that he must abandon.

The roadsides of firewood and goldenrod flew by like a track of flame. Hens dapped from under his wheels as they passed farmhouses at a rate of speed that made the occupants rush out of doors to stare after them. Outraged cries followed them when a barking dog was not quick enough to elude those blurring wheels and with a yelp of pain rolled over and over into the ditch. Three horses baiting by the roadside in front of another house stampeded as they whizzed by and raced them out of sight.

Edmonia now tried to expostulate with her mad cavalier. But Percivale said nothing to her almost tearful appeals. His whole attention was concentrated on keeping the thing within the limits of the road.

"Beats Lochinvar!" he yelled breathlessly as they grazed a watering tub.

Edmonia moaned. "You are crazy!" she cried. "Let's go home! Oh, take me home!" she commanded him.

"Home!" Percivale ground the word passionately between his teeth. "You will be lucky if you ever see home again. We shall never stop!" But even as he spoke he felt something respond to his groping fingers. The machine was obeying his controlling hand.

Joy and a relief that rolled over him like a wave made him shout aloud. Edmonia received this new demonstration as the exultation of a captor and commanded and implored by turn. But he did not at once diminish his speed. He knew now that Edmonia had not realized his impotence. He put the machine at a hill and plunged down the other side. Edmonia was clinging to him with wild promises.

He brought the car carefully to a standstill and climbed painfully to the ground. Edmonia was sobbing into her handkerchief. He hoped he was accepting the role of victorious knight modestly, but the iron was hot!

"Ted," he cried, "you've got to keep your promise, you know. I'm not much of a knight, and I don't know how to run"—

His unsuspected confession was interrupted for the second time as she suddenly, to his astonishment, smiled up at him through her tears.

"I never was driven like that in my life!" she remarked, with pride. "But—but let's go home in a buggy!"

"Not until we're married," said Percivale firmly.

Edmonia refused to continue in the car, however, so they walked on to the nearest town, where the minister's fee was the first of a series of more mundane charges which punctuated their homeward journey in the buggy.

But in his new joy, which was only enhanced by pecuniary interludes with the wrathful owners of slaughtered hens, the tearful mistress of an injured dog and damages due to the recovery of errant horses, Percivale made it a triumphal journey.

Why He Saved Them.

For weeks upon weeks the heavy rains descended upon the holiday resort of Lakeswash, and the proprietor of the Punt and Puntpole was looking very blue. Indeed, those two straw hatted, miserable looking objects out in the Lakeswash canoe were the only visitors of the season. The hotel proprietor gloomily watched their clumsy endeavors to navigate their tiny craft. Suddenly, plop, splosh! "Help!" In a moment the hotel proprietor had changed from a sluggish do-nothing to a frenzied rescuer. Putting out rapidly in a boat, he succeeded in reaching the terrified men just at the critical moment.

"Oh, thank you—thank you!" they cried as they scrambled into the boat.

"Don't thank me!" growled the hotel keeper. "Thank the weather! Visitors is so scarce this year we can't afford to let even the fools drown! I did it for your board and lodging!"—London Answers.

For a Loaf, All Right.

As the tramp looked at Mrs. Godard he felt a thrill of hope. Here was surely an easy and benevolently inclined person. "Could you gimme a dime to buy a loaf o' bread?" he whined.

Mrs. Godard's guileless soul looked out at him through her nearsighted eyes, and she fingered her purse hopefully.

"I have only a quarter here," she said, "and I'm really too tired to walk home."

"Sure, I can change it for you," said the tramp cheerfully as he took out a dime and a nickel, and not until Mrs. Godard was halfway home on the car did it occur to her that there was anything unusual in the transaction.—Youth's Companion.

Generous.

"What would you do if you went fishing and a whale were to bite your hook?"

"Make him a present of it."

Witchcraft.

"The sixteenth and seventeenth centuries," said John Fiske, "were the flourishing ages of the witchcraft delusion. Witchcraft in the early ages was considered one of the greatest of crimes, as much so as murder, robbery or any other serious offense against the law, and the belief in it was shared by the whole human race until the latter part of the seventeenth century.

"In England in 1664 two women were tried before Sir Matthew Hale, charged with bewitching several girls and a baby, and they were put to death, for at that time the evidence seemed perfectly rational. In 1615 in Genoa 500 people were burned to death on the charge of witchcraft. It was the proud boast of a noted executioner in northern Italy at this time that in fifteen years he had assisted in burning 900 persons charged with sorcery. In Scotland between 1560 and 1600 8,000 people were put to death, an average of 200 a year. The last execution for witchcraft in England took place in 1712, in Scotland in 1722, in Germany in 1749 and in Spain in 1781."

Crime and the Telephone.

From the beginning to the end of a transaction in crime the telephone comes into use serving both sides with equal fidelity says a writer in Appleton's Magazine. The thief uses it to determine which house he may safely rob. The man next door sees the burglar and calls up the police. The police arrive, catch the burglar and telephone for the Black Maria to take him to jail. The thief telephones a lawyer to defend him. The lawyer telephones for the bondsman to bail out his client, and the banker telephones the sheriff that the bondsman's check is good. When the day of trial comes the clerk of the court, being a kind gentleman, telephones to the burglar's lawyer; the sheriff telephones witnesses to be present. When the burglar is convicted and sentenced the sheriff uses long distance to tell the warden of the penitentiary when his prisoner will be delivered. After that the telephone line is kept hot by influential politicians petitioning the governor for a pardon.

An Embarrassing Moment.

The author of "Collections and Recollections" relates a personal experience of having said a "thing one would rather have left unsaid." Even after the lapse of twenty years, he adds, the recollection of the sensations of the moment turns him hot with chagrin.

A remarkably pompous clergyman, a diocesan inspector of schools, once showed me a theme on a Scriptural subject written by a girl who was trying to pass from the rank of a pupil teacher to the rank of schoolmistress. The theme was full of absurd mistakes, over which the inspector laughed uproariously.

"Well, what do you think of that?" he inquired when I handed back the paper.

"Oh," said I in perfectly good faith, "the mistakes are bad enough, but the writing is far worse. It really is a disgrace."

"The writing? What, my writing?" said the inspector. "I copied the theme out myself."

The Bread and Pipe Baker.

The lecturer at the cooking school sometimes enlivened her remarks with an anecdote.

"The eighteenth century baker," she said, "was a pipe cleaner as well, just as the barber a little earlier was a surgeon. Everybody in those days smoked clay pipes, provided, the same as cups or spoons, by the coffee houses. Well, each morning a waiter carried his master's stock of pipes—some hundred perhaps—to the nearest bakery. The baker would boil them out, then dip them in liquid lime, then bake them dry. They came out of the oven as sweet and white as new."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Popular Dye.

A small boy was one day sent for a pennyworth of indigo dye. He stopped to play marbles on the way and quite forgot what he was sent for. As he was determined to get it, he went into the chemist's shop and said to the assistant:

"What have people been dyeing with lately, please?"

"Influenza," was the answer.

"Ah! That must be it," said the boy. "Please give me a penn'orth"—London Illustrated Bits.

Saves Trouble.

"Why don't you come in occasionally between drinks," demanded the wife, "and see the play?"

"I don't need to," replied the bibulous husband. "The bartender is familiar with the plot, imitates the actors and also knows a lot of gossip about their personal and family affairs."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Enlightened.

"We all make blunders. I thought once I was a square peg when I was really a round one."

"How did you find out your mistake?"

"I got into a hole."—Boston Transcript.

The Drummer.

"I sometimes think," remarked the regular patron, "that the snare drummer should be the best musician in the theater orchestra."

"He usually is," said the drummer.—Chicago Tribune.

Nothing.

Jenkins declares that where he was in Switzerland the mercury often dropped to zero at night."

"That's nothing."

"What's nothing?"

"Zero."

HIS ALIBI.

It Cleared the Accused, but Furnished an Odd Sequel.

A kindly respectable gentleman arrived at York one evening with luggage and dined well, went to bed early, rose in good time and had a substantial breakfast. After this meal he casually asked the landlord if there was anything of special interest in York. "The assizes are on, but I do not know if there is anything particularly interesting in the list," was the response.

"Thanks," drawled the stranger. "I'll look in if I happen to pass the court and see."

He did look in and heard a fellower of Dick Turpin in the dock, charged with highway robbery, pleading his innocence vehemently to a stolid judge and jury, who, with firm faces, did not look as if they placed much credence in the prisoner's profession of innocence. Suddenly the prisoner caught sight of the stranger, who had strolled in from the hotel out of curiosity.

"Here, thank God, is some one who can prove my innocence!" cried the prisoner, pointing to the stranger, who was aghast at becoming the center of interest so unexpectedly.

He seemed astonished and shook his head.

"Oh, yes," cried the accused; "just think! You were at Dover—a long way from here. You came out of the Ship hotel, and I took your luggage in a wheelbarrow to the Calais packet at the pier. That was the day I am supposed to have committed the crime up here."

The stranger seemed bewildered. The judge, struck with the tragic earnestness of the prisoner, questioned the stranger, but the latter could not assist him much.

"Have you any memoranda," asked the judge—"any memorandum of your movements on that day?"

"I am a merchant," replied the stranger, "connected with an old established firm of bankers in London. I travel a lot and of course enter everything in my books. Here are my keys if the court cares to send to my hotel and bring here the books out of my case. I can easily settle the point."

The books were fetched. The gentleman had been in Dover that day and had left by the Calais packet. This was sufficient for the judge and jury. The prisoner was acquitted.

Comic sequel: Both the "banker from London" and the highwayman were placed in the same dock shortly afterward charged with daring burglaries in the neighborhood.—Harry Furniss in London Standard.

The Usher Woke Up.

At a certain county court the judge is in his private capacity a kind hearted man. The usher of the court is aged—very aged—but as he had been a faithful servant for many years he was retained in that capacity. One morning he fell asleep in court and began to snore. The noise he made naturally disturbed court proceedings, but the judge displayed great tact in dealing with the matter.

"Usher Jones," he called out loudly, "some one is snoring."

The usher woke up. He jumped to his feet and glared ferociously round.

"Silence!" he roared. "There must be no snoring in court!"—Exchange.

Without Imagination.

There is a certain New York business man of a rather waggish disposition who contends that his wife has no imagination.

At dinner one night he chanced to mention a tragic circumstance he had read in the evening paper on his way home. A passenger on a transatlantic steamer had fallen overboard in mid-ocean and had never been seen again.

"Was he drowned?" asked the wife.

"Of course not," answered the irrepressible hubby, "but he sprained his ankle, I believe."—Lippincott's.

Heartless Gamblers.

The rage for gambling at White's and Almack's clubs in London in other days led to most outrageous betting, as to which Walpole tells what he calls a good tale: A man dropped down in a fit before the door and was carried inside. The club instantly made bets as to whether he would die or not, and when a doctor was called in to attend him his ministrations were interfered with by the members because, they said, these would affect the fairness of the bets.

Pitiful Sales.

Kits of sailors lost at sea are sold regularly at auction at the Albert docks in London. The sale provides many a pitiful sight. Most of the lots are contained in the regular sailor's sea chest, all marked with the name of the ship from which they come. It is not unusual for those who have lost friends or relatives at sea to attend these auctions, and there are times when the first news of such a loss comes through the recognition of familiar objects.

A Fair Offer.

Small boy (who has been watching amateur gunner's failures for an hour or more)—Say, mister.

Sportsman—Well, what is it, boy?

"Gimme a nickel an' a start as far as the fence an' you kin have one at me."—Life.

Reformed.

"I hear your son is something of an aviator, Mrs. Comeup."

"Well, to tell the truth, he was a bit that way, but he's taken the pledge."—Baltimore American.

Flowers are the sweetest things that God ever made and forgot to put a soul into.—Beecher.

Large Users and Small Users

A WELL DEVELOPED telephone system is the consensus of many desires, not the narrow reflection of the wishes of some individual or group of individuals.

In planning such a service it is necessary to have many different classes of rates, so that it may be placed within the means of everyone. Each subscriber to the service, be he large user or small user, adds strength and value to the whole.

To realize this interdependence—to emphasize the value of a service connecting all classes of users—and to offer its product (telephone service) in lots suited to the needs of all classes—this has been the effort of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

That its forecast of possibilities has been verified, that its campaign of education has been effective, and that its distribution of classes of service to meet varied requirements has been approved, needs no argument other than the repetition of this conclusive fact—310,000 telephones connected to its system.

If you are not represented among the 310,000 telephones now connected with the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company's system, let us show you how a telephone would be helpful.

If you don't need one your wife may. Count the steps it will save, the comfort it will bring, the emergency service it will render, and you will say a residence telephone at our rates is an economical investment.

You Should Own a Home

The ultimate aim of every man should be to own the home he occupies.

The country dweller rents a farm only until such time as he can afford to buy one. There is no reason why the suburban man should not do the same.

If Winchester real estate were unreasonably high and rents were low, it might pay to rent, but conditions here are quite the reverse.

Rents are high, while I can sell you a place at an inside figure.

Luck Largely A Matter of Common Sense

In nine cases out of ten when a man is called "lucky," it is simply a case of common sense and foresight.

To illustrate this point, take a big fire in which several are involved in loss. Those who are fully insured are termed "lucky," while those who were uninsured are called "unlucky."

Is it luck in such a case? Most assuredly not; just common sense on the part of those who had protected themselves by insurance.

Consider your own case. If you are not fully protected, see me at once.

WILL NOT ISSUE PERMITS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Rule 13 of the rules and regulations adopted by the State Board of Health to prevent the pollution of the Town's water supply, provides that "no person shall, unless permitted by a written permit of the Water and Sewer Board of the Town of Winchester, fish" in the reservoirs, constituting the Town's water supply.

The Water and Sewer Board believe that there should be no fishing in these reservoirs, and therefore will not issue permits to fish therein.

Will you kindly print this letter in your next issue, and oblige,

THE WATER AND SEWER BOARD OF WINCHESTER.

Winchester, April 26, 1909.

WILLIAM R. SMITH.

William R. Smith, aged 43 years, died very suddenly of heart failure on Sunday at Townsend. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Smith of No. 51 Cutting street, and for many years made his home in this town with them.

He was born in Boston, Nov. 28, 1865, and attended the Allston schools and the Brighton High School.

Funeral services were held from his father's house on Wednesday at 3 p. m. The burial was in Wildwood cemetery.

PROPOSED NEW KIND OF FISHING PERMITS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I do not fish at all but I like to have my boys fish for amusement and I like to see others fish, as I like to see them play base ball, in a cleanly, decent manner. If I am any kind of a fisherman, I might be called a theoretical or piazza fisherman. As such allow me to propose a way that fishing permits might be issued for a limited amount of fishing to inhabitants of Winchester only. I know where this plan has been enforced for several years and it works well.

Let all who apply for a fishing permit pay a small sum to defray the cost of issuing a specially printed license. Oblige them also to furnish a photograph or tintype of themselves officially stamped or marked by the chief of police whom the Water Board might delegate to issue permits, the picture to be permanently attached to the permit and every fisherman be required to show it on demand of the officers guarding the reservoirs. This would prevent transfering permits.

Delegate the issuing of restricted fishing permits to the town police force under some such arrangement as above outlined and there is no doubt in my mind but what Winchester could have one more source of enjoyment for its inhabitants certainly equal to base ball, basket ball, dancing, theatricals, boating, etc., many of which are partly or wholly cared for at public expense. No place I know of has such a splendid chance to enjoy piscatorial amusement as Winchester with its splendid large reservoirs wholly owned by the town and wholly under its control, the State Board of Health allowing fishing. In licensing closely guarded fishing Winchester would be only carrying out its original idea when the water works were established and stocked with fish which have been maintained at public expense ever since.

FAIR PLAY.

BASE BALL.

BROOKLINE 7 WINCHESTER 5

Brookline High defeated Winchester High in an interesting game last Thursday on Manchester Field by the score of 7 to 5. Brookline won the game in the first two innings by some timely hitting. Obregon went into the box at the third inning and pitched great ball, shutting the visitors out without a tally for the remainder of the game. Winchester gathered in a few runs at a time but could not overcome the visitor's lead. Once with the bases full and one down Winchester was unable to score. In the ninth inning things got exciting with a man on second and third, but Carr, the Brookline captain and well known twirler stepped into the box and fanned the next two men. Matthews had some hard balls come his way and made two sensational plays. He also shone in his hitting.

MAY PARTY.

The annual May Festival will take place to-morrow in the Town Hall at 2.30 p. m., and promises to be a most brilliant affair, judging from the earnest work of the committee of ladies in charge.

It is hoped that the townspeople will turn out in a large number so as to encourage the ladies, who work so hard each year, to make this an annual affair to please the children of the town. There will be many pretty dances including the crowning of the tiny King and Queen, followed by flower girls and pages, also sunbonnet babies. General dancing will follow with refreshments.

Tickets on sale at both Knight's and Abare's drug stores.

"THE SERVANT IN THE HOUSE."

An intellectual treat is the only term that can be applied to the lecture given by Alfred H. Brown on "The Servant in the House" at the Calumet Hall, Wednesday evening.

His conception of the ethical side of this play as intended by the author Mr. Kennedy, was seemingly most lucidly understood by the rapt attention of the audience which comfortably filled the hall.

The keynote, let it be understood, of this play, is as explained by the lecturer, not a charge against any rank, if such a term can be applied, in the church or against any one denomination but is intended to explain, that to apply the true Christian spirit as taught by the New Testament to the present day conditions, the drain must not only be cleaned out under the Vicar's study but must be carried still furthur and clean out all that which is covered up by the Church and not until then will the true socialism be realized in the Brotherhood of man.

It seems a pity that our true modern intellectualizm will not prevent the narrow mindedness of some who believe that to hear a lecture which may in any way touch upon their church principles will be forever a polution, whereas should they form part of the audience and give their views freely they might in course of the discussion find therein something that would be of vast benefit.

Too much credit cannot be given to Mr. Brown, but a part also must be extended to the ladies who conceived the idea and worked to bring it about.

Those who attended no doubt realize the benefit they received and can in proportion realize how much those who did not, missed.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

At a meeting of The Fortnightly last Monday the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved—names of new applicants for membership were presented and several names were read which have been taken from the waiting list and added to the club membership to fill vacancies which have recently occurred. It is suggested that all members who are to move from town and so sever their connection with the club will send in a written resignation, thus giving a chance to the many on the waiting list. Names of delegates to the Federation meeting at Springfield will be announced next week.

DARWINIAN BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

Interest at the Calumet Club centered about the bowling alleys last Saturday night when the roll-off of the qualifying teams in the Darwinian tournament was held. The winners of the match were Messrs. Elmer P. Randlett and George W. Purrington. Joseph E. Gendron and Charles E. Kinsley were second and George S. Littlefield and Benj. F. Blank third. The success of the tournament will probably lead to the holding of a team tournament next month.

CONFERENCE OF TEACHERS.

Winchester was represented at a meeting last Friday evening, April 23, at which steps looking toward the organization of a federation of teacher's clubs of greater Boston were taken. This was held at the residence of Ernst Makechnie, 238 Elm Street, West Somerville. The conference was called by Mr. Makechnie, who was one of the organizers of the Winchester Teachers' Club, for the purpose of discussing which are the best features of the club activity, what legislation may be desirable to prescribe uniform systems of bookkeeping in the school department of all towns and cities, and what the possibility of cooperation among the clubs.

Among those present were Principal Frederick A. Pitcher, Chelsea; Charles H. Wescott, Malden; Miss Harriet P. Ryder, Arlington; Miss A. Marion Merrill, and Miss Minnie S. Turner, Somerville; and Frederick W. Coburn, Winchester, New England Correspondent of The School Journal. It was expected that delegates from teachers' clubs of Cambridge and Medford would be present, but circumstances prevented

In explaining the reasons for calling such a conference Mr. Makechnie stated that several teachers' clubs have grown in response to a suggestion made in a report of the State Board of Education. Some have taken one form of organization, some another. Their social usefulness has been proved. There is a question how far they can be used as a means of protecting the teachers, when necessary, against injury from sinister political influences. It is, at all events, important that the associations which have appeared in the neighborhood should be better acquainted with each other's work. That was the object of the present informal meeting in Somerville.

Mr. Pitcher gave a succinct and interesting account of the formation of the Chelsea teachers' club, showing that the work of the association is primarily social but that it had a somewhat political origin at a time when there was a delay in payment of the teachers' salaries. An immediate effect of the organization was that money was somehow found to pay the arrears. After the great fire of a year ago the teachers' club was made by the board of control solely responsible for disbursing necessities among the school children. If a child needed a pair of shoes he got them without red tape through the treasurer of the teachers' association. Socially the club has been very useful in making the teachers acquainted with each other.

The Malden teachers' club, Mr. Westcott stated, by its constitution holds at least four meetings a year. There is an annual outing in the spring at which ceremony is dropped and everybody has a good time. Under the auspices of the club classes for teachers in various subjects have been developed with marked success. The purposes of the organization are primarily friendly and educational. It does not ordinarily concern itself with politics, although on one occasion its members got together and defeated a candidate for the City Council who was obnoxious to the teachers.

Miss Ryder stated that no teachers' club has yet been organized in Arlington, but that there should seemingly be a place for one.

Incidents from the history of the two Somerville organizations, the general association and the association of women, were related by Miss Merrill and Miss Turner. The meeting was especially interested in a description of the round table conferences in which about 150 Somerville teachers have been engaged this past winter in utilizing the special talents of members. What the Somerville teachers' association has accomplished toward securing living salaries was explained carefully. The work of the Winchester teachers' club was described by Mr. Makechnie.

It was unanimously agreed that an attempt should be made to secure the cooperation of as many teachers' clubs as possible in arranging for a meeting at some convenient place next October, and Mr. Makechnie was authorized to collect constitutions and by-laws of these associations, to gather information from the office of the State Board and otherwise make preliminary arrangements for organizing the federation, if it is found desirable to start one.

THE FARAWAY PRINCESS AND MOVING OUT.

Is to be given next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in Lyceum Hall by the Artemis Club. The proceeds are to be given to the Boston Children's Aid Society. The club will be assisted by Miss Amelia Wulkop, Mr. Erastus B. Badger, Mr. Henry Gross Dodge and Mr. Norman R. Sturgis. There has been secured through the interest of Mr. W. H. W. Bicknell an orchestra of ten pieces which will pay the following selections: Jupiter, overture by Hoffmann; Venetian Love Song, Nevin; Selections from La Boheme, Tuccini; Waltz, Epernelle Ivresse, Gamme; and March of the Marines, Brooke.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I am the only plumber in Winchester and as near as I can find out in Massachusetts, that has been examined twice The powers that be, decided that it was necessary to examine me because I did a piece of work in a manner just as it had been done ever since we had a plumbing law—under several Boards of Health and as many Inspectors, the law has not been changed, simply the interpretation to make an owner throwaway good stock and buy new which pleases some plumbers. But the way that I have done business was to save owners when I could, and it is proof that it has been appreciated when you look back a few years and see me, going around lugging a kit, with a kid for help. My pay roll last year was nearly $10,000—I have plumbed most of the best residences and public buildings for the last ten years and expect to do a few more. I have a brand new license. I would say to the timid ones, and I want to thank those dear friends who have sent their business my way and used their influence for my good, after reading such very pleasant reports not called for at all last fall.

I want to thank the gentleman who was taken to court away from his business to prove my wrong doings when the powers had my signature that such work had been done by my order, and still this same man has given me all his work since said inconvience. I trust I may live to repay him in some way for this kind demonstration of The Golden Rule.

And to those who have said things around the corner that they wouldn't say near, I would say that there is a "Golden Rule" to be learned.

We have had plenty of business and trust it will continue and I assure you that you will get the same square deal in the future as in the past. J. A. Larraway & Co., still at the old stand, by the Aberjona.

TEACHERS ENJOYED BANQUET.

The first banquet of the Winchester Teachers' Association was held in the gymnasium of the High School last evening and proved to be one of the most enjoyable of the many social functions given by this club during the year.

About 70 members and invited guests were present. The gymnasium was attractively decorated with red crepe and potted plants and flowers by members of the committee, and with three long table set for the feast was transformed into a pleasing dining room.

Sub-master Benjamin D. May of the High School, Vice President of the association, acted as toastmaster. The principal speaker of the evening was Mr. J. E. Burke of Boston. Others were Prof. Charles F. A. Currier of the School Committee, Supt. Schuyler F. Herron, Miss Mary A. Lyons, Secretary of the association, and Miss Elizabeth D. Spencer, principal of the Prince school.

During the evening solos were most acceptably given by Prof. Albert E. Brown, supervisor of music, Miss Florence Chase and Miss Gertrude Jameson. Readings were given by Miss Brennan of Somerville. At the conclusion of the speaking and musical program the floor was cleared and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

CONCERT BY THE HIGH SCHOOL CHORUS.

On Friday evening, May 21st, the High School Chorus of 126 voices will give its annual concert in the Town Hall. The chorus will be assisted by a soloist and orchestra. It is interesting to note the program. The first part will be made up of miscellaneous numbers. Beethoven's "Heavens Resound," "The Beautiful Blue Danube Waltzes" of Strauss, "All through the Night," an old Welsh melody, and "Build thee more Stately Mansions" by Farwell, with a number by the assisting artists, will be given.

The second part will consist of two Cantatas, the first being the Village Blacksmith, a very melodious and beautiful setting of Longfellow's poem, arranged for chorus and orchestra.

The most pretentious number however, is "The Gallia," a lamentation for soprano, chorus and orchestra, written by Ch. Gounod. The Gallia is a very dissonant work and is rarely given excepting by a more mature organization. Its first production was at the Albert Hall, London, at the opening of the International Exposition, May 1st, 1871.

It is to be hoped that the Town Hall will be filled. The High School Chorus has worked one period a week on the above program since the early part of December.

GLIMPSES OF FRENCH LIFE.

The Fortnightly was highly entertained, last Monday, by a lecture on Glimpses of French Life given by Miss Anna Seton Schmidt.

France has never come so near to America, she said, as in the last few years. Still there are many fundamental, as well as superficial differences between the two countries—mostly, confined to customs and habits. The different sections of France—North, South, East and West—vary as much in their customs and habits, as do the different sections of our own country. Mr. Cambon has said that, unfortunately, France and America understand very little of each other's family life.

French mothers are the most devoted in the world. The daughters of the Bourgeoise are never separated from their mothers till marriage, which is arranged by the parents of the young man and young woman. Sometimes, the couple have never seen each other before. The girl is asked if she objects, which privilege is now permitted her, though formerly it was not. The element of love is not supposed to enter into the arrangement till after marriage.

Those mothers whose time is much devoted to social functions provide governesses for their daughters, who watch over them with a mother's care. Boys are also carefully looked after, and always have the greatest respect for their mothers. Bouguereau, the artist, falling in love with one of his pupils, an American girl, waited ten years—till his mother's death—before marrying her, because of the objection of his mother to the match.

In France, there are 500,000 laborers, 300,000 of whom are women. As the latter do not expect to be supported, after marriage, by their husbands, and have to go work early and return late, their children are sent into the country just after birth, their name and date of birth being first recorded at a government bureau. These Baby Farms form a regular occupation. The children are well cared for and brought up in a hygienic way. The cows which furnish them milk are scrubbed, disinfected, and milked under the cleanest conditions. The charge for the board and care of a baby near Paris is from $6.00 to $8.00 per month, while, in some places farther out of town, it is as low as $4.00 per month. The young woman who acted as model for Millet in his famous painting of the Angelus had raised forty-two of these babies.

A man must wear mourning two years for a deceased wife. If, in the meantime, he marries again, he must continue his mourning the prescribed time, as must also his bride, who puts on mourning, immediately after the wedding.

The French are among the most frugal people in the world. Nothing is wasted. In apartment houses the tenants put out daily what they do not wish to use—food, clothing, etc. The concierge pack these things in wooden boxes, which the "rag-pickers" call for, and sort at their homes. Even dead cats and dogs are sold for their skins, and false hair re-made into switches, etc. Today, France is, per capita, the richest country in the world.

Funerals are classed according to the degree of pomp desired. If one wishes the most elaborate display, with gorgeous trappings of horses, one has simply to order a funeral of the first class, more expensive than any we have in this country. A funeral of the seventh or eighth class is a very simple affair. A lengthy invitation is sent to friends from all the surviving relatives of the deceased, aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, cousins, grandchildren and even great-grandchildren. Everyone attending the ceremony leaves a visiting card, and afterwards, receives a note from one of the relatives of the deceased.

The French people, even to the lowest ranks, have a great love of art and appreciation of beauty. The working woman hurries to finish her meagre luncheon that she may have more time to enjoy the paintings in some picture gallery before going back to work. The love of beauty brings happiness to the poorest.

ORIGINAL SONG SUNG AT BANQUET.

The banquet of the N. E. Association of the Alumni of The Phillips Exeter Academy which was held at the American House, Boston, last Friday night was attended by a number of Winchester men, and was one of the most successful affairs yet held in the history of the Association.

During the evening an original song, written expressly for the occasion by Mr. Charles E. L. Wingate of this town, was sung. The song, which was written to music, was as follows:

GLORY OF OLD EXETER.

For the glory of old Exeter,
For the glory of P. E. A.,
With fond memories we assemble
And our heartfelt tributes pay
To the spirit of the dear old school
That calls for honor's sway.
Then proclaim high her fame,
For the power of her name
Will uplift her sons alway
Exeter! Exeter! Glory to P. E. A.!

With a true love never wav'ring
Turn our loyal hearts to thee,
To old Exeter that has taught us
How to win life's victory.
'Tis a love that will unite us all
Forever and for aye.
So then sing with a ring,
From our hearts that will cling
To the dear old P. E. A.
Exeter! Exeter! Glory to P. E. A.!

Among those from Winchester who were present were Dr. H. S. Olmsted, Guy M. Kinsley and Mr. Wingate.

WINCHESTER CHOIR BOYS LOST FIRST GAME.

For a number of years a ball team has been organized among the choir boys of the Church of the Epiphany, they playing a schedule of games with similar nines from nearby churches. The first game for this season of the local boys was played on Manchester Field last Saturday afternoon. The youngsters put up a first class exhibition, and their games have drawn larger crowds each season, that of Saturday being a record breaker. The opposing team was from All Saint's Church, Ashmont, and the home boys, although they made 10 runs in the 8th, got trimmed 18 to 12.

Raymond Young is captain of the Epiphany team and John Higgins manager and the line-up is as follows:

Raymond Young, p
Franklin Lane, c
Wallace McElhiney, 1b
Clinton Peabody, 2b
Hart Furbush, ss
Paul Keith, 3b
Loring Pitcher, lf
John Higgins, cf
Elmer Huger, rf
Fred Morse and Langworthy Burwell substitutes.

The boys play the next game of their schedule this Saturday with the choir boys of St. Paul's, Boston, on Manchester Field.

SYSTEM NOW COMPLETE.

The installation of the Mutual Aid System, as it is called, that is, the system by which apparatus from Winchester may be summoned to this city or visa versa, immediately, was completed Friday evening and now by a special signal from any box in this city or Winchester the enigne or apparatus needed may be immediately summoned, for as soon as the button is pressed at the box the automatic alarm at the Central fire station is sounded and the driver of the apparatus knows by that signal where the fire is and where the box from which the signal was given is located. The signal can only be given by the chief or assistant engineer of the department.—Woburn Times.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The Dutch government subsidizes the temperance societies of Holland to the extent of 20 000 gulden a year. Sixty-one towns made grants of city money for the same purpose, reorganizing the value to the community of educational campaign prosecuted by these organizations. When will American cities arouse themselves to the need already seen by the supposedly slow Hollanders? It is a new version of the old story of the hare and the tortoise. In this as in many other respects progressive America is in the rear of the procession.

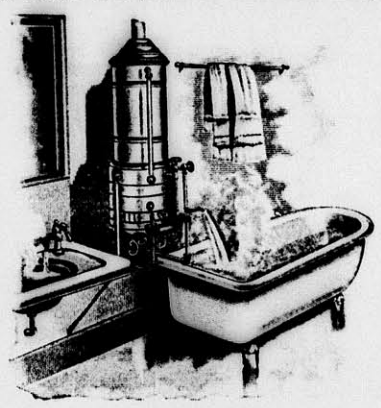

So much has been said about the recent elections in Vermont when thirteen dry towns became wet and only twelve wet ones voted dry that it may be well to note that the aggregate population of the recreant thirteen is but 21,348, while the twelve total 26,566. The gain is still on the dry side, regretable as is the backsliding.

Santa Fe voted no license this month, showing that the recent reform movement is by no means dead. New Mexico may come into the Union as a prohibition state. Certainly a very great change has come over that "wild" territory since it first began clamoring for Statehood.

The Middlesex County Convention of the W. C. T. U. has been called for May 20, at Westford. Delegates from the local Union were appointed at the last meeting.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Littlefield & Tilden, the well known counsellors-at-law, have taken chambers in the Old South Building, Boston.

A correspondent of the Hingham Journal says: "It may be a matter of interest to your readers to know of a deposit in the Hingham Institution for Savings, which was made in 1837. One hundred dollars was deposited at that time and no other deposit has ever been made on the account. Twelve hundred and forty dollars have been withdrawn from the account, and the balance now amounts to eleven hundred ninety-three dollars and forty-seven cents, making a total accumulation of interest of twenty-three hundred thirty dollars and forty-eight cents on a deposit of only one hundreddollars."

On Saturday noon a grass fire at the head of Park avenue was the cause of a telephone alarm to the fire department A resident in the vicinity had set fire to a pile of leaves, the high wind causing the fire to spread beyond control. There was no damage.

The U. S. M. Relief Association has elected these officers, many of whom are well known in Winchester: President—M. B. Kaven. First Vice President—George H. Vose. Second Vice President—Thomas Lund, Secretary—W. H. Carrico, Treasurer—George F. Eaton. Board of Directors for two years—Henry A. Webber, W. H. Borden and A. R. Braden.

A hurried call for the doctor used to mean, piling out of bed, rushing to the stable, harnessing the horse and driving madly out into the darkness. There was always imminent danger of a frightened animal and of an overturned buggy. Even under the best of conditions the horse-drawn vehicle is risky, not to say uncleanly. Electric vehicles are now eliminating these troubles. The hurried telephone call may be quickly answered, and, without depending on the driver, the physician, ready for the most serious calls that may be made upon him, can step into his machine, without delaying to harness the horse and "hitch up," touch a lever and speed out into the night. The power is ready at a finger's touch. The physician is shut in from the chill night air or the driving storm and at the end of his journey steps into the sick room as fresh and clean as though he had stepped directly from his office.

A TALENTED SINGER.

As was briefly announced last week, Mr. Albert Edmund Brown, supervisor of music in the public schools, sang selections before the Woman's Club of Fitchburg. The Sentinal of that city said: Mr. Brown is an accomplished vocalist, a man prominent in Boston's musical circles and who is a well known concert and oratorio singer of that city.

Although Mr. Brown was already known to Fitchburg through one or two minor engagements and through several vocal pupils, he conducting a a studio here one day each week, this was his first appearance in this city before a representative musical audience, and the success that attended his efforts denoted unusual appreciation and the instantaneous recognition of a thorough artist. His voice is a basso cantante, of wide range, rich and powerful, and was displayed to excellent advantage in the several numbers that he presented.

The first song was Dudley Buck's arrangement of the "Bendouin love song," with "The pretty creature," a lighter and favorite song with many, as an encore. The singer further delighted his hearers with Damrosch's musical setting of Rudyard Kipling's "Danny Deever," and Korbay's arrangement of an old Hungarian folk song "Shepherd see thy horse's foaming mane."

While Mr. Brown possesses a voice that is rugged and pleasing, being capable of the most exacting requirements, it is his superb artistry and dramatic force that provides the chief charm of his singing. His diction is a study in itself, being nearly faultless, while his phrasing and interpretation is both intelligent and in good taste. He is both naturally and artistically equipped to appeal to the finer instincts of the true musician and his efforts gave rare pleasure to all who heard him Wednesday afternoon.

TREMONT THEATRE.

Boston's great admiration for "The Servant in the House" and the Henry Miller Associate Players has been attested by three weeks of large and interested audiences at the Tremont Theatre. The fifth week of this delightful engagement finds the attendance large and more enthusiastic than before.

No theatre lovers' experience is complete until he has made the acquaintance of the gentle Manson, the terrible Drain Man, the avaricious Bishop, the wise child, Mary, the remorse striken vicar, the idolatrous wife, Martha, and the conventional page boy, Rogers. No seven personages in a play ever presented more striking contrasts of characters than these, and the episodes of drama, comedy, tragedy, pathos, satire and exaltation through which they pass make them living realities to the spectators, particularly when interpreted with the supreme art of Walter Hampden, Tyrone Power, Arthur Lewis, Mabel Moore, Frank Mills, Edith Wynne Matthison and Ben Field.

Matinees will be played Wednesdays and Saturdays throughout this engagement.

GAIETY THEATRE.

It's an old saying—"Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep, and you weep alone." When one sees an old familiar title like "Harry Bryant's Extravaganza" on the Bill-Boards of the city one knows that he is entitled to a good evening's entertainment. Mr. Bryant comes to the Gaiety Theatre the week of May 3 with one of the best all round companies of entertainers he has ever carried. He will be well surrounded with clever people such as Billy Cook, the German Senator, Evan's, Parent and Johnson, James Darmody and several other notable comedians. Among the women of the company are Clara Berg, Elizabeth Mayne, Lillian Seiger, Flossie Hughes, Edith Bryant, and Marthe Hableman.

One big feature of the vaudeville olio will be the "bounding" act by the famous Busch brothers.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The week of May 3rd at Keith's Theatre will be notable for two of the biggest productions that has probably ever been seen in vaudeville. The first is "The Top o' th' World" Dancers and the Collie Ballet in "Kriss Kringle's Dream."

The second big feature will be in the dramatic line. It is called "The Van Dyck," and will be presented by Mr. Hunter and a capable company. It is a one act classic, probably the most pretentious literary work ever presented in vaudeville.

The vaudeville features of the bill will be one of the same high order including Melville & Higgins in their humorous sketch; Will H. Fox; Carroll Johnson; O'Brien Havel & Company in a sketch that has been making a great success; Monie Mine, Newhold and Carroll and others.

FILIAL DUTY.

An Example From the Chinese of a Good Little Boy.

In China the "Book of Filial Duty" has been employed to instruct the young for the last 2,500 years. In it are twenty-four examples for good boys. What these examples are like may be understood from the story of Wu Meng, example No. 20. Wu Meng, it seems, was very obedient to his parents. One day at the age of eight he noticed with pain that the mosquitoes annoyed his parents while they were trying to sleep. Presently he hit upon a plan to rescue them.

Says the author of this classic: "The buzzing of the mosquitoes sounds like 'ying ying,' and their united hum is almost equal to thunder. His tired parents are reclining on their bed, their countenances already sunk in slumber. Legions of mosquitoes fiercely attack them, alternately retreating and advancing. The insects disturb the dreaming sleepers, and with annoyance they toss from side to side.

"Wu sees them sucking his parents' blood, which causes his heart to grieve. His flesh, he thinks, can be easily pierced, but that of his parents is hard to penetrate. Lying on the bed, he threw off his clothes, and soon, feeling the pain of their attacks, he cried, 'I have no dread of you, nor have you any reason to fear me!

"'Although I have a fan, I will not use it, nor will I strike you with my hand. I will lie very quiet and let you gorge to the full.'"

Thus did the parents of Wu Meng get a chance to sleep in peace.

COLOMBIAN ETIQUETTE.

Daily Handshaking and Greeting Consume a Lot of Time.

It was the third or fourth day out from Santa Marta, Colombia, and early in the morning when one of the South American passengers came on deck. Another South American arose from his deck chair, extended his hand and as the men shook hands inquired after the health of the newcomer, his wife and his children.

As they had parted company only about eight hours before in the smoking room, this seemed like unnecessary courtesy. The observer noticed that this happened in the case of all the Colombians on board, so he asked one man about it.

"It is a custom of the country," said he. "On the occasion of meeting a person for the first time each day it is etiquette to shake hands and to make inquiries about the health of the person so greeted and of his relatives. It would not be considered polite to do otherwise."

Continuing, this man told of taking a walk one day in Bogota with a merchant of the place. They were bent on business and were to cover a distance that might be made rather easily in ten minutes. Because of the necessary stops to make the customary inquiries and to shake hands with friends of the merchant the trip took nearly an hour.—New York Sun.

The Drawback.

Being eager to know how his offspring, Haymow Junior, was getting along in the big metropolis, Haymow senior one day repaired thither from his rural habitat and sought information of his brother, long since established in the city.

"Waal," said Haymow senior, "what do you hear about Ebenezer?"

"Oh, I understand," remarked the young hopeful's uncle, "that he is invaluable in his new job."

"I swan!"

"Moreover, I understand that the boss simply can't do without him."

"How you talk!"

"And Ebenezer 'll be a partner within a year or so, according to what I hear from the same source."

Haymow senior stroked his beard, highly satisfied.

"By the way, who told you all this about Ebenezer?" he inquired.

"Ebenezer."

"Oh!"—New York Times.

Mixed Ownership.

A countryman, having been summoned to appear before the magistrate for not having a sign on his cart, was in due course brought before him. The magistrate asked him if he had anything to say for himself, and he replied that he had a difficult question to ask which he could not solve himself.

"The question is this," he said. "The wheels of the cart belonged to John the miller, and the body of the cart belongs to the vicar, and the bag of old bones (meaning the horse) belongs to me. Now, gentlemen, if you can tell me what name I can put on it I will have it done immediately."

He was let off.—London Answers.

Credit.

The suffragette raised her right hand.

"Give woman the credit she deserves," she cried, "and where would man be?"

"If she got all the credit she wanted, he'd be in the poorhouse," sneered a coarse person in the rear of the hall.—Chicago News.

Comparative.

"You think Jinks is a better conversationalist than Smith? Why, neither one of them ever says anything sensible."

"I know, but it takes Smith longer to say it."—Exchange.

Then the Trouble Started.

The Husband—Well, say what you will, my dear, you'll find worse men than me in the world. The Wife—Oh, Tom, how can you be so bitter?—London Sketch.

THE FISHING QUESTION.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It seems that the question of fishing on our reservoirs is not yet settled. It was expected that the State Board of Health would settle the question, but they failed to do so, evidently seeing no harm in properly regulated fishing. The matter is now up to our Water Board. I would suggest a solution of the difficulty, which is this:—Allow fishing only on the middle reservoir, say on Wednesdays and Saturdays, no person being given the privilege unless he has a printed official permit from the Water Board. I am not in favor of allowing fishing on the North or South reservoirs. The water in the middle reservoir has to travel a long distance before it reaches the gate house ot the South reservoir, if it ever does—indeed during the summer the water does not get out of the Middle reservoir.

FAIR SPORT.

THE MAY STRAND MAGAZINE.

The May Strand is an especially good number containing excellent fiction by Hall Caine, Conan Doyle, W. W. Jacobs and others less famous. The articles deal with such widely different subjects as "Mountaineering Tragedies," "The Whirligig Beetle," "Mazes and How to Thread Them" and "The Light Side of Finance." Alma-Tadema, R. A., the famous artist of Greek subjects, contributes some chapters of "My Reminiscences" which are illustrated with many of his best-known pictures. An amusing story by Lloyd Williams, regarding a trained donkey is embellished with some inimitable sketches by the animal artist J. A. Shepherd.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured

with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials free.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Augustus Pitou offers as an attraction at the Boston Theatre beginning May 3 Chauncey Olcott in his new play "Ragged Robin," a romance of Ireland in the early part of the last century. The play has been wonderfully successful throughout the country and is credited with being one of the daintiest and most beautiful vehicles that Manager Pitou has ever provided for his star. It is a tale of a wandering minstrel, the son of a titled land owner, who has been driven from home by the false accusation of a crime.

Manager Pitou has given "Ragged Robin" a splendid production in the way of costumes and scenic effects, and there is an excellent cast composed of such players as Alma Belwin, Clara Rainford, Lillian Claire, Alice Farrell, Josie Claflin, Mark Price, Andrew O'Neil, Gerome Edwards, George Brennan and others. Mr. Olcott has a group of new and catchy songs and there is some beautiful incidental music composed by Frederick Knight Logan, formerly musical director for Maude Adams. Regular matinees will be on Wednesday and Saturday.

Not for Winchester.

Eugene Foss says that only through a Greater Boston can Boston be saved from the spoilsmen. Mr. Foss should remember, however, that the cities and towns within the proposed limits of Greater Boston, will hesitate for a long time before they will give their consent to be drawn down into Boston's political and grafting mire. Winchester has good, clean government, the citizens receiving full value for every dollar expended by the town in public improvements. As an outlying ward of Boston, Winchester would cut a sorry figure.

Fishing In The Reservoirs.

The Water and Sewer Board say in another column, that they "believe that there should be no fishing in these reservoirs, and therefore will not issue permits to fish therein."

The fishermen of Winchester will obey this request, but what of the Stoneham, Malden, and other fishermen, who made such a nuisance on the reservoirs last winter? Fishing is going on daily, and last Sunday a number of men and boys were seen angling for fish on the opposite side of the reservoirs. It is only fair to Winchester men and boys that a stop be put to this, or else allow all an equal opportunity to share in the fishing. The Board should post warning signs, fix a penalty and request the park police to enforce the rule. Apparently fishing is now done because of ignorance regarding the new rule of the Board.

A NEW INDUSTRY.

One and one-half acres of land known as the Russell property, located on Main street near the Woburn line, has passed into the hands of the Chapman Gravity & Spindle Co., incorporated under the laws of Maine for $1,000,000. The deal was concluded Wednesday.

The Chapman Gravity & Spindle Co. has been organized for the manufacture of spindles. Mr. Charles H. Chapman of this town is the president of the company. Ground will be broken in a few weeks for a building 152x35 feet with three wings. About 600 men it is expected will be employed at the factory after it gets in operation.

Mr. Chapman lives at Hillcrest, is the inventor of the well known Chapman ball bearing, and is also the inventor of some of the greatest labor saving and economy producing textile machines in use today. The new building will have frontage on the tracks of the Boston & Maine railroad, the benefits of electric cars, and being close to Woburn will have that city to draw upon for its supply of labor.

K. OF C. TOURNAMENT.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The expected has happened at the Castle Square. The third week of "The Runaway Girl" begins Monday evening, and there is no doubt that it will continue to amuse large audiences.

With a strong cast including Mary Young, Louise Le Baron, Theodore Friebus, Donald Meek and a large chorus, the performances of "The Runaway Girl" could not be bettered. It is filled with melody and vocal charm, and the singing of "The Sly Cigarette," "The Boy Guessed Right," "Soldiers in the Park," "The Singing Girl" and all other songs demands and redemands a succession at encores at every performance. It should be remembered that for the remainder of the season the Monday matinees of the Castle Square will be omitted.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I trust the Winchester Band will be given the G. A. R. job Memorial Day and also play at the Town Hall services in the evening, and if it gives a good account of itself should be hired for the Manchester Field concerts and for the 4th of July. By the way, how about those Metropolitan Park's concerts?

With all due respect to our Commoner he must know, that the grade crossing's abolition bill substituted in the House for the report of the Railroad Committee "leave to withdraw" is nothing but political bluff and buncombe, which the House has been indulging in to the limit. It substituted the absurd 80c gas bills, the business corporations franchise tax bill, although the bill of last year has not gone into effect yet, and passed the liquor dealers' photo and description bill all within a few days, but none of these bills have passed the Senate yet.

If there is need for it the contributions from the Asa Fletcher fund should be larger. This bequest was not given to stack up an annual balance from for future generations. The Overseers of the Poor are only trustees.

With fifty members of the bar in town it should not be difficult to find plenty of good men for town meeting moderators. It has only taken about half a dozen to fill that position in the last quarter of a century and none of them have suffered a nervous breakdown because of the duties. Why not elect the Commoner? Think it over.

Boston at present has on it hands a 1909 movement, a 1915 movement and a 1920 movement, but the trouble usually has been that its movements have been tongue movements only. Mr. Eugene Foss thinks that taking the Metropolitan district into one city is the solution for better government. The legislature don't know what to think. The politicians want things left as they are. The people want better things, but are too selfish to fight for them. I believe however that Boston is for the first time for very many years really waking up to do things.

What per centage of the pupils in the Winchester Schools are promoted each year? Some educators believe this to be the true test of the efficiency of a school. Will not the School Committee furnish the information.

UNITARIANS CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY.

The 10th anniversary of the dedication of the First Unitarian Church and the installation of its present pastor, the Rev. William I. Lawrance, was observed in the edifice on Tuesday night.

An informal reception was given in the parlors at 7.30 o'clock, which was followed by exercises in the main auditorium.

The programme included the following addresses: "Building the church and paying off the debt," by Lewis Parkhurst; "The church and its work," William B. French; "The Church in Winchester," the Rev. John W. Suter representing the churches of the town, and "The fellowship of liberal churches," by the Rev. L. G. Wilson, secretary of the American Unitarian Association.

After the exercises those present held a reunion in Metcalf Hall in the basement of the church.

The former edifice occupied by the society was built in 1869, but was destroyed by fire on Nov. 16, 1887. The present structure was built in 1889 and was dedicated on April 27 of that year.

Now is the time to have your lawn mower sharpened and repaired. Central Hardware Store, 522 Main street. Tel. 357-3. ap23,tf

The Pyrophore.

A living light, called the pyrophore, makes illumination cheap and convenient in Brazil. The pyrophore is a monster firefly, an inch and a half long. With one it is possible to read fine print, and three will light a room. The Brazilian peasant, when he traverses by night the perilous forest paths of his country, fastens to each shoe a pyrophore. Thus illuminated, he has no difficulty in avoiding poisonous snakes, pitfalls and wild beasts. The Brazilian coquette fastens in her hair or her corsage a pyrophore incased in white tulle. The effect is as of a great luminous pearl or opal. When a pyrophore's light goes out it is not necessary to fill him up with oil, to drop a coin in him or to throw him away, but a moment's duking in cold water suffices. Thereafter his three little lanterns, one on the breast and two on the back, emit again as bright a radiance as ever. The pyrophore, as all nature students know, is called vulgarly cucngo but scientifically the name is Coleopter serricorn sternose elaterides.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

In the Presence of Death.

Some years ago a Swansea vessel was caught in a terrible gale, says an English paper. The captain had his wife on board, and when the wind was still rising he told her to go down below and sleep, for all was well. He remained on the bridge till the mate came up and said: "We've done all we can. Hadn't you better tell the chaps to get out the boats?"

"Yes, yes, my lad, if you think so," said the captain, who knew the only choice left was whether to go down with the ship or in a small boat, which couldn't live ten seconds in that sea. The engineers came up with the news that the fires were all out.

"Very well, my lads," said the captain quietly. "Save yourselves if you can."

"Won't you fetch the wife on deck, sir?" asked one of the men.

"No," was the calm reply. "Let her sleep, poor girl! I am going down to have a smoke." And, smoking by the bedside of his sleeping wife, he went down with the ship.

A Man of Resources.

A young man genial of face and correct in attire arose from his seat in a well patronized cafe an evening or two ago, raised high a dollar bill and addressed those present.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I have here a dollar bill. It is a good bill, open to inspection by all. I want to raffle it off, and I will esteem it a favor if fifteen gentlemen will come in. Ten cents a chance—10 cents for a dollar bill. It's dirt cheap. Who will come in, please? I'll esteem it a favor, as I said, and there's the chance for a real bargain."

Fifteen men good naturedly chipped in 10 cents each, drew small squares of paper from a hat, and the winner pocketed the bill, with a laugh.

"Thank you, gentlemen," said the raffler, with a Chesterfieldian bow. "That dollar was of no use to me. But now that I've sold it for a dollar and a half I have my car fare home. Thank you. Good night."—New York Globe.

Old College Ways.

Students at St. Andrews university two centuries ago paid nothing for their rooms, but £3 10s. per quarter enabled them to dine at the high table. For £5 11s. 1d. poorer men could get through the whole session—just six months. Breakfast was served at 7 a. m. and consisted of an oatmeal loaf and half a pint of beer. For supper each had half a twopenny loaf and a pint of beer. At the high table poultry, broth and beef were served, and at the second a plentiful supply of broth and beef. Herrings and flounders sometimes graced the board. Beer there was in abundance, and the colleges in those good old days had their brew house, a perquisite of the porter, who was permitted to sell ale to the students.—London Antiquary.

During one of the banquets of the church congress in London a certain bishop had as his left hand companion a clergyman who was completely bald. During dessert the baldheaded vicar dropped his napkin and stooped to pick it up. At this moment the bishop, who was talking to his right hand neighbor, felt a slight touch on his left arm. He turned and, beholding the vicar's pate on a level with his elbow, said: "No, thank you, no melon. I will take some pineapple."

Line Carrying Rockets.

The first line carrying rockets were invented in 1820 by an Englishman named Trengrouse and were soon after adopted by the Massachusetts Humane society for use at its stations, where they proved very successful, though today brass cannons are exclusively used for throwing lines to wrecks.

Pretty Weary.

Weary (lying under apple tree)—Say, mister, kin I have one of dem apples? Farmer—Why, them apples won't be ripe for four months yit. Weary—Oh, dat's all right. I ain't in no hurry. I'll wait.—Life.

Then He Was Fired.

Father—I cannot give you my daughter, my dear sir. I am mighty particular in such things. Suitor—Oh, pshaw! Now, I am not in the least so.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Different Ways.

Hewitt—I have been pinched for money lately.

Jewitt—Well, women have different ways of getting it. My wife kisses me when she wants any.

Bullying the Hens.

Years spent in providing food for boarders, in watching them eat it and in hearing them comment on it had accustomed Mrs. Orne to all sorts of complaints, reasonable and otherwise. She was a pleasant woman and tried to anticipate the objector's objections and to smooth his feelings as speedily as might be. Once in awhile her readiness with a soft answer was a trifle too quick.

It was at breakfast, and Mr. Smith, who, since his attack of typhoid, had been consuming vast quantities of eggs, looked up from his fourth with a slightly offended air.

"I wish," he said from the opposite end of the table, "that these hens could be got to lay their eggs fresh!"

The last two words only caught Mrs. Orne's ear. "I know it," she said emphatically, "and I think just the way you do about it. It seems somehow as if it couldn't be done any more. Years ago, before Mr. Orne died it wasn't like this at all. Then you could make them give you fresh ones."—Youth's Companion.

A Quaint Cookbook.

Amid the horrors of the siege of Paris in 1871 one Cadet found time to issue a book of recipes for the preparation of the strange fare to which the city was reduced. "Our stomachs are turned into natural history museums," he wrote, "but we must make the best of circumstances and render our food as palatable as we can." So housewives were instructed how to disguise the flesh of dogs, horses, asses, rats and mice and were shown that, despite the old adage, one can make an omelet without breaking eggs. The recipe for an eggless omelet was as follows: "Soak an army biscuit in sugared water flavored with orange flower, chop finely and spread on a hot dish, powder well with sugar and then pour over and set light to a liberal helping of rum." With eggs at $6 a dozen and rum at but little more than its normal price, this palatable imitation of an "omelette au rhum" became a most popular dish.

Professional Advice.

The irate victim blustered into the office of the secondhand automobile dealer.

"Look here, sir," he thundered, "the automobile you sold me yesterday won't run. One of the cylinders is cracked, the spark plug is badly connected, the steering gear is loose, one wheel is wabbly, and—and"—

"Hold on a minute," the dealer interposed. "Did I sell you a machine yesterday?"

"You certainly did."

"And you paid me for it?"

"Of course I did!" was the emphatic response.

"Then the machine belongs to you, doesn't it?"

"Why, to be sure it does."

"Well, that being the case, I'd advise you not to amble through the city shouting about its defects. If you do, I'd like to know how you expect to sell it."—Lippincott's.

Birthdays and Health.

For several years I have noticed that in a period of from about three to two weeks preceding the anniversary of my birth I have had a feeling of returning vigor, a renewal of vitality such as I have not experienced at any other time of the year. This has lasted for from two to eight days, but has always ceased some days before the anniversary; hence it has occurred to me that there may be some connection between the approach or recurrence of one's birth date and the maintenance of one's health.—London Graphic.

A Modern Miracle.

"I caused the dumb to speak today."

"How was that?"

"I was stopped in the street by a beggar with a 'I Am Deaf and Dumb' placard on his breast, and when I expressed the opinion that he was an impostor he immediately recovered his speech and in vigorous Anglo-Saxon requested me to go to—er—the place that the new theology tells us doesn't exist and mind my own business and he'd mind his!"—New York Times.

A Useless Invention.

"This new collection box," argued the inventor, "has some unique advantages. When you drop in a quarter or more it doesn't make a sound. Drop in a dime and it tinkles a bell, a nickel blows a whistle, and a penny fires a shot. And when you don't drop in anything the box takes your picture."

"No, thanks," said the pastor wearily; "I already have pictures of my entire congregation."—Louisville Herald.

How It Is Done.

"I don't see how you can write so many"—

"Alleged witticisms?" interrupted the press humorist. "Oh, I get an idea occasionally, and every idea is good for several hundred jokes."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Nerve.

Heiress—The count states in his mad love letter that he will call and ends up by saying, "I beg to remain forever, Count Hickoff." Irate Father—Remain forever? What does he think this is—a charity hotel?—Chicago News.

Isn't It True?

Mrs. Baker—George is going off to get strong. I think he ought to stay a fortnight, but he says no, only half that time. Friend—You're right, of course. Seven days only make one weak.—Lippincott's.

It must have been tough on the people of the stone age when they tried to turn over a new leaf.—Pittsburg Press.

HUMAN BAIT.

The Men Who Gather Leeches In the Swamps of England.

Pale and lean, he spoke in a low voice, crunching a water cracker:

"Divin' is hard work, and sulphur minin' is hard work, but how'd you like to be bait at 4 shillin' a day? That ain't quite a dollar.

"I was human bait for a leech dealer in England all one spring. It was back in the eighties, but I ain't never recovered the healthy color and weight what I lost. I guess I never will now.

"Down Norfolk way I baited down in the Norfolk broads. Broads is swamps. All them swamps, together with the mild, moist climate, makes Norfolk a great place for leeches. Me and a dozen other chaps was leech bait.

"We would wade in with our breeches rolled up to our knees, and as soon as we'd feel a leech on our legs we'd tear him off and drop him in a basket slung from the shoulder. Quick as thunder we'd do it, but he'd be considerable plumped out even in that little while. And when a dozen leeches settled on you together the last of 'em by the time you got round to him would be as fat and heavy as a lump of lead, whilst you'd be that much lighter natcherly.

"In the late spring the leeches took to deep water. Then the bait had to strip and wade in up to their chins. With all that surface to look after, we played a losin' game with the leeches. The quickest of us couldn't stand more'n four hours of it without most faintin' from weakness. And the pain! For some parts of the human bait is mighty sensitive, I tell you.

"The trade's died out now. There's no more call for leeches, and it's a good thing. Bein' bait is too hard on a man. It's worms' work."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

SAFE BOTH WAYS.

The Way Rajah Birbar Saved His Head by Ready Wit.

Rajah Birbar, a boon companion of the Emperor Akbar, the great contemporary of Queen Elizabeth, was a notable wit. The story goes that the emperor once sent Birbar with a message to the king of Persia.

The latter, for some reason or other, bore a grudge toward the rajah and in order to see him lose the emperor's favor thought of a device.

He asked Birbar: "Which of us two is greater in power and majesty—I or Akbar? But, mind you, if your answer is in any way unfavorable to me I will order your head to be struck off."

"Your majesty," replied Birbar without loss of time, "is like the full moon, while the emperor, my master, resembles the crescent."

The king was highly pleased with his reply and let him go.

This news was, however, carried to Akbar, who was wild with rage when he heard it. When Birbar returned to his master's court he was asked to explain himself on pain of death.

"My comparison," said Birbar, "meant only this much and nothing more—that the decline of the Persian king's power had commenced, just as the full moon, after it is full, goes on waning, while your majesty is destined to rise on and one till, like the crescent becoming the full moon in time, it will shine forth with magnificent splendor of glory."

The emperor, who was a great patron of wit and wisdom, heaped the rajah with rewards.

Clerk's Elbow.

"To remove shiny spots from coat elbows and trousers seats," said a clerk—"I'll tell you how it is done."

The sun was strong on him as, upon his lofty stool, he munched his midday sandwich from thin, ink smeared fingers, but on his old clerk's coat and old trousers no shiny spots reflected the light.

"'Clerks' elbow' such spots are called," he said. "It's like housemaids' knee. To cure it you soak the glittering spot in cold water for half an hour. Then you take a teasel—that's a very stiff thistle—and you rub the spot with it till a nap or fuzz is raised up. Then with a clothesbrush you lay the nap down the right way, and, presto, the shine is gone!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

No Sand In Sandpaper.

"There is no sand in sandpaper," said the manufacturer. "It is powdered glass that does the business. That's where the broken bottles go to." He nodded toward a mass of broken bottles in the yard. "We powder the glass into half a dozen grades," he said. "We coat our paper with an even layer of hot glue. Then without loss of time we spread on the glass powder. Finally we run a wooden roller lightly over the sheets to give them a good surface. When in the past they made sandpaper of sand it wouldn't do a quarter of the work that glass paper does."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Bride's Pie Joke.

Her—Richard! Why on earth are you cutting your pie with a knife? Him—Because, darling—now, understand, I'm not finding any fault, for I know that these little oversights will occur—because you forgot to give me a can opener.—Cleveland Leader.

She Was On.

Mrs. Boozer (3 a. m.)—This is a nice time for you to be coming home. Where have you been? Mr Boozer—Been setting up, my dearest, wiz a friend. Mrs. Boozer—How many drinks did you set up?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Friendship consists in being a friend, not having a friend.—Pittsburg Press.

Servant Girls In Defoe's Day.

It is evident from the comment below, found in "Gleanings After Time," that there is nothing new to be said on the servant question.

Defoe, castigating the extravagances of his time, fell foul of the downward spread of fashion. His theme was a familiar one—the heinousness of a servant girl's attempt to imitate her mistress' costume.

"Her neat leathern shoes," Defoe's amusing indictment runs, "are now transformed into laced ones with high heels, her yarn stockings are turned into the woolen ones with silk clocks, and her high woolen pattens are kicked away for leathern clogs. She must have a hoop, too, as well as her mistress, and her poor linsey woolsey petticoat is changed into a good silk one four or five yards wide at the least. Not to carry the description further, in short, plain country Joan is now turned into a fine city madam, can drink tea, take snuff and carry herself as high as the best."

Vivisecting Thieves.

Breaking into houses where funerals have just taken place and plundering them is spoken of by the Berliner Tageblatt as a trick of the thieves of that city. While this may be a new form of criminality in Berlin, says the writer, it is really only an imitation of an incident described by Dion Cassius as having taken place 2,500 years before Christ. The historian says that when the consort of the emperor was laid away in the mausoleum at Memphis a band of Greek marauders entered the deserted palace of the pharaoh and took all the precious stones and metals and the women slaves and reached the banks of the Red sea with their plunder. Only two of the band were captured, and they were turned over by the ruler to the wise men, by whom they were vivisected in the interest of science. No matter how much the robbers of the modern houses of mourning may be despised, they need not fear that form of punishment.

The Newsboy.

Do you see the newsboy?

You can hear the newsboy a long time before you can see him.

What does the newsboy say?

It doesn't matter what the newsboy says. You know he is the newsboy because he has the papers to prove it.

What has the newsboy concealed in his hand?

The newsboy has a cigarette butt in his hand. He saw it smoking in the gutter and was afraid it would set fire to the street, so he picked it up. Good little newsboy, you will be a fire chief some day!

Did ever you try a trick on the newsboy?

Give him a nickel some time for your paper and tell him to keep the change. Ten chances to one he will do it.

Does the newsboy never sleep?

Oh, yes, the newsboy sleeps, but never on his job.

P. S.—Lots of people can learn something from the newsboy.—Boston Herald.

Hungry Thespians.

They looked like actors, or, rather, they looked as if they would have been actors if some manager with more than the usual discernment would recognize their ability and give them a job, says the Stroller in the Portland (Me.) Express. Just now they were staring through the window of a popular priced restaurant in Congress street, absorbed in the unerring accuracy of the chef as the griddlecakes were flipped into the air by him, only to fall gracefully back into the grease mark they had just quitted. The tall man jingled some keys in his pocket, and the little one pulled his belt another notch.

"Lord!" said the big one. "I'm hungry enough to eat my own words."

"I'm in just as bad," complained the little one. "I feel as though I could bolt a front door."

Animals and Electricity.

Man has much greater power of electrical resistance or much less susceptibility than many other animals. A leech placed upon a copper plate which rests upon a larger plate of zinc is unable to crawl off on account of the feeble electric action excited by the contact of the metals. Horses are troubled by slight differences of potential. An ox treated for rheumatism with electricity succumbed to a current absolutely inoffensive to man.

Exactly.

Little Mrs. Hunter had heard so many jokes about the brides who couldn't market successfully that she made up her mind that the first request she made of the marketman would show her to be a sophisticated housewife. "Send me, please," she said, "two French chops and one hundred green peas."

The Timidity.

Her Mother—Mabel, dear, do you ever feel timid about asking your husband for money?

The Bride—No, indeed, mamma, but he seems to be rather timid about giving it to me.—Exchange.

Pretty Thin.

"Thin!" repeated the man who was talking about a mutual acquaintance. "Well, he's so thin that when he eats macaroni he can only swallow it one piece at a time!"

The Fun of It.

Mother—Did you enjoy your ice cream soda, Dickie?

Dickie—Yes, ma; there were seven other boys lookin' through the window at me.

What is not necessary is dear at a penny.—Cato.

Large Users and Small Users

A WELL DEVELOPED telephone system is the consensus of many desires, not the narrow reflection of the wishes of some individual or group of individuals.

In planning such a service it is necessary to have many different classes of rates, so that it may be placed within the means of everyone. Each subscriber to the service, be he large user or small user, adds strength and value to the whole.

To realize this interdependence—to emphasize the value of a service connecting all classes of users—and to offer its product (telephone service) in lots suited to the needs of all classes—this has been the effort of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

That its forecast of possibilities has been verified, that its campaign of education has been effective, and that its distribution of classes of service to meet varied requirements has been approved, needs no argument other than the repetition of this conclusive fact—310,000 telephones connected to its system.

If you are not represented among the 310,000 telephones now connected with the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company's system, let us show you how a telephone would be helpful.

If you don't need one your wife may. Count the steps it will save, the comfort it will bring, the emergency service it will render, and you will say a residence telephone at our rates is an economical investment.

Fortunes In Real Estate

Fortunes made in real estate have a way of clinging to a family through generation after generation.

A case in point is the Astor estate in New York City. John Jacob Astor left a heritage that is being enjoyed not only by his children, but by his children's children.

There are just as great opportunities for wealth in real estate now as in Astor's time. You simply have to use good judgment in your purchases.

Why not lay the foundation for an inheritance for future generations by making your initial purchase now?

I want to show you how to make a beginning or how to add advantageously to your present holdings.

HOME FOR AGED PEOPLE.

Annual Meeting and Interesting Reports of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Corporation of the Home for Aged People in Winchester was held in the small Town Hall Monday evening. There was a fair attendance of ladies and gentlemen who listened with much pleasure to the very encouraging reports of the past year from the officers. Particularly interesting was the report of Treasurer H. C. Ordway who gave in detail the financial growth of the corporation from the time of its organization up to the present time. This resume must have required considerable research on the part of Mr. Ordway, and now that it has been made so obtainable, it will be found of much value to all who take interest in the growth of the Home.

Alfred S. Hall, Esq., the president, presided, and Secretary Sanborn read the report of the directors and Treasurer Ordway read the receipts and expenditures for the past year also the amounts on hand and invested. These reports can be found below. Mr. Wm. C. Newell, Mr. J. A. Downs, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kimball and Mrs. Frances Hight were elected members. Mr. Mr. Preston Pond and Mrs. W. B. French, as a nominating committee, presenting the following list of officers, who were unanimously elected: President, Alfred S. Hall: Vice-presidents, Preston Pond, E. J. Rich, Mrs. Anthony Kelley: Secretary, H. C. Sanborn: Treasurer, H. C. Ordway: Auditor, George H. Carter: Directors for two years: Mrs. Frances Hight, Mrs. Josephine Wilmer, Mrs. Mary L. Johnson.

Following are the reports:

REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS.

The directors of the Home for Aged People in Winchester present this their sixteenth Annual Report.

The year which has just closed can be reviewed with considerable pleasure and satisfaction. The work has gone on very quietly and smoothly and we believe that the generous contributions and responses to our solicitations go to show the interest which the townspeople have in the home and the place which it holds in the community. At the last annual meeting, Mrs. Burton at that time Matron of the Home, presented her resignation and the first duties of the Board was to choose her successor.

The Executive Committee were fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. Frances Whitford, a resident of the town, well known to many of our members. She entered upon her duties as Matron early in June and by her thoughtful care and attention has endeared herself to the inmates and has met the approval of the Board. As to numbers the household remains the same as last year—Mrs. Fullam, Mrs. Langley, Miss Whitby and Mrs. Cochrane. Much has been done in the way of repairs and refurnishing and the property is in good condition. In October by means of Tag Day the sum of $800—was added to our treasury and general attention called to our work. Our permanent fund has also been enlarged by the payment of three legacies one of $1000 --from the estate of Miss Elizabeth D. Chapin, one of $5000—from the estate of Caleb Chase and one of $500—from the estate of Handel Pond. Miss Chapin and Mr. Pond had been residents of the town for many years and had always been interested in the Home and its welfare. Mr. Chase was a resident of Brookline, but was well known in Winchester and very kindly included our Home among the large number of similar organizations named in his will. We gratefully acknowledge these gifts and the kindly thought which prompted them. Our permanent fund now amounts to about fourteen thousand dollars which is well invested, the income only being used toward defraying our current expenses. We note with sorrow the passing of many of our corporate members. Early in the year, one of our new directors, Mrs. Helen Otis passed away after a short illness. She had been a member of the Board only a few weeks, but coming to us with a great interest in work of this kind, she immediately took a prominent place in our committee work and her loss has been greatly felt. Many others have passed away who have always taken an active interest in the Home. To their places we invite all those who have an interest in giving a real home to those whose later years might not otherwise be so pleasant and comfortable.

For the Directors
HARRY C. SANBORN, Sec.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The statistical data, which is appended to the treasurer's report enclosed here with, may be of interest to your readers, especially to those who have known of the Home from its incorporation fifteen years ago. The largest single gift, apart from the legacies enumerated below, was that received in February. 1899, from Mr. Thomas W. Lawson who gave $500.00.

It was his request at the time that his name should not be disclosed, but after this long interval it seems proper that the donor's name should be associated with this gift. Others of our citizens at various times in the early days of the Home made liberal donations for its support. The following benevolent societies also assisted with their contributions: the Ladies' Friendly Society, The Fortnightly and the Mission Union. In the last few years collections in the local churches have realized for the Home the substantial sum of $398.76.

From the minimum admission fees of inmates $2600.00 have been received and an additional amount, $2598.07, from the same source has been turned into the treasury.

May 1, 1909. HENRY C. ORDWAY, Treasurer.

ARTEMIS CLUB PLAYS.

Winchester society turned out in a body on Tuesday evening, and a brilliant and crowded house greeted the members of the Artemis Club in Lyceum Hall when the curtain rose for its first play—The Faraway Princess, by Sudermann. The cozy hall was filled to overflowing with friends and admirers of the young ladies and gentlemen who presented the entertainment, and they in turn gave two very excellent plays, well acted and finished.

The productions given—The Faraway Princess by Sudermann, and Moving Out by Miss Katherine Searle—called for considerable work by the casts, and the artists proved themselves thoroughly competent. From commencement to finish both plays were given with a smoothness which delighted the audience, and so well did the young people fit into their respective parts that it was difficult to credit any individual with holding the favor of his hearers alone

Mr. Henry Groff Dodge as a poor German student was the principal in the Faraway Princess, and his portrayal of the dreamer, idolizing his almost visionary princess, and reciting his love all unknowingly to the real princess of his dreams, was so well given as to bring him into high favor with the audience. Miss Elder as the Princess was remarkably good, and she enacted a rather difficult part without the least suggestion of being "stagy." Miss French as an aspiring mother, and her two daughters—Miss Dunbar and Miss Amelia Wulkop—were all excellent. Miss Elsie Wulkop as lady in waiting to the Princess and Miss Brown as the proprietress of the inn where the scene was enacted, carried their parts well and received much favorable comment.

The second play, Moving Out, had considerable comedy to enliven it, and Miss Brown and Mr. Badger as the principals were fine, they enacting their parts with a spirit true to life, and receiving much applause. Miss Robinson and Mr. Sturgiss were close favorites in the juvenile parts, and their work brought forth a hearty laugh time and again. Miss Dunbar as the cook surprised her most intimate friends.

The casts follow:

THE FARAWAY PRINCESS

| | |
|---|---|
| Frau Lindeman, Proprietress of Inn | Dorothy Brown |
| Rosa, a waitress | Genieve Robinson |
| Fritz Strubel | Henry Groff Dodge |
| Frau Von Halldorf | Margaret French |
| Liddy ( Milly ) Her daughters | Daphne Dunbar Amelia Wulkop |
| Baroness Von Brook. Lady in Waiting | Elsie Wulkop |
| A Footman and | Douglas Miller |
| Princess Marie Louise of Gelder | Frances Elder |

MOVING OUT

| | |
|---|---|
| Susan Gray | Dorothy Brown |
| Lucy, her neice | Genieve Robinson |
| Jack Lawrence, her adopted nephew | Norman Sturgis |
| Mrs. Gray | Elsie Wulkop |
| Thomas Parsons | Erastus Badger |
| Julia | Daphne Dunbar |

The gowns worn in the two productions were worthy of comment and were much admired, and at the close of each of the plays the young ladies were presented with many handsome flowers.

Not a small amount of the evening's pleasure was afforded by the orchestra, which was under the direction of Mr. W. H. W. Bicknell. It was composed of the following artists: Cello, W. H. W. Bicknell; first violins, Miss Alice C. Newman and Mr. Carlos Pinfield; second violins, Miss Mary Kellogg and Miss Mabel Wingate; flute, John B. Wills; clarinet, L. Stanley Redding; cornet, Harold Robinson; bass viol, Frank Downing; piano, F. Percyval Lewis.

The orchestra played the following selections: Jupiter Overture, Hoffman; Venetian Love Song, Nevin; Selection from La Boheme, Puccini; Waltz, "Eternelle ivresse," Ganne; March of the Marines, Brooke.

The ushers were Messrs. John Dougherty, Theodore Hewitt, Fred Godley, Spencer Cutting, Eliot Barta, Theodore Main, Robert Clark, John Tarbell, Edmund Cottle, Harris Gilman. Mr. Hersey Jewitt Burrell of Boston was coach.

Miss Ruth McCall was the stage manager and managed the business end of the performance.

The proceeds of the plays are to be donated to the Boston Children's Aid Society.

K. OF C. HOLD LADIES' NIGHT.

Last Monday evening Winchester Council No. 210, entertained a number of their friends at a concert and dancing party which was held in White's Hall.

Vocal and instrumental numbers were rendered by Miss Margaret O'Loughlin, Miss Mary E. Cosgrove, Mr. Daniel J. Daly and Mr. John S. O'Leary, accompanied by Mr. Howard S. Cosgrove.

Refreshments were served, and all enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

A SOCIAL CLEARING HOUSE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

All who have undertaken to arrange for gatherings of any size in Winchester have encountered the difficulty of avoiding evenings on which other functions occur. A town caucus and a church reunion, a Calumet Ladies' Night and a Glee Club concert, may come together, to the detriment of each, and to the embarrassment of those who want to attend both. In a town no larger than ours this might easily be avoided. A simple plan has occurred to me, and I venture to propose it.

Let some one, conveniently located and widely interested in social matters, open a Day Book, in which all churches, lodges and clubs record in advance the dates of all regular social gatherings, and, as they come along, all special meetings. Then, when any of these organizations, or any person, wants to arrange for a party, concert or other gathering, that book can be consulted, and a free date chosen. A little co-operation in this simple way ought to prevent much later embarrassment.

I venture further to suggest that Mr. Charles A. Lane seems to be a good person to keep this Day Book. His office is centrally located, and connected by telephone, and when he is not in his clerk can act for him. I make this suggestion of my own accord, though I have asked his permission to use his name. He is willing to attend to the details, if it is so desired.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING IN WINCHESTER.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In an article which appeared in the Boston Herald of May 6th certain statements were imputed to me in relation to the proposed contract between the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston and the Town of Winchester.

In justice to myself and all parties concerned and interested in the matter, I wish to say, the article above referred to was issued without my knowledge or consent and does not meet with my approval.

Certain statements were reported as made by me which were not only false but were inconsistent with my opinions in relation to a new contract which may be entered into with the Edison Electric Illuminating Co.

"WISTARIA CLUB" AT BARN PARTY.

The members of the Wistaria Club of this town were the guests of Bunker Hill Council K. of C. last evening at their second annual Barn Party which was held in Roughan Hall, Charlestown.

The young ladies wore checked aprons and white sunbonnets, and were conveyed to and from the party in a Tally-ho.

One of the features of the evening was the "Rube" March, which was participated in by over a hundred couple, after which dancing followed until a late hour.

A most pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

W. H. S. NOTES

The lecture on Greece given in the assembly hall April 30 by Miss Bishop was very interesting, and thoroughly enjoyed by all. The lecture was illustrated with stereoptican views.

Report cards for last quarter are out today.

At a meeting of the class of 1911 last Thursday, Kenneth Caldwell resigned the captaincy of the class track team, and Francis Newton was elected to the vacancy.

GENT. N'S SUPPER

At The Congregational Church Splendid Success.

Last Friday evening marked the inauguration of an occasion at the First Congregational Church which, judged by its success, will probably prove to be an annual event. For in spite of the inclement weather one hundred and fifty of the men of the parish assembled in the vestries of the church to participate in the first "Gentlemen's Supper."

Following the excellent supper that was served by a caterer and a social hour, the Hon. Samuel J. Elder, the toastmaster of the evening, called the gentlemen to order and after a short speech, explanatory of the occasion, introduced the following speakers with remarks pungent with keen wit and kindly humor: Rev. D. Augustine Newton, pastor of the church: Mr. Alfred C. Vinton, Mr. Dwight S. Robinson, Mr. George S. Cabot and Mr. Alfred S. Hall, chairman of the supper committee.

Dr. J. Churchill Hindes, accompanied by Mr. Joshua Phippen, sang several songs that were received most ethusiastically and humorous baseball selections were given by a large Victrola talking machine.

At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Hall presented the following vote, looking toward a more permanent organization and perpetration of the evening's event, which was unanimously accepted: Voted that a committee be chosen to determine when there shall be a further meeting or meetings of the men of this parish, what shall be the program or undertaking of such meetings and what is expedient in the way of other organization. Said committee may incur reasonable expense in putting its conclusion into execution and the men here present will foot the bills. The following committee was chosen to carry the same into effect:—Rev. D. Augustine Newton, Mr. Samuel J. Elder, Mr. Alfred S. Hall, Mr. Henry C. Ordway, Mr. Marshall W. Jones, Mr. Maurice F. Brown, Mr. Frederick S. Snyder, and Mr. Robert I. Adriance.

SUNDAY LABOR IN WINCHESTER.

The attention of the Business Men's Conference of Winchester, which meets each Sunday at the Baptist Church, has been called to the prevalence of labor on the Lord's Day by citizens of Winchester, otherwise law abiding and in quite a few cases by those identified with some church in town. The Conference was told of instance after instance of men setting out shrubs, spading up lawns or gardens, or nourishing the soil and forgetting the soul. In some instances the children were out watching operations. Because the influence of such work was so bad on children and on others, the Conference has decided to consider this matter further and take action if necessary. It has been suggested that special invitations be sent to those who have been working on Sundays. This matter will come before the Conference again on next Sunday at 12 o'clock.

LET ALL TURN OUT.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The interesting program under preparation for the concert this month by the High School chorus certainly looks "worth while" and is worthy of a large and appreciative audience.

Winchester for many years supported good musical societies, but changing conditions have not made it practical to carry on choral societies in the town during the past fifteen years. It is to be hoped that the time will soon come when the graduates of our High School will be prime movers in bringing back to Winchester its former excellent reputation as a musical center.

Let us all turn out and encourage by a large audience the good effort of the school authorities.

MILK—HINTS TO CONSUMERS

I. Visit the dairy supplying you with milk at least once a year.

II. Look at the bottom of the milk bottle, for sediment; not at the side for the cream-line, as cleanliness is more important than richness in butter-fat.

III. Demand clean milk, ask for rich milk.

IV. Have your milkman leave the milk bottles in a shady place out of the direct rays of the early morning sun.

V. Take the milk bottles into the house as soon as possible after the milkman leaves them, and place in the ice chest at once.

CALUMET OFFICERS INSTALLED.

The regular meeting and installation of the new officers of the Calumet Club was held on Saturday evening of last week, and called forth a large attendance. The meeting of the club was given over entirely to the reports of the Secretary and Treasurer and the plans for the coming year. Wallace F. Flanders, the retiring president, spoke briefly upon the work undertaken by the club during the year past and its needs for the future.

The new president, Mr. Charles S. Tenney, was escorted to the chair and given an ovation by the members. He announced that the incoming administration would endeavor to uphold the standards of the club in every branch, and presented his list of committees. The new officers and committees of the club are as follows:

President—Charles S. Tenney.
Vice President—Freeland E. Hovey.
Secretary—Edgar M. Young.
Treasurer—Herbert L. Larrabee.
Directors—Nathan H. Taylor, Daniel B. Badger, Dr. J. Churchill Hindes.
House Committee — Freeland E. Hovey, Chair., Charles C. Rogers, Jere A. Downs, Daniel B. Badger, James H. Gerlach.
Bowling Committee—George S. Littlefield, Chair., John A. Caldwell, Joseph E. Gendron, Nathan H. Taylor, Sidney C. Blanchard.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The thirty-third anniversary meeting of the Winchester Union will be held Friday, May 14, at the home of Mrs. D. A. Newton, Main street. The chief speaker will be Mrs. Helen G. Rice, State Superintendent of Loyal Legion Work. Mrs. A. A. Rowe will tell something of the work of the W. C. T. U. in the Far West where she has been since last October. Miss Mary Ogilvie will sing and there will be a social hour. The public is cordially invited. The Medford Union officers and Mrs. Knox, State Corresponding Secretary are expected be present.

Florida is to be the next state to vote on constitutional prohibition, the election to be held in November, 1910. The bill passed the State Senate April 22, by a vote of 24 to 7 and the next day passed the house by a vote of 53 to 16. As the "dry" territory under the option law covers the State except for a few small cities, it is expected the amendment will carry unless the liquor drinkers from the North go there and acquire citizenship in order to defeat it. It is their patronage that supports the traffic at present.

Mrs. Katherine Lente Stevenson, State President of Massachusetts, whose missionary trip around the world is arousing much interest, speaks of the sad havoc the cigarette is making in China, another of the vices for which the Oriental has to thank his Occidental brother. The object of attack and limitation at home, the American Tobacco Company is seeking a market abroad and stoops to very contemptible tactics to induce the people to adopt the vicious habit.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The week of May 10th at Keith's Theatre will be notable for another one of those star bills, made up largely of attractions that are usually seen in the legitimate houses at high prices. One of the best features will be Bert Williams of the Williams and Walker Company, who have been engaged for a special season.

The important dramatic feature will be Valerie Bergere and Company, presenting an entirely new company in "His Japanese Wife." Miss Bergere has been unquestionably one of the most successful of the legitimate stars that has ever appeared in vaudeville.

Still another big feature will be Clara Belle Jerome and Company in a splendid musical production entitled "Joyland."

For real down right comedy there is nothing now surpassing those comedians, Howard and Howard, the messenger boy and the actor.

Others on the bill are the Sutcliffe Troupe; Netta Vesta, the singing comedienne; Ben Beyer and Brother and others.

NEARLY A MILLION TALKS PER DAY.

The Business Done By The New England Tel. & Tel. Co.

OVER 300,000 TELEPHONES CONNECTED TO ITS SYSTEM IN MAINE, NEW HAMPSHIRE, VERMONT AND MASSACHUSETTS —A GOOD FINANCIAL SHOWING FOR 1908 AND A BETTER OUTLOOK FOR 1909 —INTERESTING FINANCIAL AND DEVELOPMENT FIGURES.

Nearly a million calls a day is the average patronage of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, according to the annual report of Gen. Thomas Sherwin, its president. The exact figures given are, approximately, 301,000,000 local calls and 15,800,000 toll calls for the year 1908, and they emphasize the widespread usefulness of the telephone and its intimate relation to the business and social life of the community. It is estimated by careful observers that 1,500,000 persons, or about one-third of the population of New England, are in daily touch with telephone service.

The rapid development of the Company is another feature of the report that forcibly strikes one as he peruses the figures presented. Last year only 13,737 stations were added, owing to a restrictive policy induced by the unsettled conditions of business. For 1909, however, an increase of 25,000 stations is expected.

Considering that the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company was not organized until 1883, it is interesting to note that in the four northern New England States in which it operates, the system of which it is the centre had, at the end of 1908, 304,896 telephones connected therewith, a number that has since increased to over 312,000.

For the past year or more the Massachusetts Highway Commission has been making a study of the affairs of this company, and only recently published its inventory. From this it appears that the appraisal value of its property is $46,540,819, while its total outstanding liabilities in the form of stocks, bonds and notes is only $38,939,850. With physical assets so largely in excess of liabilities one thing at least is reasonably clear and that there is no room for water in its stock.

The Company's attitude toward supervision appears to be indicated in the following sentences with references to the placing of the telephone and other public utilities under the supervision of a Public Utilities Commission in Vermont: "To the adoption of this measure the management of your Company offered no objection, believing that the exercise of the powers vested in the Commission, with intelligence, good judgement, full knowledge of the conditions affecting the business, fidelity to the interests of the State and the public, fairness and equity to the service Companies, cannot be detrimental to this Company. The true interests of the State, the telephone users and the Company are, and must be, identical. Between these interests, rightly considered, there can be no antagonism or difference. It is for the interests of the State that both the plant and the service be maintained at a high standard of efficiency for the use of subscribers and the public, and that the company which furnishes the service shall have a reasonable profit, and a reasonable degree of prosperity from its operations. Without that measure of prosperity, its ability to supply good service or to extend its system and render it of greater value to the community, would be impaired, and eventually lost."

The report also points out that in the past ten years, despite the advance in the rate of wages and the cost of material, economies in operation and improvements in the art have enabled various rate reductions in consequence of which the revenue per station has dropped from an average of $71.13 to $34.70.

With reference to the purchase of the Northeastern Telephone Company, the Lewiston and Auburn Telephone Company and the Cumberland Telephone Company, in Maine, it appears that stocks and bonds aggregating $1,571,000 were purchased for $403,000.

"The outcome of these enterprises," the directors say, "furnishes a striking illustration of the fruitlessness and waste of establishing a second telephone system in a field where one company is already serving the public efficiently and fairly. Sooner or later failure and disaster are sure to follow the undertaking. These companies had been unsuccessful from the start, and had proved a detriment rather than an advantage to the communities in which they operated, burdening a large number of subscribers with a duplication of charges for service."

Among other statistics of development during the year appears a statement regarding the amount of conduit construction by the company, by which it appears that it already has, underground, a total of more than 3,000 miles of duct.

The financial showing for the year was very satisfactory. The gross revenue was $11,259,130.15, an increase of $579,504.39 over the preceding year. The expenses were $8,698,717.24, an increase of $185,294.60, while the net revenue was $2,560,412.91, an increase of $394,209.79. A six per cent dividend was declared and new capital to the amount of $3,926,600 was issued. As the telephone furnishes a pretty good index of business conditions, the confidence with which this report regards the immediate future would seem to presage a belief in a general improvement in industrial affairs.

GAIETY THEATRE.

There is something irresistible to the average theatregoer in a chorus of pretty young women, who can dance and sing and who can wear pretty costumes as to the manner born. They brighten any show and they set off the work and ability and also talents of the principals just as the settings of a rare jewel display it to the best advantage.

In The Gay Masqueraders which will be the offering at the Gaiety Theatre next week, the management this season has paid particular attention to the chorus, and it includes among its number some of the most beautiful women on the American stage.

The Gay Masqueraders was staged by Mr. Frank Tannhill, which is a guarantee that it is both amusing and entertaining and that the burlesques will be handsomely produced. All the company will be seen in the lively extravaganza entitled "A Night on Broadway."

The popular comedian Harry Emerson will have the leading role in this and the concluding burletta and he will be ably assisted by several other clever men and a host of pretty girls. Among the big acts in the vaudeville olio will be Sophia Tucker the phenomenal baritone and the great Wilson in a sensational bicycle act. Several picturesque musical and dancing numbers with novel settings will be part of the bill. There are daily matinees at the Gaiety beginning at 2.15 o'clock.

MODERN HORSE-POWER.

One hundred horses, fifty horses, or even five horses hitched in line before a carriage might draw it safely to its destination. The sight would be unusual, however, and one would scarcely regard such a trip as practical. Such a number of horses would be a graphic illustration of horse-power, but nowadays we have a different way of doing it. The power of the horses is all compressed into a box, which packed away underneath the seat of an attractive carriage furnishes the power. There is no pulling at the reins, stopping to feed and water the animals or worrying about broken harness. The Exide storage battery is simplicity in itself. The machine used has no complicated parts, and it can be operated safely and comfortably by women and children.

Only one battery is needed for driving an ordinary machine more than ten thousand miles. It is necessary, of course, to let in a little electric power during the night when the machine is standing idle, but if properly cared for the results will be surprisingly satisfactory.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Chauncey Olcott has always occupied a prominent place in the affections of the playgoers of New England and Manager Augustus Pitou's policy of presenting his star in a new play every season has only served to more deeply interest the popular Irish singing comedian in the minds and hearts of people who look to the playhouse for the greater part of their entertainment.

The Boston Theatre is the scene of Mr. Olcott's visit to New England this year and he will be seen nowhere else in this section of the country this season.

"Ragged Robin" is Mr. Olcott's greatest artistic and financial success, it richly deserves this prosperity. The play is the joint work of Rida Johnson Young and Rita Olcott and many fascinating bits of old Irish folk-lore have been drawn upon by the authors to enhance the interest in the everyday human theme on which the play is constructed.

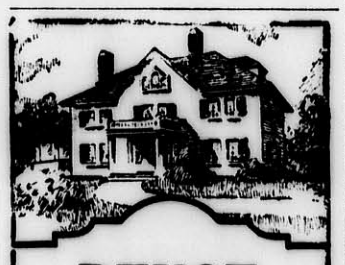

Olcott's sweet singing is, as usual, a huge factor of the whole captivating comedy drama. Manager Pitou has provided a most sumptuous setting, the beauty of the stage pictures rarely having been surpassed or even equaled. A fine company is in the support of the star. Among its most popular and talented members are Alma Belwin, Clara Rainford, Lillian Claire, Alice Farrell, Josie Claflin, Mark Price, Andrew O'Neil, Gerome Edwards, George Brennan and others. The beautiful incidental musical was composed by Frederick Knight Logan, formerly musical director for Maude Adams.

Regular matinees are on Wednesday and Saturday.

DEVOE TOOK 9½ GALLONS LESS

Judge I. D. Fairchild of Lufkin, Texas, had two houses painted, both same size. One was painted with a leading top-price paint, and took 25 gallons. The other was painted with Devoe, and took only 15½ gallons. The "leading paint" referred to is adulterated 15%, but is sold at the same price as Devoe.

The most economical paint always is the one that takes least gallons and wears longest, and that's Devoe.

The Game of Politics.

After all, does it pay for public-spirited men to accept office. Mayor Hibbard of Boston while doing all that lies in his power to reform Boston, is being made a political scapegoat of by his Democratic opponents and also by members of his own party. The Mass. Senate has been likened by a Republican member of the House, to Boston's Common Council. And so it goes. Some time, however, there will be a change.

Our Mail Service.

Complaint has been quite general for some months past from people living in populous parts of the town that they do not receive but one delivery of mail a day as a rule. Some months ago this matter was taken up by the citizens and appeal was made to Congressman McCall for an additional carrier. After much persuasion another carrier was secured. The statement was then made that all parts of the town would thereafter receive two deliveries of mail matter daily. This was so for a time, but now from the number of complaints received, the service is but little improved over what it was before the additional carrier was put on. If this is due to the growth of the town, then the postoffice department should provide carriers enough to keep up with the increase. An intelligent community like Winchester should not be required to put up with a backwood's service, but should receive a service commensurate with its standing and population.

Congressman McCall and the Winchester Improvement Association should again take up this question with the authorities at Washington.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

The Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. will hold its annual business meeting Tuesday, May 11, at 3 p. m., with Mrs. Dunning, 7 Winthrop street.

On Wednesday afternoon while the horses of one of Henry Seigel Co's teams were feeding on Railroad avenue they took fright at a passing train and ran away. As their bridles were off the drivers were powerless to stop them. Al Fuller of Richardson's Market caught them by the noses in the square and brought them to a standstill just in time to prevent a serious accident.

On account of repeated violation of the rules governing its use, the "Lynam" dump off Nelson street has been ordered closed by order of the Board of Health.

The committee of the Selectmen on Town Hall, are deserving of credit for beautifying the grounds about the building with shrubbery.

Still no report from the grade crossing commission. The question appears to be coming up to the town again.

CHILDREN'S MAY PARTY.

The annual May Party of the Ladies' Friendly Society was held in the Town Hall Saturday afternoon, about 150 children participating in the general dancing. The pretty solo dances were given after the grand march and were a credit to the careful teaching of Miss Martha Langley. The hall was prettily decorated with pink and green crepe paper and azaleas. The Maypole colors were in pink and white. After the grand march which was led by Misses Orianna Wingate and Miriam Foster and Masters Chesley Whitten and Guy Messenger, Miss Annette Symmes sang very sweetly, accompanied by the piano. Little Mary Joslin as the May Queen and Master Stillman Weston the Prince, were especially good for such little folks. The court in circle also Masters Vincent Farnsworth and Harrison Chadwick as pages, and Ruth Southworth, Flora Locke, Dorothy Abbott and Sylvia Holt as flower girls. The Sunbonnet babies were a very pleasing feature and knew their parts to perfection. They were: Betty French, Esther Page, Barbara Pike, Elizabeth Ramsdell, Louise Mosely, Olive Page, Rosamond Lefavour, Ruth Grover, Katherine Pike, Marjorie Mosely, Audry Goddu, William Beggs, Allen Smith and Kenneth Flanders. The matrons were Mrs. Ralph Joslin and Mrs. Wendell Weston.

There were some new figures in the Maypole dance and the braiding and dancing was particularly well done. The children, dressed in white and pink, were Jack Sanborn, Virginia Farmer, Maro Weston, Helen Woods, Caleb Sanborn, Alice Chamberlain, Edward Hoagland, Esther Lombard, Ralph Hoagland, Louise Alexander, James Lombard, Georgianna Watters, Roger Wilde, Joan Abbott, Charles Mosely and Elinor Schubarth. The matrons were Mrs. Frederick Alexander and Mrs. E. W. Farmer and Mrs. O. C. Sanborn. The Fairy dance by Miss Gertrude May and Miss Marjorie Brad dock was the special solo dance and beautifully given. The young ladies responded to an encore. The costumes for this dance were very handsome, being of white tulle and gold. Mrs. Edward Messenger was matron. The Sunbeam dance came next, by Shirley Himes, Bertha Kelley, Marjorie Emery, Eunice Grover, Barabara Wellington, Edith Fenno, Ruth Hazelton, Lucille Himes, Margaret Cumings, Elizabeth Fiske, Dorothy Farrow, Alice Cutting, Martha Locke, Elinor Hudson and Helen Holt. These children were costumed alike in yellow. Mrs. Frank Cutting, Mrs. C. P. Fenno, Mrs. Raymond Himes and Mrs. A. A. Hazelton were matrons.

Miss Martha Langley had charge and the party was under the auspices of The Ladies' Friendly. The committee were: Mrs. Charles Towne Whitten, chairman; Mrs. George Everett Pratt, Mrs. George Leroy French, Mrs. Sarah Goffe, Mrs. Theodore Guething, Mrs. Frank Russell, Mrs. Alfred Knight, Mrs. Otho Pierce, Mrs. Fred Alexander, Mrs. E. W. Farmer, Mrs. Fred Reynolds, Mrs. Charles Rogers, Mrs. Dearborn, Miss Ethel Pierce, Miss Marcia Hazelton, Miss Marjory Root and Miss Dorothea Chase. The ushers were Messrs. Howard Snelling, Ralph Whitten, Carl Guething, Philip Goffe, Chesley Whitten, Harold Farnsworth, Charles Lawrence and Kenneth Pratt.

Refreshments were served the children at the intermission, after which general dancing took place. The chairman, Mrs. Charles T. Whitten, was untiring in her endeavors to make the party a success and everything passed off in a very systematic and pleasant manner. A large attendance of adults enjoyed the afternoon from the reserved seats.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

If citizens will devote their thought and effort toward cleaning up our ponds and river and equipping Manchester Field with various things, they will do much more for the enjoyment and benefit of people than to continue harping upon flushing in the reservoirs.

I wonder what it would cost to have the Assessors' valuations made by streets? Made in that way it would be much more valuable as a reference and would also enable citizens to judge more surely as to the correctness of the valuations. It's of no consequence for assessing purposes who owns the property.

Before new street work is taken up minor repairs all over town should first be done. Some of the gutters on the east side streets are knocked out of shape and look very badly, and many streets need some repairing up after the winter. I believe the Selectmen should have the Superintendent report in writing on the condition of each street every spring and start that work first. Is that separate repair gang ever to be established?

I understand we are to have the grade crossing report this week. If it does not show up some more serious effort should be made to hasten it. If the commission has not agreed by this time it never will, and its divided report had better come now than to delay the advance of this town any longer. No matter what it reports, the whole matter will be fought out before the railroad commission. The Boston & Maine and the Boston & Northern want the cheapest thing and the town cannot afford anything but the best. But, however that may be, patience has ceased to be a virtue. Too many things have waited too long now for this report.

Lighting contracts seem to cause lots of trouble, particularly when an exciting city election campaign is under way to complicate things. No public service corporation can afford to make an unfair contract with a municipality or continue it if it becomes unfair. If municipal rates are made too low, however, it will be made up out of private consumers, of necessity.

79TH BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. Charles D. Folsom will quietly observe her 79th birthday at her home on Main street. Barring the effects of the severe accident that she suffered early two years ago, she is in fairly good health.

Mrs. Folsom was born in Boston, and lived in Cambridge for many years, and came to Winchester 21 years ago and settled on Myopia Hill where her husband engaged in farming. In 1849 she was married to Charles D. Folsom in Charlestown, she being a daughter of Hiram Welch a prominent resident of Cambridge—deputy sheriff, constable and undertaker.

In early life Mrs. Folsom was secretary of the Ladies' Samaritan Society (similar to our Visiting Nurse Association) for 20 years, secretary of the Soldiers' Relief Society during the civil war, and when nine years of age she became a member and an active worker in the Congregational Church. The Soldiers' Relief Society sewed and made garments for the soldier boys at the front and in the hospitals and did a grand work. She has been a member and constant attendant at the local Congregational Church since she first came to Winchester.

BASE BALL.

ARLINGTON 6. WINCHESTER 1.

Winchester High was defeated by Arlington High on Manchester Field Tuesday, May 4. Obregon started in to pitch but went to pieces in the fifth inning. Small, who took his place, pitched a good game. Grant played left field taking Sharon's place. Things began to look interesting in the ninth with three men on bases, and one down. Winchester was able to get but one run. Wood the Arlington pitcher held the team to two hits. Hurd, Winchester's second baseman had to withdraw from the game on account of dislocated shoulder. Wood showed up well for Winchester. The next game is on Saturday, May 8, with West Roxbury.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES.

At an adjourned meeting of the Epworth League this week the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, G. T. Davidson; Spiritual Dept., Edward M. Mason; Missionary Dept., Ethel M. Shepherd; Mercy and Help, Nina Hartly; Social, Emily W. Ladd; Secretary, Edna Johnson; Treasurer, J. Alfred Dover.

These new officers will be installed on Sunday, May 16, at seven o'clock. Miss Mary Hill of Melrose will render two vocal selections and Miss Bernice S. Hilton will render on the violin "The Lost Chord," with pipe organ accompaniment. The pastor will deliver an address especially prepared for this occasion. All are cordially invited.

The reception which was held in the church vestry last week for Rev. and Mrs. John H. Mansfield was a delightful occasion in more ways than one. It gave all of the people an opportunity to know this Godly man. In him the church feels it has an assistant pastor.

During the evening, the people turned the affair into a welcome also to the pastor and wife. Mrs. C. U. Dunning speaking for the church in words of grateful appreciation of the work which has been done since Mr. Chaffee came among us. Mrs. Dunning also congratulated the people as well as Mr. Chaffee on the marked prosperity of the church, and warmly welcomed the pastor and wife back for the third year.

Mr. Chaffee introduced Rev. Louis B. Bates, D. D., who delivered a unique address, during which he presented Mr. and Mrs. Chaffee, and Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield with souvenirs obtained while traveling in Palestine. The next speaker was Rev. John H. Mansfield who was pastor of this church 26 years ago. Rev. Joal H. Leonard, D. D., Mr. William F. Fitch and Nelson H. Seelye pleasantly entertained the audience with reminiscences. Miss Mary Hill a promising young singer from Melrose sang twice. Orchestral numbers were rendered by Mrs. Kingston, pianist, H. T. Poole, cornet, and Mr. Allen, violinist. During the evening the ladies served refreshments.

Sunday, May 9th, will be observed in the morning as mothers day, and in the evening a memorial service in honor of the veteran preachers of the M. E. Church. At each service the pastor will speak, and the children of the Sunday School will take a prominent part.

A Look Ahead.

Simon had just paid a long delayed bill at the grocer's, partly in response to many urgings and partly because he happened to have the requisite ready money. The grocer, an old friend in spite of his persistence in dunning, thanked him heartily.

"Good for you, Simon," he said graciously. "You deserve credit for paying up this way."

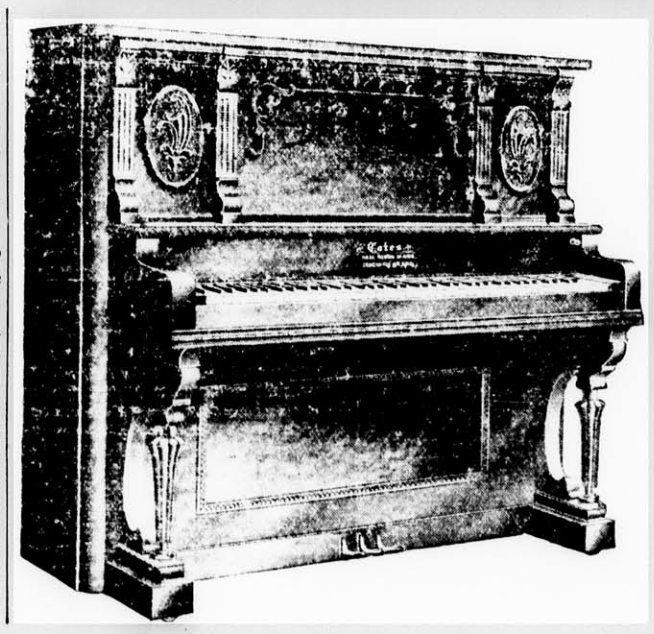

"I know it," replied Simon, "and I wish you'd give it to me sooner another time."—Youth's Companion.

TREMONT THEATRE.

Here is what the New York Herald of November 13th had to say about May Robson, who comes to the Tremont Theatre, May 10, 1909: "Standing like an oasis in a desert of dreary and weary plays, 'The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary', with May Robson in the title role will be held by many as the best comedy seen here this year.

"Devoid of all problems, suggestion or coarseness, the play is one of sweet simplicity. It is refreshing from the rise to the fall of the curtain. There is truly a laugh in every line and a smile in every action.

"Space forbids an extended review of the play. Suffice to say that the story deals with an old maid aunt, not the crabbed sort, but a sweet motherly woman whom country life has made sharp. A visit to the city and a taste for high life with her nephew, whom she had disowned for his escapades, shows her what life really is and rejuvenates her; makes her young in spirit as she really is in years, and brings about a happy ending to all of their lives.

"To praise the favorites would be to print the programme. Without being claimed or advertised as an 'all star cast' the supporting company without exception, seemed to live rather than act the sweetest, simplest play of the season. In Jack Storey, the college nephew of manifold scrapes, Miss Robson has a supporting lead who is excellent. His college chum, Clover, Walter Poulter; Bob Burnett, Francis Herblin; Mitchell, Paul Deckeske, there was assembled a trio of collegians who gave the play a dash of New York town that pleased excellently. The character work of Nina Seville as Lucinda was good, as was that of the other character part. The rest of the cast was in full keeping with the leads. One of the brightest lines of the play was the last: "The Lord intended all of us to be happy, but some of us don't know how to go about it.'"

COLONIAL THEATRE.

It seems to be a unanimous verdict that "A Stubborn Cinderella" which began an engagement at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, Monday May 3, is the best musical play that has been seen in in this part of the country for some time.

John Barry and Sallie Fisher have scored the biggest kind of a big hit.

Another little girl who has won high favor is Alice Dovey. She is quite the brightest bit of femininity the stage has seen in a long time. Others in the cast are Charles Prince, Bobby Barry, Dorothy Brenner, Alan Brooks, Don Merrifield, Charles Rankin, John Wheeler, Ben Turbett, Charles Wedlake, Clarence Lutz James Marlowe, Helen Salinger and Frank Magin.

The engagement is a limited one. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Three weeks of "The Runaway Girl" are over, and a fourth begins at the Castle Square on Monday. This musical comedy has caught the public as immediately as "The Circus Girl" did last winter, and it gives still further evidence of the skill of the John Craig Stock Company.

At the close of "The Runaway Girl," that delightful comedy, "The Geesha" will be produced by the John Craig Stock Company at the Castle Square.

Invest Your Money Yourself

Why put money into a savings bank when you can invest it to as good advantage yourself?

Banks are willing to borrow your money and pay you a small per cent because they re-invest it at a better rate of interest. Why not have that larger rate yourself?

You can by investing in improved Winchester real estate, and your money will be as safe as in the bank. Besides profiting by a better rate of interest your capital will earn, the principal itself will be growing, for Winchester realty is increasing in value from year to year.

Here is a mighty good investment west side 2 family house, 9 rooms each side all improvements. Rent 600. Price $6,500, terms satisfactory.

MOVING SEASON

Don't let another one catch you living in a rented house. There is neither pleasure nor profit in occupying another man's home. The rent paying keeps you dissatisfied. The profit goes to the other fellow.

"Rent" is but a modern term for "tribute" and the familiar term "landlord" simply the old feudal title "Land Lord" in disguise.

The modern plan of paying for a home lets the man with limited means in. He can wipe out the indebtedness he assumes with payments no greater than those that now go for rent. If you are interested in the home proposition, do not fail to consult this agency. Bargains: Here is an example—Church street 17,000 ft., house 8 rooms, all improvements. Easy terms $7500.

The scholars of the Gifford school were treated to an unexpected half holiday last Monday morning owing to the blowing off of the boiler and the breaking o a bar in the grate, necessitating the extinguishing of the fires. The blow-off pipe of the boiler opens into the fresh air chamber, and when the steam blew off it made considerable noise, frightening some of the smaller scholars. For this reason the teachers did not think it advisable to use the fire drill for their dismissal, but allowed them to file out in the usual manner. The report that there was undue excitement is erroneous.

WINCHESTER HOSPITAL.

Report of Committee to Investigate and Advise as to Building.

To the Citizens of Winchester:

As is well known to most of the citizens of Winchester, the sum of $50,000 has been given towards the establishment of a Memorial Hospital. On solicitation of the donor, the undersigned consented to act as a committee to investigate and advise with reference to building such a hospital.

At the outset it was deemed advisable, in connection with Mr. George Harrington, to form a corporation, and by act of the Legislature the Winchester Hospital has been incorporated, with Mr. Lewis Parkhurst as president, Mr. Preston Pond as treasurer, and Mr. Nelson Seelye as secretary.

Previous to its formation no member of this committee had very much knowledge of the requirements of a modern hospital, its cost of construction or maintenance. During the last few months, by consulting with physicians and experts in building hospitals, by visiting several of those recently constructed and best managed, they have endeavored to learn something of the problem which they have been asked to solve in the interests of this town. Would a small, well-equipped hospital be an advantage to the community or are we already well enough supplied by those existing in Boston and vicinity? If one is needed, of what type, and where shall it be located? Approximately, what will it cost to build and maintain it? These and other important questions must be answered to our satisfaction before it is safe to proceed.

The Visiting Nurses Association, which is doing a wonderfully effective work in visitation among the sick of the town, feel deeply the need of the reinforcement in their work that a well-equipped hospital would offer and already have, through years of devoted effort, accumulated a substantial amount towards this object. The nurses, through their visitation upon the sick and poor, realize most completely the great importance of a hospital where those who live under adverse conditions can be given the intelligent and refined care and surroundings so necessary to recovery.

The physicians of the town are unanimous in the belief that we need a hospital and are ready to cooperate heartily in its support.

As a result of careful and prolonged investigation and consultation with leading physicians and hospital experts we have come to the conclusion that to purchase so much land as seems wise to secure, having in mind the probably demands of the future, and to construct thereon a hospital of 20 beds (12 of which would be in wards, equally divided, male and female, and 8 private rooms,) will cost fully $50,000.

We find, also, that few, if any, hospitals are self-supporting, and that the expense of maintenance must depend, in addition to such amounts as patients are able to pay, either upon an income from endowment or charity or both. Inasmuch as the prime function of this hospital will be to care for those who are unable to pay full cost for hospital services, this will probably be no exception. While we feel sure that the charitably disposed of Winchester will always be ready to assist in the maintenance of this work, that through the churches, charitable organizations and individulas much could be obtained each year, we do not think it prudent to expect the annual deficit to be made up entirely from these sources, and that a substantial endowment should be assured before this enterprise is undertaken. We believe, therefore, that an endowment fund of at least $50,000, should be raised, so that fully one-half of the cost of maintenance, in excess of the income, may be assured. We shall hope in time that this fund may be doubled.

Now, in conclusion, the study of conditions made by the members of the corporation indicate that a well-equipped hospital is Winchester's great need, and we are ready to go forward with the work as soon as we feel satisfied that as a business proposition it is safe to do so. Winchester is a beautiful town. Nature has been lavish in her gifts. The high ideals of its citizens have also contributed to its splendid development. In what more appropriate manner can further steps towards its perfection be taken than in providing this haven of rest and restoration for all citizens?

The Treasurer of the Corporation or any member of the Committee will be glad to receive pledges for this endowment, to be made on condition that $50,000 or more are secured for this purpose, and it is earnestly desired that this amount may be pledged within thirty days in order that the committee may purchase the necessary land and proceed immediately to erect the buildings.

STOP SUNDAY LABOR.

All citizens of Winchester are urged to refrain from Sunday labor or games.

As announced in the STAR of last week, the Business Men's Conference of Winchester, at its meeting held last Sunday resumed its discussion of the increasing prevalence of labor and games upon the Lord's Day in Winchester. It first listened to a statement regarding the laws of Massachusetts relating to work on Sunday. This showed that barring some cases which did not apply to the matter in hand, the law could be said to be contained in the following section of chapter 460 of the Acts of 1904:

Section 2. Whoever, on the Lord's day, keeps open his shop, warehouse or workhouse, or does any manner of labor, business or work, except works of necessity and charity, or takes part in any sport, game, play or public diversion, except a concert of sacred music or an entertainment given in good faith by a religious or charitable purpose, the entire proceeds of which, if any, less only the necessary and reasonable expenses, not to exceed twenty-five per cent. of such proceeds, are to be devoted exclusively to a religious or charitable purpose shall be punished by a fine of not more than fifty dollars for each offence; and the proprietor, manager or person in charge of such game, sport, play or public diversion, except as aforesaid, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars for each offence.

It was further stated that the work complained of was contrary to law and could be punished.

The discussion which followed brought out the fact that the meeting of the Conference, as reported in the STAR, aroused considerable interest in the town; that many outside the Conference were sorry to see the work and games on the Sabbath; that some were disturbed that any group of men should take steps to enforce the law.

The Conference desired to go on record as opposed to such work, but that it intended in no way to act as police officer or district attorney. press g---etaoin shrdlu cmfwyp c On the other hand it desired to bring the matter to the attention of the citizens and impress upon them the moral side of the question. That was considered to be all that was necessary. We believe that the influence of these things is bad on any community, because it exerts a very harmful influence, especially on the young.

The Conference voted to have its position more fully stated and to urge upon all the citizens of Winchester to co-operate in this matter, that the town may be one where every influence is uplifting, and no one, openly at least, breaks any law.

TUESDAY NIGHT'S FIRE.

What promised to be a serious fire was discovered about eleven o'clock Tuesday night in the house No. 3 Hillside avenue, owned by Mrs. Fannie P. Rust, and but for her prompt work in arousing two sleeping inmates on the third floor serious results might have occured.

The house is known to many as the Marshall place, it being occupied for many years by Mr. J. Murray Marshall, and later by Mr. Maurice Saunders. On Tuesday a Japanese student who is employed by a firm in Boston came to the house to stay for the summer. When opening his trunk on the attic floor it became necessary to disconnect an electric flat iron. After the light was used he evidently left the current on when again attaching the iron. After Mrs. Rust had retired she was alarmed by the sound of the flames, and upon investigation found the third floor blazing fiercely. She went through the smoke and aroused the maid and Japanese who were soundly sleeping unconscious of their danger.

An alarm from Box 61 brought the department to the scene, and its good work confined the blaze entirely to the attic floor, it being extinguished in about three quarters of an hour. The damage was considerable, it mostly being done by water, although the roof and top floor was badly gutted. The loss was covered by insurance.

JUNE BREAKFAST.

Plans are fully under way for the annual June Breakfast given under the auspices of the Visiting Nurse Association. Last year the Breakfast was successful from all points of view, but this year the ladies are making preparations to feed the largest number since this social custom was inaugurated. A fine breakfast for twenty-five cents—better than can be procured in Boston for the same money—including fine orchestral music is reason enough for the presence on these occasions of so many people.

FRANKLIN D. RICHARDSON.

Franklin Darwin Richardson, a prominent business man of this town, passed away at New London, N. H., where he had gone for his health, on Saturday last. He was 55 years of age. For the past five years he had conducted the grocery and provision store on Pleasant street which bears his name, having moved to Winchester from Chelsea in 1904 and purchasing the business from the late Edgar A. Holbrook.

For the past year he had been in failing health. A year ago he suffered an attack of pneumonia which came very near resulting fatally and following his recovery he spent the summer at Vershire, Vt., returning to Winchester and taking up his business cares in the fall. But enemia had gained a strong hold on his system and he was soon forced to give up active work, his condition becoming so serious that he went to New London, N. H., some two weeks ago, where he passed away.

Mr. Richardson was born in Cambridge, his parents being Bernice and Emlin (Welton) Richardson. He was married in 1884 to Miss Caroline A. Orr, who survives him. Besides his wife he leaves one son and one daughter—Harris Sawyer and Nina Alice—a brother, Solon J. Richardson of Roxbury, and three sisters—Mrs. Albert Fuller of New York and Mrs. C. F. Harvey and Miss Carrie B. Richardson of Melrose.

Mr. Richardson was a Mason and a member of Robert Lash Lodge of Chelsea, and was connected with the Congregational Church at Vershire, Vt.

The funeral services were held from the residence on Mt. Pleasant street on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, conducted by Rev. S. Winchester Adriance, and attended by a large gathering of friends from this town and Boston. The gifts of flowers were exceptionally profuse and beautiful.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Fred A. Evans, Harry Morrill, Everett Smith, Nathan Blaisdell, Cyrus Lothrop, David Draper, Albert C. Robinson and Albert Fuller, all associated in the employ of the deceased.

As a mark of respect to the deceased the stores in the centre were closed during the funeral.

The burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

MRS. ELIZABETH P. BLANK.

Winchester suffered the death of another of its elderly residents on Tuesday afternoon when Mrs. Elizabeth Pauline Blank, aged 84 years, passed away at the home of her son, Philip J. Blank on Highland avenue. The cause of her death was bronchitis, with which she had been sick a little over a week. She had made her home in this town for the past 38 years.

Mrs. Blank was born in Switzerland, coming to Boston with her parents when eight years old. In 1845 she was married to Joseph Blank, also of Switzerland, at Milton, who died some 49 years ago. Her parents were Benjamin and Paulena Waldmyer.

Mrs. Blank was the mother of nine children, four of whom are still living and residents of Winchester—John S., Mrs. Elizabeth E. Downs, Philip J. and Benjamin F. Two sisters also survive her, Mrs. Emiline Bosnack of Long Island, N. Y., and Mrs. Catherine Adler of Hyde Park.

In this town she was a member of the Church of the Epiphany, and in years was among the oldest members.

The funeral services were held from the Church of the Epiphany yesterday afternoon at 2.30, conducted by Rev. John Wallace Suter, rector of the church. The burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

Written for the STAR.

MILK HINTS TO CONSUMERS.

Be willing to pay a fair price for a good article, and then insist upon getting what you pay for.

Do not leave the milk bottle in the hot kitchen while cooking is going on, pour out the required amount and then return the remainder to the ice chest at once.

The milk and butter should be placed upon the dining table last, and the unused portions removed at once after the meal is over and returned to the ice chest.

The milk pitcher should be sterilized, not "just washed."

CARD OF THANKS.

Winchester, May 13, 1909.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I desire, through your columns, to express my appreciation of the prompt, vigorous and efficient work of the fire department at my house on the night of Tuesday last, and to return my grateful thanks to them and to the kind neighbors and friends who did so much to assist and relieve me at that time.

MRS. FANNIE P. RUST.

PURINGTON--SACHE.

A wedding of considerable interest to many Winchester people was that of Miss Marguerite Elizabeth Sache and Mr. John Graves Purington, which took place at the Church of the Epiphany on Saturday evening last. Owing to the social prominence of the couple and their large circle of friends and acquaintances, the wedding was the most important of this spring.

The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock by Rev. John Wallace Suter, rector of the church. Mr. William Bancroft Sache, brother of the bride presided at the organ. The wedding party entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march and Mendelssohn's march was played at the conclusion of the ceremony. The church was decorated with palms and easter lilies, with an arch of green and lilies at the altar and bunches of pink roses at the pews.

The bride wore a directoire gown of dutchess satin with rose point and dutchess lace trimming. Her veil was caught with lilies of the valley and she carried a shower bouquet of these flowers and orchids.

Mrs. Waldo S. Manson of West Medford was matron of honor, wearing a dress of light blue marquisette and carrying bride roses. Mr. William Bain of Boston was the best man.

The bridesmaids were Miss Marion Spaulding of Boston, Miss Carolyn Nutt and Miss Helen Edlefson of Winchester, and Miss Jeanette Purrington of Topsham, Me., a sister of the groom. They wore pink chiffon over pink messaline and carried sweet peas.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents from eight-thirty until ten, Mr. and Mrs. Purington being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Sache and Mrs. Purrington. The ushers for both church and house were Messrs. Louis Wagg of Lowell, Chauncey Gilbert of Newton, Allston Stillman, Robert Barr and Dr. William H. Gilpatric of Winchester, and Frank Cummings of Boston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. William C. Sache of Glengarry and the groom the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Purington of Topsham, Me.

Following a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Purington will reside in their new home, No. 6 Fenwick road.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

Any one desiring a tract of land most suitable for building purposes should consider the S. W. Smith homestead on Washington street near Swanton street. There is about 50,000 feet of land, which has frontage on three streets. On Washington street there is room for three single, or two double houses; on Swanton street two and on Winchester street four. There is a house and large stable now on the land, and the latter could easily be made over into a house. Houses in this part of the town would let as fast as could be built.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

Next Thursday, Ascension Day, there will be the service of the Holy Communion at 9 a. m.

WINCHESTER BOAT CLUB NEWS.

The annual meet of the Eastern Division of the American Canoe Association will be held this year at Moswansicutt Lake at Scituate, R. I., on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, May 29th, 30th and 31st, under the auspices of the Swastika Canoe Club. It is anticipated that a number of the Winchester boys will attend, although the local club will not enter any crews in the races.

At a meeting of the directors of the club held last Saturday evening Mr. Duray L. Sheraton was appointed a member of the Regatta Committee.

The initiation fee of the club has been fixed for this season at $5. This reduces the fee from $10, which has been the amount decided upon in previous years.

The fine large birch bark canoe owned by the club is in a fair way to become the property of the town of Winchester, as the club has signified a willingness to present it to the High School if the School Committee decide to place it in the building. This class of canoe is rapidly disappearing, it giving way to the lighter and more easily constructed canvas boat, and will in a few years undoubtedly become a decided curiosity.

An effort has been made among the club members to have a tennis court constructed near the boat house, Mr. James H. Gerlach having offered to allow the use of his land adjoining for the purpose. As the court would necessarily be of turf and could not be made ready for use until well into the season, the project will probably be abandoned for this year.

Two new canoes are to be purchased for the use of the club members. This will make about nine canoes available for use this season.

Mr. Hermann D. Murphy is making an endeavor to revive the interest among the club members in canoe sailing this summer, and the two club sailing canoes, the Uncle Sam and Old Glory, are to be thoroughly overhauled and put in condition. A uniform rig of simple pattern is planned for all of the sailers and a series of races to be held. In this connection Mr. Murphy has donated a silver cup, which will be awarded at the end of the season to the winner of the larger number of the races. There are at present some 18 sailing canoes at the club.

President George B. Smith and Vice-president Charles A. Gleason have donated two silver medals with the club seal embossed upon them for water sports at the club. The regratta committee will announce later the date and nature of these events.

It is planned to have an orchestra at the club on alternate Saturday evenings during the entire summer with the exception of the month of August, and special music and acquatic events are planned for all of the holidays during the summer.

Mr. Bernard M. Cooper, son of James Cooper, last year's steward, arrived at the club last week with his wife and son, and will have charge during the season.

THE MOTHER'S ASSOCIATION.

The May meeting of the Mother's Association will be held in room 30 of the High school building on Wednesday, May 19 at 3 p. m.

Miss Marion McG. Noyes and Mrs. George Coit will speak on the subject of Reading—particularly in regard to children. A set of books of a very practical and helpful kind will be added to the library at this meeting—9 volumes as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Study of Child Life | Marion Foster Washburn |
| Textiles and Clothing | Watson |
| Home Care of the Sick | Pope |
| Personal Hygiene | Le Bosquet |
| Principles of Cookery | Barrows |
| Household Management | Terrill |
| Household Hygiene | Elliott |
| The House | Bevier |
| Care of Children | Cotton |

Also the publication Good Housekeeping for Jan., Feb., Apr., May, the other numbers to follow as issued. There will be the social hour with light refreshments, and children will be cared for as usual.

The annual out-of-door meeting will be held in June, the date and place to be announced by invitation post cards. These are to be used as tickets of admission and will only be sent to those members who have paid their dues for 1909.

SAMUEL J. ELDER, ESQ.

Achieved Success Because of His Capacity for Taking Pains.

A descendant of the "Fighting Parson" Elder of Indian and French wars fame, Samuel James Elder, barrister and statesman, declares that he owes his position among the leaders of the American bar chiefly to the fact of being blessed "with an infinite capacity for taking pains."

"Sam" Elder, as he is generally known, with his life crowned with many successes and brilliant accomplishments, is today as popular as when, a Yale student, he graduated with the class of '73.

An eloquent public speaker a pleader the logic of whose argument has proved frequently disastrous to his opponents, the possessor of a mind that can cope with and solve any legal problem, Mr. Elder sees in hard work the only road to success.

"There is no substitute for hard, grinding, incessant work," he says. "Good work has always been hard work."

Kindly, cheerful, ever ready to encourage and to advise, always courteous, Mr. Elder, is hailed as a "top-liner of a good fellow."

He has a great deal of the sense of humor and his stories told in the course of an after-dinner speech rank with the best of the kind, and many of these have achieved wide renown. His tale of the Kansas judge, who lived with the fence of his house along the State line is still going the rounds although Mr. Elder told it several years ago. One day it appears the Judge's son Tom fell to fighting another boy in the yard. The Judge came out of the house to intervene. He mounted the fence, and cried "I command you to cease in the name of the Commonwealth of——"

Then the fence broke and the Judge fell into Missouri.

"Give him fits, Tom," yelled the Judge, "I'm out of my jurisdiction."

Although he is approaching the age of 60, Mr. Elder is still an athlete and excels as a golf player.

He was born in Hopeville, R. I., in 1850, but has been practising law in Boston since 1875.

On graduating from the schools of his native town, Mr. Elder entered Yale, graduating from that institution in 1873. A year after his graduation he married, and soon after took up his residence in Winchester.

Only recently Mr. Elder's name was prominently brought before the public when he was mentioned for Attorney-General in President Taft's cabinet.

Among the famous cases in which Mr. Elder figured as an attorney are that in which he defended and succeeded in getting acquitted Charles R Eastman, the Harvard instructor, accused of having murdered his brother-in-law, and his defence of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy in a law suit in which he scored a brilliant victory.

He was also prominent in opposing the Harvard-Technology merger and represented this country before the Hague Tribunal in the Newfoundland fisheries dispute.

He is prominent in social life and is a member of the Union and City Clubs of Boston, the Country and Canoe Clubs of Winchester, and of the Middlesex, Curtis and Seapuit Clubs.

How Mr. Elder views the road to success for a young attorney is clearly outlined in the following statement:

"It is said that an eminent English judge was once asked if he would name three elements of success in the law," and that he replied, "The first is good nature, the second is good nature and the third is good nature." This was perhaps emphasized over much one side of a lawyer's equipment, but it nevertheless remains true that fair-mindedness and respect for the views and honest contentions of the other side, coupled with courteous conduct, both in court and out, are of the highest importance to the legal practitioner. The commonly accepted idea that a lawyer should be brusque, clever if not cunning, bitter and sarcastic, is a most serious and fatal misconception.

"In the first instance harshness toward witnesses, overbearing and insolent attitude toward the court and opposing counsel are, and deserve to be, tremendous handicaps in court. Judges have hard work without listening to bickerings between attorneys and without having constantly to guard themselves against prejudice arising from the conduct of lawyers toward them.

"In the second place juries will not stand for that sort of conduct. They do not believe in the abuse of witnesses or in the smart talk of lawyers, or the trial of cases as if a judicial proceeding was 'playing the game,' and the lawyer who misunderstands this will do so at his cost.

"In the third place it is to be remembered that the most important and valuable part of a lawyer's work is out of court, in the making of adjustments between irritated and oftentimes angry contestants. He does no better service to his client than in ignoring pique and injured feeling and in finding a fair and substantial ground of permanent adjustment. This cannot be done by calling the other side names or allowing his own irritation to come to the surface. It is true that clients often do not appreciate this form of service and want to see their cases tried out and the other side 'shown up,' but in the long run the business community appreciate a competent and pacific advice.

"Of course this does not answer the whole question of success at the bar. As for the rest there is no mystery. Success demands the same qualities that it does in business, and that is infinite application. There is no substitute for hard, grinding, incessant work. No point is too trivial to be examined to the limit: no doubt is too trivial to be ignored. What has been called the 'sense of danger' must be ever present. Full mastery of every case in all its details is a prerequisite to even moderate success. The competition is too sharp and the profession filled with too many clear-headed men to permit slip-shod or slovenly work. And, withal, fairness in discussion and fairness in presentation is at the root of the whole matter. The best asset that any lawyer can have is in the confidence which he inspires among his associates, in all negotiations and in the courts, that he is making no claim and advancing no points in which he does not himself believe."

SPRAYING TREES.

Arsenates are Not Injurious to Trees or Grass Land.

Articles which have been published in some of the newspapers of the state calling attention to the fact that Professor Headden of Colorado believes that he has proved that the use of arsenates in spraying for insects is dangerous, and that it has in numerous instances caused the death of trees, deal with a matter of such great importance that it seems desirable in order that the public may neither be misled or unnecessarily alarmed, to state that Professor Headden's conclusions are not generally accepted either by entomologists, botanists or horticulturists connected with the different experiment stations of the country as being reliabe.

Dr. E. D. Ball, entomologist of the Utah Experiment Station, who has paid particular attention to this subject, says in the conclusion of an address delivered before the Utah Horticultural society:—"that the conditions described by Dr. Headden and attributed to the effects of arsenical spraying occur over widely distributed areas and have killed thousands of trees on which no arsenic has ever been used, and that therefore arsenical poisoning cannot be the primary cause of this condition; that the only trees positively known to have died of arsenical poisoning where the two to which soluble arsenite was applied, a compound which no one has ever used for spraying purposes."

The soil characteristics throughout the region with which both Dr. Headden and Dr. Ball are most familiar are radically different from those existing here. In many localities the western soils are strongly impregnated with alkali and Dr. Ball believes that it is the injurious effect of this alkali, combined with injudicious use of water in irrigation, but that is chiefly responsible for the trouble with orchard trees, which Dr. Headden ascribes to spraying with arsenical poisons. Dr. Ball however, points out that there is a possibility of danger from excessive spraying on strongly alkaline soils since the action of alkaline in such soils might to some slight degree tend to bring the arsenic into solution.

It is not the practice of this state to use soluble arsenic compounds in spraying, and it is not the belief of the chemists of the station that the insoluble arsenates which are used will become soluble in our soils, which never contain alkali in any considerable quantity. While, therefore, indiscriminate and excessive spraying is in all cases advisable, all the experts of the Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station are agreed in believing that the use of arsenates in accordance with directions published by the experiment station, and as practiced by the gypsy moth commission, is not attended with danger to the trees or to the persons consuming the fruit of the trees.

In proof of the soundness of this view, attention is called to the fact that in Massachusetts, where arsenic compounds have been more extensively and longer used in spraying than anywhere else, not a single instance is known either among orchard or shade trees where injury other than slight burning of the foliage due to excessive applications or improperly prepared materials has ever followed.

NOW IS THE TIME TO LAY IN COAL.

George W. Blanchard & Co. are selling coal 50cts. a ton under prices charged in Boston. One reason why they are enabled to sell at such a low price is because their coal requires no handling. It is dumped into elevated bins from cars, loaded onto teams by gravity after passing over a seive, and finally chuted into cellar coal bins of residences. Not once is there need for the use of a shovel. These operations save much time and money. As coal will not be any lower than at the present time, now is when next winter's supply should be laid in.

CONVERTED MAN CLOSES PLANT

For the first time in its history the National Tube Works of McKeesport, Pa., closed last week giving 1200 men a Sunday with their families. This step Superintendent W. A. Cornelius of the National Plant declares is the forerunner of the movement which before it ends will close every property of the United States Steel Corporation, of which the National Tube Works is a component part, on Sunday.

At 6 o'clock in the morning several watchmen were stationed at the $10,000,000 works with instructions to arrest any man who attempted to desecrate the Sabbath by working.

The latest Sunday closing order is the direct result of the recent religious conversion of Superintendent Cornelius.

MUSIC AND HEALTH.

The Power of Harmony to Strengthen the System has long been Appreciated—Make the Songs of a Nation and No One Will Need to Prescribe its Drugs—The Experience of the Manager of the Largest of American Conservatories—The Pianist Lifts Several Tons Daily—Professional Singers Almost Never Develop Consumption—Experiments with Monkeys, Lions and Snakes Have Proved the Influence of Music over Animals.

BY FREDERICK RICE, JR.

Boston, May 8, 1909—Harmony for health. Rhythm as a life rule. Music as a tonic stimulant. Song as a preventive of respiratory diseases, an aid to individual supremacy.

This ancient conception keeps coming up as a novelty in an age of scientific discovery and experimentation. It is not really a novel idea, of course. David used music on Saul, and there probably were therapeutic musicians long before David.

Still the idea is constantly recurring. Music has been compared to an electric force. At a recent meeting of the department of superintendence of the National Educational Association William L. Tomlins, the well known director of the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893, said impressively:

"Real music does not lend itself to ignoble expression. Music vitalizes as nothing else can. Under the influence of music the careworn are refreshed and strengthened, hearts are stirred, and all feel themselves moved as if by one mighty bond of brotherhood. This power of music can be utilized for the betterment of mankind. Every school in the land should be filled with song. Grown-ups, too, may get out of music a something that will give them strength to fight the battle of life.

"The whole nation can be benefited by the power of song. And this power can be utilized as electricity is at present—which at one time was considered just as intangible a thing as music is by most people now. As in electricity so in music. We have not learned half its uses. Music comes in a flash. Those who hear it are lifted up by its power. A few take strength and joy that music has given away with them. It is from these few that we can get an inkling of the power which is in music."

High authorities approve the notion of the essential healthfulness of the musical pursuits. Practically all the great opera singers have been husky and healthy. "Let me make the songs of a nation and I care not who prescribes the drugs," is the paraphrase of a distinguished musician who as teacher in the oldest and largest of American music schools has witnessed the progress of hundreds of young people who began their musical education with evidence of physical frailty only to improve steadily in physique and vitality.

It would be strange if it were not so, considering the physical exercise which the serious student gets. Most important of all are the exercises in deep breathing which are part of the training of every singer. Immunity from many of the most serious of ills is secured by proper habits of respiration.

The other musical pursuits give valuable exercise. An ingenious statistician has calculated that in four hours' practice the pianist lifts the equivalent of from two to four tons. The tendency of modern music is to increase the amount of lifting. Similar figures could be developed for other kinds of music.

Then there is the psychical power which experiments have shown music to have. Take for example its influence upon animals. French savants have discovered that even on the lower orders of animal life—excepting spiders—musical tones may be used to produce both stimulating and depressing effects. Lizards and scorpions were made to beat time with their tongues. The cobra balanced himself on his tail while a lively air was played. Curator Frank C. Baker, of the Academy of Science, Chicago, as a result of many tests with creatures in the Lincoln Park zoo is certain that the physical health of the animals can be promoted by harmony or injured by discord. Herr Baler, a German violinist, has conducted experiments in the royal zoological garden of Berlin. The species respond in various ways. He found, for instance, that the puma is peculiarly sensitive to music; that leopards are as indifferent as fashionable people at the opera; that lions get nervous and apprehensive; that hyenas are terrified; that monkeys are curious about the sounds but rarely express positive pleasure.

Such facts are significant. They show that music is more than a mere diversion. It is a force which can be reckoned with in the campaign in behalf of national health that is being waged. Where music is common—good music— there is health. On this subject Ralph L. Flanders, who as manager of the New England Conservatory of Music, the largest school of its kind in America, and of the Boston Opera Company, the most remarkable of developments of American grand opera, has had exceptional opportunities to be familiar with the conditions in which candidates for musical careers pursue their studies, has said in an interview:

"Music students of whom there are said to be ten thousand studying in Boston alone, are a peculiarly healthful class of young people. It has been the experience at this institution for nearly 60 years that with musical proficiency comes increased vitality and physical endurance. A conservatory, of course, is not a sanatarium. It is no place at which consumption can be cured with a song or heart disease remedied by practice on the violin. Preparation for a musical career, on the contrary, means a lot of exhaustive and exhausting work. Investigations have shown that discords have as bad effect on the human organism as harmony has a beneficial effect. That explains why extreme nervousness is sometimes caused by the prolonged practice, especially before the musician has gained complete mastery of his medium. It also explains the great importance of following only methods that are physiologically right. That is why correct hand culture is so necessary to the prospective pianist. That is why in learning to sing it is essential to follow a course that does not produce undue strain on the vocal organs, thus increasing instead of diminishing any tendency to tubercular or other disturbance—exactly as the fluent and easy old Italian method of singing has never been superseded at the New England Conservatory. That is why a good manner of breathing is the first consideration in preparing a young man or young woman for a career as singer. That is why in studying the string and wind instrument the student is not encouraged to keep on with an instrument that irritates him. Difference of temperament, for instance, make it a great pleasure for one to learn such an instrument as the oboe, while another is constantly fretted by its limitations. Germans and those of German descent usually enjoy, we find, learning the brass wind instruments while native Americans are like the French in getting more benefit and pleasure from the wood wind.

"Over-doing is the music student's danger. That is the trouble in many European cities where young Americans study under no expert supervision, living in unattractive boarding houses or Bohemian studios. Our American experience has shown that a dormitory system is a necessary part of the equipment of a music school, since the eating and sleeping habits of the musicians are no less important than the habits of singing and playing. Professional singers do not allow themselves to eat any of a long list of good things. The music student needs to be taught to be careful in such matters.

"The record of the visits of the physician, Dr. H. S. Warren, who supervises the health of the students at the dormitories of the New England Conservatory proves the essential healthfulness of the student life in a city like Boston. In five years' time not a case of tuberculosis has developed, not a case of pneumonia. As regards other diseases an almost equally remarkable record has been made. The dormitory system with its regular hours and carefully supervised diet makes somewhat exceptional conditions but it is generally true that intelligent music study makes bad business for the doctor.

"The known healthfulness of musical pursuits when conducted in a truly professional spirit illustrates just what Director Tomlins means when he pleads for more music in the public schools. Fortunately there is a good deal of this kind of music already. Hundreds of well trained musicians have made this kind of popular musical education their life work. Normal work in preparation for it has been so developed here that for more than half a century Boston has been the great source of supply for teachers of music in the United States."

There is indeed considerable statistical evidence to prove that the professional use of the voice exercises an important prophylactic influence against the development of consumption, and several investigators have shown that a remarkably small relative percentage of singers, orators, etc., fall a victim to that disease. Chateauneuf says that out of 1,554 fatal cases of consumption occurring in Paris hospitals in the course of ten years, not one was a professional speaker or singer. "The great scientist, Cuvier," says Clombe in his 'Physiology Applied to Health,' believed that he was saved from incipient consumption by receiving a professorship which obliged him to lecture for some hours daily."

Any number of authorities might be cited, did space permit, to further substantiate these statements. Steinbrenner, the famous German scientist, held that the habit of incomplete breathing was the principal cause of consumption, and advised forced respiration as a preventitive measure of the highest value, as did also such well-known men as Autenreith; Crichton, Carswell, Clark and Ramadge.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

When the Pianophiends was first produced at Keith's Theatre, this splendid act in which six pianos are on the stage at the same time, and all played by experts, it was regarded as one of the biggest novelties in vaudeville, but the Pianophiends of that time are dimmed by the lustre of the company that is booked for Keith's the week of May 17th. It will be even more spectacular, more novel and more beautiful than ever.

This week will also be notable for that clever actress, Valerie Bergere will put on for the first time in Boston, a new play called "The Morning After."

The Jack Wilson Trio of comedians promises to be one of the hits of the bill. A spectacular act will be that of the Vissiutis, who on a beautiful horse performs some amusing acrobatic stunts. The Hawaiian Trio of singers will be another feature. Then there will be Work and Ower, the acrobats; George H. Wood; Frosini, and Selbini and Grovini.

GAIETY THEATRE.

Manager George Batcheller of the Gaiety Theatre offers for his attraction next week "Clark's Runaway Girls Company." There will be an entire change of burlesque, with beautiful new costumes, new scenery, electrical and mechanical effects. The musical extravaganza, "Salome and the Judge" will be elaborately staged and the popular players presenting this musical comedy will be found.

An olio of exceptional merit will be offered consisting of The Davis Imperial Trio, Musicians, Adams and Winfield, dancers, The Great Carroll, mimic, the famous Livingstons, European Risley Acrobats, Crawford and Manning, and Miss Estella Rose, the great character singer. There are daily matinees at the popular Gaiety theatre beginning at 2.15 o'clock.

BOSTON THEATRE.

So phenomenal has been the success of Chauncey Olcott's present engagement at the Boston theatre with his newest Irish comedy-drama "Ragged Robin" that it has been decided to keep the popular star and this most enjoyable, clean, sweet play at the Boston Theatre until Saturday night, May 22.

"Ragged Robin" deals largely with the fascinating, sentimental side of the Irish people, with their optimism, the tear and the smile, the song and the dance, the delicious lovemaking, the manliness of the men and the daintiness of the women, the fairies, the banshees and other mythological folk whose doings are entwined in the hearts of gossoon and colleen.

Monday, May 24, the theatre will be closed; Tuesday evening, May 25, will be given the famous star gambol of The Lambs, and Wednesday night, May 26, comes the magnificent spectacular show "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" for an early summer engagement.

TREMONT THEATRE.

May Robson and her excellent company began a brief engagement at the Tremont Theatre last Monday night in the breeziest and wholesomest comedy seen here in years.

"It is not easy for a woman to be funny and retain the sympathy and respect of her audience.

"May Robson did this in 'The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary,' and there were few who left the theatre without feeling better for an evening spent with the sweet, generous, impulsive old lady of the play.

"A sketchy little love story between nephew Jack and Betty the chum's sister, furnishes a thread to hang occasional romantic episodes, and several boisterous young city chaps helped with the noise making. Jack Story played the scapegrace relative naturally and with boyish enthusiasm and confidence. Lila Blow, with a happy smile and winning ways assisted in the fooling and lovemaking. A capital, eccentricural character was furnished by NinaSeville as Lucinda, the depressed, soured, homely servant of Aunt Mary."

The usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday will be given during Miss Robson's stay.

Politicians Won.

The Mass. House, after having once voted for direct nominations, in compliance with the party whip, voted the measure down Tuesday. Democrats who voted in favor in the first instance, kept away from the House and thus assisted in defeating the bill. Politicians are pretty nearly the same, no matter whether they are Republicans or Democrats. This measure was destined to place the nominating officers in the hands of the people, and this the politicians did not want.

Winchester and Its Industries.

Winchester industries are destined to locate near the Woburn line. This affords an opportunity to draw upon the labor population of that city. This is no doubt agreeable to the inhabitants of Winchester as well as those of Woburn, as the former prefers to remain a residential community. When the McKay industry decided to locate here, many looked upon it as a great boon to the town. The opposite proved to be the result, for besides providing schooling for the children of the employees, much other work was done that called for the expenditure of considerable money. Some houses were built for the employees, most of them of a very cheap and inexpensive order. The company abandoned its plant after being here a few years, and these houses are now occupied by a class of people that make but a small financial return to the town for the benefits received. The outcome of this plant coming here was in the end a direct injury to Winchester.

Some cities and towns have boards of trade whose special mission is to cause new industries to locate in them. Winchester, however, prefers to continue as a residential community with no desire to offer attraction to business enterprises.

THIRD SOCIAL AND RECEPTION.

The members ond invited guests of the Business Men's Sunday noon Conference were entertained at the home of Mr. Clovis N. Johnson, Webster St., on Thursday last, April 29th. A large number were present. Samuel J. Elder, Esq., was the guest of the evening. The singing of Dr. Hinds was very much appreciated. The president, Mr. Danniel Linscott, Jr., in introducing Mr. Elder, gave a short sketch of the organization and its purposes and plans. Among other things he stated that the Business Men's Sunday Conference was trying to show how the men of the Church and community could study the Sunday School lessons and the teachings of Christ in the light of these present times and apply them to the welfare of man, and not in the manner of 2000 or 4000 years ago.

Mr. Elder proved to be a very entertaining speaker as ever, and he made his topic Courts and Lawyers very interesting.

Mr. Johnson also proved to be a delightful entertainer in the refreshment line.

The affair was a decided success.

ADVERTISE YOUR HOME TOWN.

A recent issue of the Boston Globe contained a well written article on Winchester and its attractions as a place of residence. A number of copies of the paper have been secured by the Winchester Improvement Association and will be given free to any who desire copies for their own use or who will send them to their friends in other places.

This is an easy and effective way of calling attention to the many advantages of the town and should turn the thoughts of home seekers to Winchester. The papers are free for the asking and may be had by calling at "The Paper Store," 555 Main street.

NOTICE.

The grocery and provision business conducted at Nos. 10 and 12 Pleasant street by the late Franklin D. Richardson will be continued as heretofore by Harris S. Richardson.

We thank our customers for their patronage of the past and solicit a continuance of the same.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Inspired by the work of the citizens' committee that is bent upon making "Boston-1915" the finest city in the world, and by the fact that Boston is 54 hours nearer Europe in sailing distance than any other port in the new world, Edward L. Burwell, of 132 Forest street this town, a member of a noted Bay State family of mariners, has come forth with a plan for erecting a giant dock, with a frontage of over 13,000 feet on deep water, backed by adequate railroad terminals and bonded free warehouses, and which would make the famed docks at Roterdam, Antwerp, Hacburg, Manchester, Liverpool and London pale into insignificance. The scheme, with a half page general view, was detailed at length in the Boston Post of April 25, and is one of the most important contritutions on this important subject yet suggested.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jenkins have gone to Boston for a two weeks' stay.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Why should not the items which go to make up our tax rate be printed upon the bills sent out by the collector so that people may know just what they are paying for? There is no one thing that we need educating upon more than the taxation question, and still we do not take advantage of many simple helps.

Why will not our Park Board ask for money at the coming June town meeting to establish upon Manchester Field some gymnastic apparatus, swings, teater boards, etc., so that it may be in fact what it is now in name, a playground? The board has taken surprisingly little interest in the proper development of this field and cannot be very proud of its work.

If our grade crossing matter had been put into the hands of three common sense business men it would have been settled long ago, but so long as matters are left to members of the legal fraternity they will be procrastinated to the limit. It comes about in a perfectly natural way and we are the ones to be blamed for permitting it to control such an important question. How much more delay will we stand for?

While the legislature has been making progress lately and cleaned up its calender well, none of the most important matters have yet come before it and it still looks as if the session will last close up to the Fourth of July. Governor Draper is a more decided force in legislation than any of his recent predecessors have been, and he does not trim. It begins to look as if he would stir up some considerable opposition among pet project members and the growling has begun, but it will disturb him very little.

I have not heard of our appropriations committee organizing yet, but when it does, Mr. Corey should be chosen for chairman as he has been one of the strongest members of the committee for the past three years, and it is of most importance to have a strong chairman for this committee. But three members of last year's committee have been retained, so that it is practically a new panel, although a number have had previous experience. There should be no difficulty in reducing our tax rate again next year as the valuation of the town is growing so rapidly, but to combine yearly a gradual reduction a good outlook ahead must be kept.

With all the attractiveness of the stores people want FIRST CLASS GOODS and they must have a price for the goods, or they will keep on the other side of the street.

These two stores are to be known in town where you can purchase Flour (Angelus Flour) Sugar, VERMONT CREAMERY BUTTER and many other very necessary articles for the pantry, (which touch a man in two of his weakest parts, his stomach and his purse) at a price lower than same quality of goods can be sold in town.

It will pay you to go out of your way a little to make us a call, and for your early morning breakfast, (Say—to improve it) take home a pound print of our butter at 33ct the pound.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The Middlesex County Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold its convention at the Union Congregational church, Westford, Thursday, May 20. The morning session will be open at 10 A. M., the afternoon at 1.30 P. M. Members from Winchester will find it most convenient to go by train to Lowell and thence by trolley. The Westford cars leave hourly, on the half hour. Besides the usual reports there will be a symposium on "The Local Union" and an address by Dr. N. Louise Rand on "The Patent Medicine Problem." It is hoped there may be a large attendance from Winchester as Westford is not so easily accessible from most of the other towns in the county. Luncheon will be served by the Westford Union.

The State Executive Committee has arranged a "quiz" on the subject of constitutional amendments for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, presenting in a succinct form the arguments in favor of such an act. This is to be used by the Unions throughout the State at regular or special meetings.

Every week adds to the roll of "dry" gains. Last week, Lincoln, Nebraska, the home of Byran, went for no-license. As the State capital it has always catered to the tastes of the legislators but has experienced a change of heart.

Omaha is to entertain the National W. C. T. U. convention in October and the State is preparing to do handsomely, having recently passed the daylight law.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

After five weeks, the last performances of "The Runaway Girl" are in sight. Its final week begins at the Castle Square Theatre on Monday, and it will certainly finish its triumphantly successful run before full houses.

For the final week, beginning next Monday, the cast will be unchanged. Miss Mary Young will repeat her inimitable interpretation of Winifred Grey, and the others will include Theodore Friebus, Donale Meek, William Evarts, George Hassell, Bert Young, Winfred Young, Mabel Colcord, Gertrude Binley and Esther Evans.

"The Geisha" is now in rehearsal by the John Craig Stock Company, and it will follow "The Runaway Girl" at the Castle Square.

BASE BALL.

It was Buckley's hitting which defeated Winchester in the Everett-Winchester game played Monday afternoon at Glendale Park, and it was his disputed home run in the last of the eighth inning with two men on bases that broke up the game. Capt. Foley claimed that the hit should go for a two bagger. Buckley drove the ball over the right field fence. Umpire Hill ruled that since no ground rule had been made to that effect the hit be called a home-run.

Winchester finally forfeited the game, the umpire giving the game to Everett 9 to 0. Winchester's withdrawal from the game was greatly regretted by Coach Dame of Everett, who, though he wanted to continue the game, sustained the umpire's decision.

In the fifth with only one out and three men on bases, Winchester had hopes of scoring a few runs, but Captain Rosenthall relieved Brown and struck out the next two batters.

WINCHESTER 13 WEST ROXBURY 1

Winchester High won an easy game from Roxbury High Saturday, May 8th. Foley pitched a great game, striking out two men, and allowing but two hits. Flaherty is back at his old place as catcher and played a good game. Hurd is not able to play in the present games on account of an injury received in the Arlington game. Thompson took his place on second base.

In the first inning all three men fanned. In the next, two went down as strike-outs. The two hits were scattered and did no good. Foley also batted well, getting a two single and a two bagger.

ANCIENT ROME.

It Could Not Compare in Splendor With Some Modern Capitals.

Rome, even in the times of its greatest splendor, was poor in comparison with the modern world. Even in the second century after Christ, when it stood as metropolis at the head of an immense empire, Rome was smaller, less wealthy, less imposing than a great metropolis of Europe or of America. Some sumptuous public edifices, beautiful private houses—that is all the splendor of the metropolis of the empire.

Moreover, the palaces of the Caesars on the Palatine are a grandiose ruin that stirs the artist and makes the philosopher think, but if one sets himself to measure them, to conjecture from the remains the proportions of the entire edifices, he does not conjure up buildings that rival large modern construction. The palace of Tiberius, for example, rose above a street only two meters wide, less than seven feet, an alley like those where today in Italian cities live only the most miserable inhabitants. We have pictured to ourselves the imperial banquets of ancient Rome as functions of unheard of splendor; if Nero or Elagabalus could came to life and see the dining room of a great hotel in Paris or New York, resplendent with light, with crystal, with silver, he would admire it as far more beautiful than the halls in which he gave his imperial feasts. Think how poor were the ancients in artificial light! They had few wines; they knew neither tea nor coffee nor cocoa, neither tobacco nor the innumerable liqueurs of which we make use. In face of our habits they were always Spartan, even when they wasted, because they lacked the means to squander.—Guglielmo Ferrero in Putnam's.

THE BUSY BEES.

How the Insects Work When They Are Collecting Honey.

Upon the approach of a bee to any flower it flies around the calyx almost always before alighting upon the flower itself. This is a cursory examination, and with its antennae outstretched and quivering it is evidently scenting the honey contained within.

Should this prove a fruitful flower and of the flavor required the bee settles on the center of the stamen and, clutching it with its four front legs, steadies itself with its longer outstretched two hindermost ones and withdraws the nectar by its proboscis, the wings of the body assuming a vibratory motion the while.

The bee's proboscis is a most important instrument. It is composed of about forty cartilaginous rings, each of which is fringed with minute hairs, having also a small tuft of hair at its extremity, where it is somewhat serrated. Its movement is like the trunk of an elephant and is susceptible of extension and contraction, bending and twisting in all directions. Thus, by rolling it about, it searches out the calyx, pistil and stamen of every flower and deposits its nectar upon the tongue, whence it passes into the gullet at the base.

The gullet, or first stomach, is the honey bag. No digestion takes place here. In shape it is like an oil flask and when full contains about one grain. It is susceptible of contraction and is so arranged as to enable the insect to disgorge its contents into the cells of the hive.—Philadelphia North American.

Menu of an African Hunting Party.

In addition to the groceries and canned provisions carried in their outfits the hunters in East Africa depend for fresh provisions on their guns. Water buck, zebra and elephant are said to be tough eating and are mostly partaken of by the native porters, who keep elephant meat till it is quite high and gamy. Eland tastes like the best American beef; orynx, impala and all gazelles are edible and tender, but the delicacies of the East African Protectorate are the klipspringer and the dikdik gazelles. Hartbeest is hard except the prime cut along the backbone. An ordinary meal on safari consists of marrow soup, dikdik cutlets, roast guinea fowl, curried venison and cornflower pudding, with jam, washed down with tea or coffee.—London Letter.

His Success.

"John," said a Glasgow minister to his beadle one morning, "I would seem to have been more than usually successful in pleasing the congregation on Sabbath. To which of the three heads of my sermon would you attribute my success?"

"Weel, sir," replied the beadle, with something like a leer in his eye, "to tell ye the truth, congregations nooadays concern themsel's less about the heids than the tails o' sermons. The ane you preached on Sabbath was considerably shorter than the general run o' yer discourses, and therefore a body was weel pleased wi't."

Hopelessly Out of Style.

"When we take charge of the government," says the wise old suffragette, "we will make some changes in the naval bureau."

"I should hope so!" agrees the enthusiastic young suffragette. "Why, bureaus are hopelessly out of style! We will have a combination wardrobe and chiffonier."—Judge.

A VERMONT PLANT.

Burlington's Municipal Light Loses Money.

Faulty Construction Is Causing the Plant to Deteriorate Rapidly—Failure to Provide For Depreciation, Although Showing an Apparent Profit, Means Worse Trouble By and By.

By GLENN MARSTON.

Burlington is a city of 20,000 inhabitants, with a municipal electric light plant which competes with a private company. According to the report of the expert accountants who audited the books in 1908, the plant had up to that time lost $7,138.29, although the accounts of the plant have been manipulated to show a profit. This was done by omitting depreciation charges and sinking fund charges except for one year (1907).

The report of the audit of the lighting plant, which was conducted in connection with a general audit of all city departments, reads in part as follows:

"We find, after providing for depreciation, bond interest, etc., that the department has sustained a loss of $7,138.29. The actual net income from operating the department amounts in all to $14,900.65, but this amount is more than offset by interest charges, reserves for depreciation, street lighting charges for 1905 and the balance of the current account in 1906 charged off. The amounts which we have set up for depreciation, in our opinion, are by no means excessive, that for buildings being 2 per cent, machinery 5 per cent and tools, fixtures, etc., 10 per cent."

C. W. Taggart, manager of the plant, is of the opinion that the depreciation charge is a fair one, but it is understood that the light commissioners are the ones who do not recognize this item. It is again omitted from the 1908 report, which has just been issued, but the commissioners admit depreciation of the boiler equipment and recommend the installation of additional boilers, although the present installation is rated at a sufficient capacity to carry the existing load and has done so up to the present time.

The Burlington municipal plant shows several instances of extraordinary depreciation, one of the chief examples being the collapse of a brick coal storage shortly after the erection of the plant. This is attributed to poor construction, a not unusual excuse in municipal enterprises.

Poor construction is also responsible for the excessive vibration of the machinery due to the lack of suitable foundations. Fortunately the base of each unit is self contained, which reduces the damage to the building to a minimum, but this does not prevent each machine from racking itself to pieces.

The report for 1908 shows that the income from street lighting constitutes almost half of the gross earnings of the plant. For 1907 it was more than half. A peculiar feature of the situation in Burlington is the fact that the private company is responsible for the reduction of $15 in the price of street lights. When the present mayor took office the company offered to do the street lighting for $65 per year. Instead of accepting this offer, which would have bankrupted the municipal plant entirely, the price paid to the plant was reduced to $65. This gives the municipal ownership advocates an opportunity to point out the reductions in price effected "by the city's plant!"

The city has issued $97,000 of bonds against the plant, and there is an additional indebtedness, chargeable to construction, of $37,154.50. This loan draws 5 per cent interest, while the bonds draw 4 per cent for thirty years. Since the opening of the municipal plant only $2,033.98 has been transferred to a sinking fund to retire the bonds, while nothing has been done in regard to the floating debt. In order to handle the obligations of the plant when they become due there should be an appropriation of at least $5,000 a year, assuming the floating debt on a twenty year basis.

As the plant is now losing money it cannot reduce rates, while the private plant is constantly improving its plant so as to give better service and lower rates. While there is no criticism of Mr. Taggart, it is said that the voltage is very unsteady, resulting in high bills for the consumers. Records of the voltage show variations from 95 to 115 during the day.

Many people, including city officials, realize that there is grave danger in failing to provide for depreciation. One of the leading officials very tersely expressed the general feeling when he said:

"If we do not provide for depreciation we are going to wake up some day with a wornout plant and no money to put it into shape."

Advocates of municipal ownership can point out that in Burlington the private company has met the rate for commercial lighting being only a slight reduction over former rates and has forced the municipal plant to reduce the price of street lighting $15. They can point out a poorly constructed, rapidly deteriorating plant, which is operating at a loss and cannot make a favorable showing at rates which are returning a profit to the private company. They can point out important omissions in the financial reports which, if rectified, show a far from flattering condition. The situation in Burlington cannot be laid to poor management. The fault lies deeper—in the political element which cannot be eliminated from public ownership.

HIS HARDEST TASK.

The Bull the Matadore Found It Most Difficult to Kill.

There is no description of a bullfight in Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott's book, "Sun and Shadow in Spain," but there is a record of a meeting with a matadore in the studio of the court painter, Don Jose Villegas, and the ensuing conversation, a part of which revealed the bullfighter in an unexpectedly gentle light. It also makes plain the fundamental reason why Americans object to bullfights.

"How many bulls have you killed?" some one asked of the matadore.

"In twenty-five years I have killed 3,500 bulls."

"Were you ever afraid?"

"I have been afraid many, many times. On those occasions I put my trust in my legs and ran as fast as I could.

"The bull, however, is the noblest of animals and the bravest. He never makes a cowardly attack from behind. He is so frank. He is terrible, though. A man needs nerve to face him when he comes into the ring pawing the earth and bellowing."

"Will you tell us about the bull that was the hardest of all to kill?"

The matadore's face changed.

"He was a white bull," he said slowly, "and he didn't want to fight. When he first came in he put his muzzle in my hand. He followed me about like a little dog. I led him with the cloak wherever I wanted to go. Yes, that was the hardest bull of all to kill."

THE "GHOST FLUID."

A Test by Which May Be Discerned the Digital Effluvia.

There is an experiment, first made by Dr. J. Maxwell, advocate general at the court of appeals in Paris, a distinguished magistrate and physician, which may be repeated in any drawing room.

Place a screen covered with a dark colored cloth in front of a window so that the light falls full upon it. Between the window and the screen put the subject of your experiment. Let him hold his hands, palms toward the breast, finger tips touching, in such a position that they are projected against the dark background of the screen. Then bid him slowly separate his hands, keeping the fingers extended widely. Standing behind him you will observe a sort of bluish gray cloud which seems to unite one hand to the other. Eight people out of ten will see this, says Vance Thompson in Hampton's Magazine. In 300 tests made by Dr. Maxwell personally 250 folk of one sex and the other discerned the digital effluvia; about 5 per cent saw it tinged a decided blue, two saw it yellow in tone, and in one instance the spectator saw it of a reddish hue.

The experiment succeeds best in a warm room. Cold and damp work against it. The duration of durability is four or five seconds.

Rammed by a Shark.

The strangest shark story which ever came to the writer's ears was of a shark that charged a steamer. This was in Queen Charlotte's sound, and an account of the incident appeared in a Vancouver paper. The captain of the steamer, which was a small craft of only fifty tons or so, saw the shark on the surface on the port bow and could not resist the temptation of taking a shot at it with his rifle. He hit his mark, whereupon the monster, said to have been fully twenty feet in length, deliberately charged the steamer. The boat quivered from stem to stern, and the captain said afterward that it was like striking a rock. After this display of temper Master Shark had had enough of it and sank out of sight.—T. C. Bridges in Chambers' Journal.

Did He Mean to Be Funny?

The editor of a newspaper whose policy it is to print many letters from correspondents in neighboring towns recently received such a communication from his representative in one place as to which he was not quite sure. He could not decide whether the correspondent was unconsciously humorous or whether he was endeavoring to comply with the standing instructions of the paper to "always be on the lookout for any little touch of humor that may brighten up our columns." The item read as follows: "Mr. Harry Spinks, the well known butcher of this place, has been losing flesh rapidly of late."—Lippincott's.

An Amendment.

"I'm a terror, I be," announced the new arrival in Frozen Dog to one of the men behind the bar.

"Be ye?"

"Takes three men to handle me once I get started," he went on.

* * * * * * *

"Oh, well," he remarked as he arose painfully and dusted off his clothes, "of course if ye're shorthanded I suppose two kin do it on a pinch."—Everybody's.

Located.

"You say that the cook assaulted you?" inquired the judge.

"He did—kicked me, your honor."

"Where did he kick you?"

"In the pantry."—Judge.

Disconcerting.

It is disconcerting when you have paid out $500 for a violin and $40 for a bow to find that you can't make a squeak on the blamed thing without a ten cent piece of rosin!

In the course of life how many persons stop on their way and fall because, like Atalanta, they let the gold apples seduce them.—Honore de Balzac.

Don't Be Handicapped

Your neighbor over there, who lives in his own home, has the advantage over you who are paying rent.

He can save every month, other things being equal, the amount that goes into your landlord's pocket.

Perhaps he is still paying for his home; the result is the same. Every dollar he pays upon his home is a dollar saved.

Don't be handicapped in this way. You can as well be paying for a home. Thanks to the present plan of selling homes they are now within reach of any person with a little loose capital. See me and let me do the planning.

WAKEFIELD'S NEW Y. M. C. A. BUILDING.

Y. M. C. A.

For twenty-three years or more the little town of Dalton, Mass., has maintained a Young Men's Christian Association and for the past eighteen years a general secretary has been employed. Within a year an association building will be erected at a cost of $30,000—the gift of Senator Murray Crane his brother and nephew. The population of Dalton does not exceed 3000.

The neighboring town of Wakefield, with a population of 10 000, has recently opened a building costing $26,000. They have a gymnasium 51 by 35 feet, bowling alleys, two billiard tables and a splendid outfit for the social betterment of the young men.

Why is there not a clean and popular place of resort for the young men and boys of Winchester? Without losing sight of the work done by the churches of the town it must be conceded by every thinking person that there is a great need of a place open all the time with a genial and business-like Secretary in charge to minister to the needs of the hundreds of young men and boys who would come under his influence.

About eigeteen years ago when Winchester had a population of perhaps 7000 an association was formed and continued its work until a couple of years ago, and notwithstanding the megre equipment, many young men and boys availed themselves of the privileges offered.

Our population now is not far from 9000 and if an up-to-date building could be secured there is no question about it being appreciated and patronized. Here is a grand opportunity for some public spirited men and women to give liberally and make a home for the young men of Winchester possible.

WINCHESTER BOY WRITES OF LAKE SUNAPEE.

One day last summer my father and I left Winchester, Mass., about 7 in the morning for a trip to New Hampshire.

We got to Nashua about 8 o'clock in the morning, and then went over the bridge to Hudson to see my uncle, who is a mail carrier.

There I mailed a postcard home to my mother. We took a later train for Sunapee, arrving there about 12:45 in the afternoon.

Then we took a boat named the Weetamoo for Soo-nip-pi Park, a beautiful place on the shore. We arrived there at about 1:15 in the afternoon.

Then we walked over to my uncle's house, about three-quarters of a mile from the wharf. My uncle was away, but my cousin was out haying.

That night I went after the cows, and they ran away into another pasture where I could not get them, and got my feet wet.

My father, seeing my difficulty, came for me. After I got my feet dried we drove over for our baggage, which we had left at the wharf. I had lots of fun while there.

One night my father, my two cousins and myself were out rowing until 9 o'clock. Another day all of us were out rowing all the forenoon on Lake Sunapee.

I used to go haying with the men and ride upon the loads. A good many times I would take water out to the field for the men to drink.

About 6 or half-past I would collect the eggs, and sometimes I would get 20 and sometimes only get four.

I stayed there a week, and then came down to Nashua and went over to my uncle's house and stayed two days and then, of course, I had to come home.

DONALD P. COLE.

FAMILY HAD NARROW ESCAPE IN FIRE.

In last Sunday morning's fire on Elm street in the house of Mrs. Ann Rogers, the inmates had a very narrow escape from being burned to death, all being obliged to flee through the smoke-filled halls from the upper story in what scanty attire they could hastily snatch up. When discovered the fire had gained such headway that it looked as though the house was doomed to destruction, but the good work of the firemen saved much of it.

The house was occupied by Mrs. Ann Rogers, her son Frank E., her daughter Nora, and a niece, Helen. When her daughter arose shortly before six she smelt smoke and spoke of it to her mother, and the odor was so strong when she opened her closet door that she at once investigated. Finding nothing in the upper part of the house, she went down the stairs, opening the parlor door at the foot. As she did so the rush of smoke and flame almost overwhelmed her, her hair being badly scorched. She had the presence of mind to pull the door shut, and running up stairs aroused the others. Hastily catching up what clothes they could, they fled down the stairs, which by that time were filled with smoke. Mrs. Rogers, who is somewhat feeble, was assisted by her son, who then ran to Box 24 and pulled in the alarm. Neighbors were aroused by this time and an effort was made to save some of the furniture, but the heat was so intense that little could be done. After a fight of about an hour the department had the fire extinguished.

The fire started in the parlor, which was completely burned out, and the interior of the house was badly damaged by fire and water. How the fire started is a mystery, as no one was in the room after four o'clock of the previous afternoon. Practically all of the furniture, and all of the clothing of the family was destroyed. A small insurance was carried on both house and contents.

SUGGESTIONS TO BOARD OF HEALTH.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

After a little rain or at a time of high water from any cause, our little Aberjona river becomes impregnated with chemicals and sewage of all kinds which is evidently turned into the stream above Winchester center at such a time and under such conditions as to make the contamination of the water the least noticeable to the ordinary observer.

The filth is often turned in at night or early in the morning, Sunday morning being a favorite time if the water happens to be a little high. Early Monday morning of the present week great blotches of dirty foam and other indications of illegal sewage contamination came floating down the stream through scenes of parkway beauty adjoining the Winchester playground making the poor little river, naturally beautiful, look ashamed of itself in such surroundings as if it had innocently contracted some foul disease.

When we remember what a great interest the Winchester board of health has taken to prevent even the most restricted fishing in the Winchester water supply and how much more frightened our local board has been at the idea of a fish line contaminating our reservoirs than the state board has proved to be, it would seem to be natural for the local board to at once sound a trumpet and gird its loins preparatory to taking some serious action to prevent the unhealthy fouling of the water situated directly in the center of Winchester and extending from one end of the town to the other. It is a thousand times more important a matter than the question of allowing restricted fishing in our reservoirs according to the custom of years and by consent of the state board of health. To be sure the state of Massachusetts is much to blame in the matter of allowing open contamination of the Aberjona as it holds Mystic lake as a water supply but does nothing to keep the water coming into it as pure as possible as Boston did before the state took the lake and its tributaries into its own control under the Metropolitan water act; at the same time one quarter part of the great public effort which has been made in Winchester to stop regulated fishing by Winchester citizens in our reservoirs would do much to stop such wholesale contamination of our ponds and streams in the center of the town as is now going on without a word being said. Certainly Winchester ought not to consider for a moment the matter of diverting any more good clean water now running into the Aberjona into the town water supply until it does something to prevent the river becoming on open common sewer. Such action would certainly be selfish and short-sighted as the river needs all the pure water it can get to float away the sewage matter now being put into it.

ARTHUR E. WHITNEY.

ELECTRIC CONVENIENCES.

It looks as if the Edison company was trying to upset past conditions of living in the introduction of electric heating and cooking apparatus. The innovations are all excellent from the point of convenience, healthfulness and economy, and tend to make living more enjoyable. In this issue of the STAR on page five, can be seen an electric coffee percolator, to which the attention of our readers is called. Each week the company is showing in our columns the conveniences of living made possible through the use of the electric current. Readers of the STAR should not miss them.

BRADLEE—HUNT.

Six hundred persons witnessed the wedding of Mr. E. Abbott Bradlee, a well known young Boston broker of the firm of Bradlee & Cutler, and Miss Margaret Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin L. Hunt of Woodside road, at the First Congregational Church on Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. Augustine Newton, pastor of the church.

The auditorium of the edifice was decorated with palms and boughs of apple blossoms, they being massed about the altar. At the end of each pew was a large bunch of pink carnations. Mr. Carl J. Thornquist of West Somerville presided at the organ, playing Lohengrin's and Mendelssohn's wedding marches.

The bride presented a charming picture in a gown of cream white satin, trimmed with point applique lace, with point lace veil fastened with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley.

Mr. Harold Cutler of Roxbury, Mr. Bradlee's business partner, was the best man.

The maid of honor was Miss Isabel Hunt, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaids were Misses Helen and Marie Russell, Barbara Fernald and Louise Wulkop. Miss Helen Russell and Miss Wulkop were gowned in pale green chiffon and Miss Marie Russell and Miss Fernald wore pink chiffon. Miss Hunt, the maid of honor wore a deeper shade of pink. The gowns were all trimmed with satin of the same shade and silver filagree. The young ladies who were attired in green carried bouquets of pink roses, and those in pink carried white roses.

The ushers were Messrs. Pierce T. Bufford, Richard and Lambert Hunt, brothers of the bride, Matthew Bartlett of Boston, Jeffrey G. Whitney of Milton, Herbert I. Foster of Brookline, Reginald Bradlee of Medford and Dudley Hall, Jr., of Medford.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Woodside road, the couple being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Hunt and Mrs. Henry Bradlee, the groom's mother. The house was decorated in colors similar to those used at the church, festoons of asparagus fern and apple blossoms being draped about the rooms and bouquets of pink carnations filling the mantles and corner spaces. The reception closed at ten o'clock, the couple leaving on their wedding journey amid showers of confetti and good wishes. Upon their return they will reside in the new house No. 33 Everett avenue, recently purchased by Mr. Bradlee.

DEMENTED MAN SENT HOME BY POLICE.

Last Sunday morning a man, apparently somewhat demented, was found on the rear steps of one of the houses at the North Reservoir talking to one of the children of the household. Although apparently perfectly harmless his speech was vague and wandering, and so the police were notified.

From his story it appears that he had arrived in Boston late Saturday night from a town on the Maine coast. He attempted to take the elevated train at the North station, but as he had only a ten dollar bill for his fare, the gateman refused to allow him to pass. He then got some food at a restaurant and during the night wandered to Winchester.

On Sunday morning he went into the yard of a house on Highland avenue and removing his overcoat proceeded to make himself at home. When asked who he wished to see he made no coherent reply. After being told that he was not wanted there he went to the reservoir.

When questioned by the police he stated that he lived in Providence, and later in the day was put on board a train bound for that city.

WILLIAM A. CAMERON.

The funeral of William A. Cameron, brother of James W. Cameron of Salem street, and an old Winchester boy, was held at the First Congregational Church on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 Rev. S. Winchester Adriance officiated. The burial was in Wildwood cemetery.

Mr. Cameron was born in this town, his parents being William and Sarah Cameron. His place of residence at the time of his death was Winthrop. He lived in Winchester until twelve years of age when he entered the apothecary department of the Mass. Gen. Hospital. He remained at that place for twenty-five years, being head druggist upon his retirement. At the time of his death he was in the employ of the Boston office of the State Mutual Life Assurance Co He was 57 years of age. His death was caused by a lung disease and was very unexpected.

CARRIE F. WHEELER

Retiring President of The Fortnightly who was tendered a luncheon.

MRS. WHEELER WAS THE GUEST.

Last Tuesday the Executive Board of The Fortnightly for the year just completed entertained the retiring president, Mrs. Carrie F. Wheeler at a luncheon at Young's Hotel, Boston. A suite of rooms at this popular hotel was the scene of this festivity, which was carried out in the most charming way by Mrs. Charles T. Whitten, chairman of the Art committee. The table was tastefully decorated in pink, a center piece of carnations being joined by ribbons to a boutonniére of sweet peas for each guest, the place cards decorated with roses of the same shades.

Following a menu which needs no word of commendation when the character of the hotel is considered, came the toasts, presided over by Mrs. Stella R. Root, chairman of the Literature committee, who took that occasion to speak most appreciatively of the way in which Mrs. Whitten had planned and carried out this enjoyable affair. Mrs. Wheeler responded for "The Past," Mrs. Dunning for "The Future," Mrs. Wellington for "The Finances," Mrs. Wright for "The Social Side," [Miss Folts for "The Gentlemen." Mrs. Young contributed a poem which was so heartily enjoyed that she has consented to its publication in the STAR, that the members and friends of The Fortnightly may share in the jollity of the occasion:

THE GUARDS OF "FORT NIGHTLY"

The fort it lay in Silence.
The Nightly shades hung low.
While Wheeler, captain of the Guards
Paced wildly to and fro.

"Why are my aids so tardy,"
The gallant Captain swore.
By all the Gods if they do not come.
I shall tarry here no more.

But soon the tent was parted,
Sargent Folts came in with a bound,
Saluted our brave commander,
Then began to look around.

But seeing none of the comrades
That should have been there at five,
A note was dispatched to Wellington,
To bring them, dead or alive.

Soon Corporal B'laisdell entered
With platters well in hand,
Bearing the supper that should have been
Cooked by the faithful band.

Scouts headed by Private Nichols
Drew forth much wild applause
But so bent were they on their mission
That they never stopped to pause,

But plunged right into the forest
Nor did they stop to rest
Till they came upon Private Whitten
With head bent low on breast.

Weeping to find the vision flown,
For embroidered vests were a dream alone.

"Hasten to raise your golden head,
And join our hunting band," they said.

You are too "young" to spend your time
In vain regret, or to repine.

Onward they sped with feelings light,
Knowing that soon all would be "Wright,"

And the social spirit once again
In Fort Nightly sure to reign.

Then sent they on a Corporal guard
With brave Smith riding at the front.
While floating flag, and beat of drum,
Showed legislative measures won.

But halt they soon before a "Stone"
On which was hewn in letters free.
"As you do unto the little ones
So do ye also unto me."

Then up spoke Private Smalley
And said, "My comrades true,
I do not understand this fuss,
And I think no more do you,"

Let us turn our faces homeward
We need to fret no more
For our brave Private Tracy
Will lead us as before.

Then our faces turned we homeward
With Belcher on behind,
To make sure no one got away
Who ought our camp to find.

Then soon our bold cornetist,
One Edlefson by name,
Blew forth a blast so long and loud
It made Fort Nightly's fame.

But the "Root" of all their trouble,
Was a man who came to town
To give a course in literature
By the name of Alfred Brown.

But now peace is again restored;
Our Captain's rest is sure,
And as time limit has been reached
This part shall play no more.

But Fort Nightly must still go on,
It's campfire still must burn.
So it's Captain Dunning, by your leave,
Who's here to take a turn.

MILK HINTS TO CONSUMERS.

Do not leave uncovered milk in the ice chest with strong scented foods, as it absorbs odors readily. The refrigerator should be kept clean and sweet.

Do not mix milk that has been taken from the ice chest and left outside until warm with milk remaning in the ice chest: if you do, the keeping quality of the mixture will be injured.

Do not blame the milkman for sour milk unless you are sure that the trouble is not in your own home. He is sometimes to blame, but not always.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Last Friday the local Union celebrated its thirty-third anniversary. The meeting was held in the vestry of the First Congregational Church, which was decorated with wild cherry blossoms for the occasion. The president, Mrs. G. M. Hamilton presided. The devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Janette Hill Knox, State Corresponding Secretary assisted by Mrs. C. U. Dunning. Mrs. Helen G. Rice, State Superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion spoke of the importance and value of the work among the children, emphasizing the truth that early training is the great safeguard of morality of all kinds. A number of striking anecdotes enlivened the address which was closed with the reading of a poem illustrating the folly of the mothers' whose care for the bodies of their children outruns their zeal for their souls.

Mrs. A A. Rowe spoke very interestingly of the W. C. T. Unions in California and of the energy and enthusiasm of the western women, notably those of Omaha who are preparing to welcome the National Convention next October.

Miss Mary C. Ogilvie sang delightfully three songs—the final one being "Some Glad Day," written by Mrs. Katherine Lenten Stevenson, State President. The members of the Union joined in the chorus of this.

At the close of the meeting Francis Newton played a violin selection, Robert Hamilton being the accompanist for that as well as for the songs by Miss Ogilvie. Light refreshments were served by Mrs. Newth, Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Gage and a social hour was spent. Among the guests were Mrs. Augusta J. Brigham of Medford, County Secretary and three officers of the Medford Union. The attendance was unusually large, the Union having gained 20% in membership since the annual meeting.

The Winchester contribution to the Easter sale amounted to $18.00 of which $10 was in cash.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

Annual Meeting, Summary of Year's Work, Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of The Fortnightly held last week Monday was well attended. Miss Maude Folts, recording secretary, read a full and very interesting report of the year's events. Mrs. Dunning, first vice president, reported her share of the club work and Mrs. Eugenie E. Young, corresponding secretary, listed the 168 letters and 1271 other communications sent out, to the total of 1705. Mrs. Nichols, second Vice President, quoted Mrs. Decker: "A president should be seen and heard, a first vice president should be seen and not heard and a second vice president should be neither seen nor heard" and so simply reported perfect attendance at Board, Program committee and Club meetings, but as chairman of the Civics and Forestry committee she read an exhaustive report, full of good suggestions for work in the coming year and showing the possibilities of this committee. Mrs. Blaisdell, chairman of Household Economics, made some very amusing hits concerning the class work which failed to materialize and Mrs. Katherine Whitten of the Art committee told of her vain efforts to form a class for study and work.

Mrs. Grace Stone, chairman of the committee on Education, reviewed the work of the year for the Vacation Playroom, which has been managed by this committee and suggested plans for the improvement and extension of this important part of The Fortnightly's activity. Mrs. Root, chairman of the Literature Committee, told of the great success of the course of lectures by Mr. A. H Brown on the Modern Drama.

Mrs. Cole reported for the Reciprocity committee and Mrs. Edlefson told of the delightful music with which the Club has been entertained during the year.

Mrs. Smith, chairman of the Legislative and Press committees, spoke of the work of those important committees and Mrs. Florence Wright gave a resumè of the social affairs including the afternoon teas and "Gentlemen's Night."

Mrs. Louise Belcher reported the excellent work done by the Philanthropy committee which has raised much of the funds for carrying on the Vacation Playroom. Miss M. Alice Mason, chairman of the Dramatic committee, recalled the delightful entertainments presented by this committee and the substantial sum of money it has raised for philanthropic purposes.

Perhaps no committee work requires more careful thought and tact than that of the Courtesies committee, Mrs. Wegia H. H. Tracy chairman. To be able to congratulate on happy events, to send messages of good cheer to those who are ill and to express for the club loving sympathy for those whose hearts are filled with grief, requires tenderness of heart and infinite tact. Mrs. Tracy has successfully met all the demands made upon her and many a tender little note is hidden away to be brought out and read over and over again and treasured up for years to come with loving thought and best wishes for the writer.

Mrs. Lena R. Wellington, as chairman of the Finance committee, made many good suggestions upon which it is hoped the club will act.

Mrs. Wheeler in her address to the club thanked the members for their loyalty to her and expressed her pleasure in sewing as their president the past two years.

After the ballots were counted, Mrs. Ripley, chairman of tellers, announced the election of all candidates. The names of the officers elected were printed in last week's STAR.

Mrs. Root called for a rising vote of thanks for the retiring Treasurer Mrs. Ellen A. Smalley, whose report was so gratifying and who has served the club so faithfully for the last six years.

Mrs. Ripley asked the same act of appreciation for Mrs. Wheeler and it is needless to say this met a hearty response.

Mrs. Wheeler then presented Mrs. Anna M. Dunning as the new president and bespoke for her the same kind helpfulness and loyal support that she herself had received through her term as president of The Fortnightly. After a few gracious words from the new president the meeting adjourned. A delightful social hour, "really truly social," with refreshments, closed the program of the afternoon. At intervals during the afternoon, Miss Lucile McConville, the young 'cellist, accompanied by Miss Sophie Rhein charmed the audience by her fine rendering of many selections all of which were warmly applauded, especially "The Last Rose of Summer."

ANNUAL REPORT.

In reviewing the meetings of the year, one is impressed by the variety in the fifteen programs. Under the leadership of most entertaining speakers, the Club has travelled in jinrickshas through Japan; has shared with the townspeople of Winchester the thrilling experiences of mountaineering in Peru; has become somewhat familiar with French life; has begun to realize the vast extent and resources of "Our Great West;" has visited Panama and gloried, not only in the marvellous engineering of the Canal which is to bless all mankind, but also in the wonderful achievements of medical science which have practically destroyed the dangers menacing the health of those engaged in the work in that zone.

"The Use and Charm of Humor in Life and Literature," suggested in a lecture, was made most evident by the Dramatic committee which presented two clever plays at a regular meeting, and, for the benefit of the philanthropic work of the Club gave two most excellent performances of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The Club is greatly indebted to Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Root for the remarkably successful productions of this play.

Here, too, is recalled Marshall Darrach's masterly rendering of "Twelfth Night;" Dr. Grant's lecture on "Snakes in Paradise;" and the original play, "The Substitute or A Club Sandwich," based on the possibilities of improvement in town and club) written by Mrs. Tracy for Gentleman's Night, and which was enthusiastically received. The Lotus Male Quartette added much enjoyment to this occasion: the spread was unusually beautiful and delicious, and the whole evening, which ended with dancing, passed into history as a Gentleman's Night especially pleasing to gentlemen as well as to the club members.

An unusually fine Musical on Guest Day is another delightful memory.

On Reciprocity Day, the Club was favored with the presence of Miss Bacon, president of the State Federation, who told "How the women of Worcester built their Club House," and by the presidents of the Woman's Clubs of Lynn and Woburn, and of the Heptorean Club, Somerville, who gave the history of their scholarship funds.

A course of ten lectures by Alfred H. Brown, A. M. on "The Modern Drama" was given free to club members.

Under the management of the Philanthropy committee, Dr. Leon H. Vincent spoke on Franklin, Hawthorne and Lowell; the "Dorothea Dix Children" gave an Entertainment and Miss Grace Chamberlain pre-ented her interpretation of "The Servant in the House." The proceeds from these will help carry on the "Vacation Play-room."

It's a great satisfaction to have evidence that The Fortnightly is still proving of real value to the town as well as to its members. Through its co-operation an opportunity for voting on the subject of pensioning school teachers was given at the last election, and Winchester adopted a pefision system which, it is thought, will help secure and retain desirable teachers.

At its request, the school committee is investigating the expense of re-instating the subject of cooking in the curriculum of the schools of Winchester, and there seems to be a reasonable prospect that this will again be taught.

Through the Civics committee, an interest in local history has been wakened in the scholars of the High school, and, in the younger students, a keener enjoyment of trees has been developed. This committee has also been instrumental in presenting to Winchester, the important subject of "Equipped and Supervised Play-grounds."

During the summer, The Fortnightly will do much for the boys and girls in the "Vacation School."

In the midst of recalling the activities of the Club, there is a feeling of sadness as we miss friends who have passed on to "the beautiful country," Mrs. Georgie S. Weed, Mrs. Helen F. Otis, Miss Myra E. Pierce and Mrs. Bessie L. Lane.

Since 1907, the membership of this Club has increased from about two hundred and fifty to its limit of four hundred, with a waiting list of forty-five. These conditions have caused longer business sessions than usual, for it is no easy task to amend constitution and by-laws which were adequate to the needs of The Fortnightly twenty-eight years ago to suit the present conditions. But, like many a home duty we are struggling with it and, in time, shall enjoy the reward of our labors.

Delegates sent to the State Federation Meetings in Bridgewater and Medford gave very interesting reports. About fifty club members attended the Medford meeting and felt well repaid for their effort, showing the increased interest in Federation matters.

While enjoying the hospitality of other Clubs, your secretary has been impressed with the old truth "We learn to do by doing"—just as the boy learns to jump by jumping. In large clubs most of this "doing" is in committee or class work,— 'tis there, one "finds herself" and so becomes an active member in the general meetings.

So, while we are encouraged by the marked increase in attendance, interest, sociability and activity which seem to foretell a year of better work than the Club has yet known, let us remember the realization of such a happy future depends on the loyalty of each member and be ready to respond to opportunities to serve on committees—to assist in the "Vacation School"—or to help make some class a success.

Give to the Program committee at once all your suggestions that the Club may, if possible, have the advantage of them this year.

To quote from Miss Bacon, president of the State Federation, Let us bear in mind that "one member cannot make the Club, but one member can mar the Club." So, by suggestions, by charitable judgment and hearty co-operation, let us make the coming year one of great value.

MAUDE FOLTS.
Recording Secretary.

AN INCIDENT.

Rev. E. C. Whittemore, D. D.

The Sunday school at Waterville Me., had a somewhat unusual opening las Sunday. After the singing, responsive reading and prayer, the superintendent, Hon. Horace Purington held up several bank notes in his hand and said, "Here are four ten dollar bills and two five dollar bills, fifty dollars in all. Now I want to tell you how they came to me. Last night some one called me up on the telephone and said he wanted to see me. A little later a man well known in the city came to my office. I saw that he was greatly moved. I asked him his business and he said 'I once did you wrong and I have come to make it right.' 'A wrong,' I answered, 'I don't know of any wrong you ever did me: are you sure about it?' 'Yes,' he replied, 'I am sure. You left me in charge of one of your brick yards and I sold some brick and turned in only a part of what I got. I don't know just how much it was, I think about twenty-five dollars, but I want to pay enough to cover all the interest. It has been on my conscience and has stood between me and God and I want it out of the way!'"

Mr. Purington answered him, "Yes, I appreciate your motive; that is right; but if you do not know how much it was I don't want to take the money." "Yes, you must," he replied, "I can't have that between me and God any longer." "Well, tell me how this came about." The man answered: About two years ago Mrs. White, wife of President White, gave me a Bible. I began to read it. I found that I was wrong in many things. I found I couldn't keep on reading it and keep this money, so I have brought it back and I want you to forgive me, so that I can go out a free man." This, of course Mr. Purington did. He used this incident to enforce very effectively the value and power of the Scripture, and stated that he should immediately put the money where it would do most good in circulating the Bible.—[Zion's Herald.

The President Charles White referred to above is a former Winchester boy, and his mother and sisters are residing at the present time on Forest street.

HOW TO DISPLAY THE FLAG.

Each year a difference of opinion is shown among the residents and institutions in regard to displaying the flag on Memorial day, May 30th; some flags may be seen flying at full mast all day, and many others at half mast all day.

Believing that those citizens who are patriotic enough to own and display a flags, will gladly fly it as it should be done if their attention is brought to the matter, the following extract from the United States Army regulations may be considered of enough importance for publication.

Par. 498. When the flag is displayed at half staff it is lowered to that position from the top of the staff. It is afterwards hoisted to the top before it is finally lowered.

Par. 516. On Memorial day, May 30, at all army posts and stations, the national flag will be displayed at half staff from sunrise till mid-day and immediately before noon the band or field music will play a dirge, "Departed days" or some appropriate air, and the national salute of twenty-one guns will be fired at 12 m. at all posts and stations provided with artillery. At the conclusion of this memorial tribute at noon, the flag will be hoisted to the top of the staff, and will remain there until sunset. In this way fitting testimonial of respect for the heroic dead, and honor to their patriotic devotion will be appropriately rendered.

That portion of the paragraph relating to the band and the firing of a salute of course is not applicable to the private citizen, but it is possible and it seems desirable that all flags on school houses and other public and private buildings should be displayed in the "official" manner, namely, by being hoisted to full staff, and immediately lowered to half staff, so remaining till 12 noon, then raised to full staff and so left till taken in at night.

THOUSAND DESCENDANTS.

Will Gather at Hingham to Observe John Tower's Birthday.

Over 1000 of the descendants of John Tower are expected to be in Hingham May 29—31 at the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the birth of their ancestor, John Tower, who was born in England 1609 and settled in Hingham in 1636. Among the distinguished members of the family is Charlemagne Tower, formerly ambassador to Russia, who is expected to be present at the celebration. The first grant of land to John Tower was on what is now Water street, near the First Parish Church, the oldest church in New England.

A few years later John Tower bought a piece of land on Main street and erected a house. This house has been in the possession of his direct descendants ever since. A well dug by the original owner is still in use.

On the morning of May 29, there will be a meeting of the members of the family at the old homestead. In the afternoon a reception to the vistors will be given by the Wompatuck Club of Hingham and ex-Gov. John D. Long will deliver on address of welcome. In the afternoon they will visit the New North Church and the Old Ordinary House, built in 1650 and, designed for a garrison.

At 10.45 A. M., May 30, there will be a public service in the old meeting-house and in the evening exercises in the old homestead. May 31, will be devoted to a business meeting with the design of forming a permanent organization.

At a meeting held at the home of George W. Tower, 791 East Fourth street, South Boston, the following officers were elected: President, George W. Tower; vice-president, W. L. Tower, Dalton; treasurer, George R. Tower, Winchester; recording secretary, Francis Leon Tower, Medford; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Sarah Tower, South Boston.—[Boston Herald

The only Towers that we know of residing in this town is the family of Mr. George R. Tower of 111 Highland avenue.

Firm Stand of Gov. Draper.

Governor Draper is no side-stepper. He has convictions and he is not afraid to express them, either by word or deed, which is in striking contrast to the weak-spined legislators who forced upon him the settlement of the eight-hour bill. Of course his veto of this bill will cost him the labor vote of the State next fall, but believeing that he was right in vetoing this eight-hour measure, in the form in which it was presented to him, the loss of this vote will make no difference to him. As his friends know, he is a man who endeavors to do right, and act as Governor for all the people of the State. Gov. Draper said this week, "Massachusetts has in the past lost the control of many great business enterprises which were formerly owned and controlled in this Commonwealth."

But while he is Governor he does not propose that this shall continue, as has been the case with other Executives and Legislators who have sold their convictions for a mess of political pottage.

AN INTELLIGENT DOG.

Mr. F. H. Learned of Lebanon street has a very intelligent dog, so says a neighbor who lives father up the hill. The principal trait of this dog is its ability to distinguish things and then plainly show its disapproval in a manner clearly discernable. The dog may have other features likely to excite wonderment, but we have not heard of them. He looks just about the same as other canies, but appears to have a propensity for sleeping on the lawn in front of his master's residence, oblivious to all who pass up and down the street. This drowsiness lasts until about time for the return home of Mr. Learned. Then he takes on life and appears eager to do his stunt which is to take the evening paper from his master's hand and walk proudly up the steps and into the house.

As is said above, the neighbor who said the dog was a wonder, was passing the house the other afternoon having in his hand an evening paper. The dog ran to him and took the paper in his mouth and started toward the house. But there appeared to be something wrong about the paper. It might have been the smell of the ink, or it might have been a lack of the yellows. However, it was something, and the dog proceeded to investigate by dropping the paper on the lawn and opening it. As it was unfolded there was a spasm of disgust apparent on the dog's countenance, and he walked away leaving the paper on the lawn. The neighbor meeting Mr. Learned the next day related the incident to him, whereupon the latter asked him what the name of the paper was, and on being told, said that he never took that paper, and guessed that his dog found out the difference when he opened it. And the neighbor said that it looked just that way to him.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Our Assessors' valuations, 1904 and 1908, a period of five years:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Land | $4,000,000 | $4,092,000 | increase 2-3 per cent. |
| Buildings | $4,708,000 | $5,489,000 | increase 14-4 per cent. |
| Personal | $1,496,000 | $1,935,000 | increase 29-3 per cent. |

So that while personal and buildings have added between them 44 per cent in the past five years, land has only been advanced 2-3 per cent. How do our Assessors explain such a difference as that? The increase in buildings valuation is of course all in new buildings. The increase in the valuation of land is certainly surprisingly small, although selling prices tell a very different story. In looking through the Assessors' report I find many weird valuations, both personal and real, and it is surprising that citizens allow this to continue year after year. Of course those who benefit by it are not going to object, but why don't the other fellows wake up? It is of no consequence who owns property, and it is not a private or personal matter at all, but a most important public question. Perhaps if we raised the salary of this office to where it should be, we might get commensurate service. It is high time we made some move. Why not raise the pay for a starter.

And now it is proposed to have the cities and towns pay a part of the Mystic Avenue (Charlestown) new bridge which is to be rebuilt to carry the L cars to Middlesex Fells.

The Governor's veto of the eight hour bill extension was a good one. His courage and backbone is in striking contrast to the pusillanimous action of the Legislature in passing a bill it knew was wrong. Where does it's oath of office come in? The labor misleaders blundered badly, and it would serve them right to pass a bill giving to cities and towns that have accepted the eight hour law the right to revoke it.

It may be of some interest to be informed through the Selectmen's meeting notes that a contract has been awarded to a certain concern, but if it stated the name, price and conditions of the bids it would be not only much more satisfactory, but would give the citizens information they are entitled to receive. There is no information in stating "received a letter from John Smith; placed on file." By far the most interesting things that take place at the board meetings are not reported at all.

The Fells border road from Bear Hill past the North Reservoir dam is being built, and will add a needed missing link that has existed too long. It runs parallel with the dam, between it and the pumping station, and it should be continued around through the pine grove.

W. H. S. NOTES

The class of 1912 held a meeting in Room 11, and voted to give numerals to all who earned them.

Archie Walling was elected track captain of 1910.

Spencer Cutting is giving his services as coach to the freshman track team.

At a meeting of the class of 1910 last Monday Leon Tuck was elected captain of the class base ball team, and Archie Walling was elected captain of the track team.

The base ball team is now playing a great game, and a little support will help it out immensely. Arlington is the next team on the schedule and it is hoped that a large crowd of rooters will accompany the team to Arlington on Saturday afternoon.

You believe Winchester will grow, don't you? Then why not back up your judgment by buying a lot or home? Geo. Adams Woods.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Musical Comedy will still be the form of entertainment of the Castle Square, and if one may judge by the interest in the production of "The Geisha" it will be even more popular than ever before. "The Geisha" is a delightful musical comedy, its scenes are laid amid the picturesque surroundings of Japan, and it contains laughter for every moment of its performance.

The entire John Craig Stock Company will take part in the production, and there will be a large and notable attractive chorus.

HOLIDAY FISHING.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I have always voted against fishing in Winchester water supply ponds because if the water board does not want fishing there, it will do nothing to regulate it and prevent its becoming a nuisance even when the town votes for fishing. I like the present water board so well in a general way that I vote with them on fishing though I personally think they are a little stiff and unsympathetic at least toward restricted fishing. But as long as we elect the present board to serve us I think it best to do as they want us to do regarding fishing. I would suggest however, as an act of courtesy, that on holidays, the coming summer, the water board allow fishing to Winchester citizens and that policemen or watchmen be stationed at the reservoirs to see that no nuisance be committed. Why not spend a little of the town's money on this amusement as well as on other public recreations and games. It is well known that the water board does not object to fishing but to the nuisances it is claimed the fishermen make. Certainly one day's fishing would not hurt the reservoirs, especially if the fishermen were watched as the playground is watched when ball games are in progress. It seems to me a little bit of yielding to town fishermen would do no harm on the part of the water board, especially as the state board of health licenses the water board to allow fishing in our water supply. We certainly want to get along in town affairs with as little friction and as much courtesy as possible between town officers and citizens, therefore I propose some such arrangement as above outlined, especially as the reservoirs are full of fish that want catching.

Winchester High won its second game from Reading, at Reading, Wednesday, by the score of 5 to 1. Foley is still pitching good ball, fanning nine men and allowing but three hits. Walling is now in the game, playing as center field. He showed up well getting two hits, two put outs, and three stolen bases. Reading made their run in the first inning but succeeded in getting no more. Winchester made enough to win in the second inning, but added a few more by good hitting at critical points. Leduc and Walling excelled for Winchester, while Fairbanks showed up well for Reading.

No Suffering Too Great.

Not long since a young woman suffering with an incurable disease applied for admission to a hospital in a southern city.

"I know I must die," she said simply to the attendant physician, "but do something to keep me alive for a little while for my babies' sake. In a few years they will not need me so much."

Her one chance lay in a very painful operation, but her heart was so weak that the surgeon dared not administer an anaesthetic. Very gently he explained the situation—the operation would make but a year's difference at most; it seemed hardly worth while to suffer so much for so brief a respite; she would best go home and—wait. But the little woman shook her head.

With mother love shining in her eyes, she allowed herself to be strapped upon the operating table and there willingly underwent the torture of the knife that gave her a few months to devote to her precious babies.—Delineator.

Then He Subsided.

"I have made it a rule through life," he said at the table the other day to a man at his left, "never to meddle with another man's business."

"That's right—perfectly right," was the reply.

"But I see you have a new confidential clerk."

"Yes, sir, yes."

"He's a hard looking case. I have seen him intoxicated a dozen times, and I wouldn't trust him out of my sight with a sixpence. Took him out of charity, eh?"

"Well, not altogether, you know. He happens to be my eldest son."—London Mail.

A Gambler.

Tommy—Pop, how would you define a gambler? Tommy's Pop—Well, my son, a man's wife thinks he is a gambler if he loses, and his friends think he is a gambler if he wins.—Philadelphia Record.

WONDERLAND OPENS MAY 29TH.

Wonderland, the great amusement resort at Revere Beach, will be opened Saturday the 29th instant, and continue to entertain thousands of patrons during the hot summer afternoons and evenings until the first of September.

Wonderland will be more beautiful than ever. The programme of features and performances, has not yet been completed but it can be said that such big successes of last year, such as the scenic railway, the chutes, the velvet coaster, Love's Journey, hell gate, the ballroom, restaurant and the little railway will be continued. Among the new features will be a big vaudeville show with change of programme weekly. Henry's Minstrels with frequent changes; moving picture and illustrated song theatre; Brenck's Golden Graces; an illusion palace; a new merry-go-round with queer animals and a hall of fun mirrors. There will be concerts afternoon and evening by Teel's military band of Boston.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

A big all round vaudeville bill, made up almost entirely of star features has been prepared for the week of May 24th at Keith's Theatre, one of the most interesting features of it being Irene Franklin and Burt Green. Miss Franklin has come to the front as the leading exponent of eccentric songs and there is no cleverer artist in her particular line on the stage to-day.

Edwin Stevens, who was the star in Henry W. Savage's company playing "The Devil," will also be a big feature of this bill. Still another big feature will be Frank Morrell, the remarkable tenor. Still another is Charles and Fanny Van in their humorous sketch called "The Stage Carpenter and the Soubrette." In fact the entire bill will be made up of features of this kind.

GAIETY THEATRE.

Charles Waldron's Trocaderos, a famous organization of burlesque stars, comedians pretty chorus girls and high-class vaudeville people, will be at the Gaiety Theatre the week of the 24th instant. This is the company that had the honor of giving the dedicatory performance at the opening of the Gaiety a few months ago and it is now returning to Boston after a triumphal tour of the country. The olio of vaudeville acts is of superior quality. There is a noticeable increase every week in the attendance of the gentler sex at the daily matinees and evening performances at the handsome Gaiety.

MYSTIC VALLEY TENNIS.

In the first match of the Mystic Valley Association lawn tennis on the Winchester Country Club grounds, the Winchester Tennis Club defeated Dedham Tennis Club, last year's champions, Saturday, by the score of 3 to 2.

Singles—Nowell beat Daniels, 6-love, 6-1; Knight beat Dean, 6-1, 6-2; Johnson beat Olney, 6-0, 6-1.

Doubles—Hayes and Welch beat Belcher and Kent, 7-5, 6-2; Cummings and Nickeson beat Black and Ives, 6-1, 4-6, 7-5.

DEVOE TOOK 9½ GALLONS LESS

Judge I. D. Fairchild of Lufkin, Texas, had two houses painted, both same size. One was painted with a leading top-price paint, and took 25 gallons. The other was painted with Devoe, and took only 15½ gallons. The "leading paint" referred to is adulterated 15%, but is sold at the same price as Devoe.

The most economical paint always is the one that takes least gallons and wears longest, and that's Devoe.

THE GREEN MORAY.

A Savage and Voracious Eel Found In Bermudian Waters.

The experienced sea fisherman takes care to kill every large conger eel as soon as it is brought into the boat. The conger has not only extraordinary jaw power—it can triturate shellfish, shells and all—but is also so abominably active that the fisherman's opinion of it coincides with that held of the Indian by the western plainsman, "No good conger except dead conger."

Ugly and savage brute as the conger is, it is a lamb compared with its relative, the green moray of Bermudian waters. This great eel is of an unnaturally brilliant green and has an eye which is the very epitome of intense and malignant ferocity. It is voracious and savage beyond words. The negro boatmen have such a holy horror of it that they absolutely refuse to allow a moray into the boat. An acquaintance of the writer, a marine officer, fishing in a small boat off Bermuda, hooked one of these fish, but as soon as his boatman saw the hideous head above the water he whipped out his knife and made to cut the line. The officer shouted to him to stop, but had to threaten to throw the man overboard before he would put up his knife. When the great eel was pulled over the side the negro went absolutely ashy with fright. As for the moray, no sooner was it in the boat than it doubled upon itself, and its jaws met with a clash in its own side, cutting out a chunk of white flesh as neatly as a scoop would cut cheese. That was enough for the officer. He picked up a boathook and forked the uncanny creature overboard—Chambers' Journal.

A MANUFACTURED CLIMATE.

Methods of the Paris Market Gardeners In Forcing Nature.

The gardeners of Paris get their products on the market weeks before the regular season for them. This forcing of nature is described by Ernest Poole in Success Magazine.

The secret is simply this: The French maraichers have manufactured a climate to suit them. As one observer has said, "They have moved the climate of Monte Carlo up to the suburbs of Paris."

Some new prodigy of modern science, this? Not at all. Only enormous expense in money and in time. The gardens, whenever possible, are placed on land with a slope to the south and are well protected by walls on the north and east, walls built to reflect light as well as to give protection from the northeast winds.

The ground is practically covered with glass, not as in a greenhouse, but by glass frames in the open, "three light" frames of uniform size, 12 by 4½ feet, and also by glass bells. These, too, are of a uniform size, about the shape of a chapel bell, a little less than seventeen inches in diameter and from fourteen to fifteen inches high. The French call them cloches. You may often see over a thousand frames and over 10,000 glass bells in one two-acre plot in the suburbs of Paris.

A more recent innovation is the employment of hot water pipes run under the soil, making of the earth a veritable steam heated hotel, with this essential difference, that the hotel keeper here is desperately eager, not to keep his guests, but to persuade them to leave on the earliest possible day.

A Memorable Wreck.

The most memorable wreck in the history of the American surf was that of the bark Mexico, stranded on Hempstead beach, Long Island, early in the morning of Jan. 3, 1837. She carried 104 passengers and a crew of twelve men. Four passengers and four of the crew were saved by a surfboat from the beach under the command of Raynor Rock Smith. All others were frozen to death, though the wreck was so close to the shore that their cries and even some of their words were plainly heard on the beach. It was the story of this wreck, as published throughout the nation, that led to the establishment of the United States life saving service.—Scrap Book.

The Bayonet.

The bayonet was due to the fortunate inspiration of a Basque soldier, who, when he and his regiment, having expended their ammunition, were driven to bay on a mountain ridge near Bayonne, suggested that they should fix the long knives with which they were armed into the musket barrels and charge the enemy. This advice, which was followed with complete success, was the means of introducing the weapon to the notice of military Europe.

What He Lacked.

It is related of a South American general, who was extremely well pleased with himself, that once when about to sally forth to a grand dance he surveyed himself contentedly in the mirror and then soliloquized thus:

"Ah! Thou hast all—bravery, wealth, position, good looks. Ah, what dost thou lack?"

Whereupon his orderly, who, unknown to the general, was close at hand, remarked:

"Sense, general, sense!"

UNEARTHING UGLY FACTS.

New Revelations of the Dark Ways of Cleveland Municipal Traction.

Every push of the probe into the affairs of the Cleveland "Municipal" Railway company reveals new and unsuspected rottenness. At a recent hearing it was shown that the books had been manipulated in various ways.

It was also shown that many items listed as assets were not assets at all. Among these items, which aggregated many thousands of dollars, were strike expenses, office rent, salaries, advertising and uniforms, the last being put in at original cost, although nearly worn out.

It is also claimed that $107,000 was wrongfully taken from a special fund and applied to general expenses. The fund was turned over by the old Cleveland Railway company as a guarantee against damage and other claims existing prior to the turning over of its business to the "Municipal" and was to be used only with its approval. Of $128,000 paid out from this fund only $21,000 is stated to have been so approved, and the records of the "Municipal" show that most of the remainder was not spent for the purpose for which the fund was provided.

The nastiest feature of the whole business is in connection with the sale and redemption of stock. This was in the hands of a private stock exchange managed by one of the directors of the "Municipal," former State Senator Schmidt. The "Municipal" advertised over Mayor Johnson's signature that the stock could at any time be redeemed at par plus 6 per cent interest. The public was urged to buy this stock as the safest possible investment up to the very day of the referendum. Meanwhile the insiders were quietly unloading. The assistant to the president disposed of 265 shares in the three weeks preceding the referendum, and on the very day before it was held the wife of Senator Schmidt cashed in fifty shares. Yet when a poor washerwoman presented her two shares for redemption she was at first refused, though she was finally given the money for one share. The other she still holds, the market value being $78 instead of $102.25, which she was guaranteed.

A STARTLING CONFESSION.

Detroit Doesn't Know What Her Municipal Lights Really Cost, and It Will Take $5,000 to Find Out.

The council committee on public lighting met today to consider the estimates of the lighting commission for the ensuing year, and before it had gone very far it encountered an item of $5,000 for making an inventory of the property of the plant. Without much consideration it was cut out and other matters considered. Commissioner Lynn asked the committee to hear an argument on the allowance and called on Commissioner Hinchman to address the committee:

"The lighting commission," said Mr. Hinchman, "refrained this year from making an estimate of the cost of lighting per arc light because we felt that we did not know what it is costing, and we are unwilling to go on placing the cost at $32 or $33 a light, as we have done in the past, because the truth is we would not know whether we were telling the truth or not.

"For thirteen years we have gone on estimating the cost of lights on the basis of the original cost of the plant and extensions, allowing 3 per cent for depreciation. If a man had a hat for thirty-three years he would hardly figure its value by calculating that it depreciated at the rate of 3 per cent. We don't know whether we have anything or not, and we want an expert to take hold of the books and the plant and tell us what we have.

"This is not the result of any anti municipal ownership criticism, but we feel that as business men we ought to take an account of what property there is in the plant and what it is worth. A little while ago we figured that we had the finest pole system in the country, but we went out one day and discovered that it would cost us $20,000 to bring our poles and lines up to the point where we thought they were. Nobody really knows what our lights are costing us, and if we took account of all the items he might discover that instead of $32 a light the lights are really costing us $70 or $80."—Detroit News.

Beating the Gas Company.

"I got even with the gas company in good shape this month," remarked a Waltham citizen to a farmer friend this week. "My gas bill last month for cooking and light was $3.50, and I made up my mind I would not put up with that robbery any longer, so I bought a wood cook stove and burned kerosene mostly this month. My gas bill is only 50 cents this time," chuckled the aforesaid citizen as he handed his farmer friend a five dollar bill to pay for the wood he had used to cook during the month. "A man must use his brain nowadays to save money." As the farmer pocketed the five spot and drove off he was observed to be laughing softly to himself. Now, as each of these men appeared so pleased there must have been a joke on some one.—Wakefield (R. I.) Times.

Unprofitable State Telegraph.

According to a report presented to the Dominion parliament at Ottawa, Ont., Canada, the telegraph lines in Canada owned by the government are far from profitable. The annual statement shows receipts of $122,432.53, while the expenses amounted to $386,567.34.—Electrical World.

RENTER

How much of your time do you actually spend working for your landlord?

Twenty per cent of his income is said to be what the average man pays for rent.

The average man spends then, one-fifth of his time in working just to keep a roof over his head!

Do It Now

Twenty years ago you might have bought property in Winchester that is now worth double what—

But that is another story.

Almost any man can look back a few years and see where he might have made a big profit had he invested in real estate.

What we want to say is that there are just as good opportunities now as there were ten years ago, or twenty years ago.

Winchesters property is growing more valuable every year and the prospects now are unusually bright.

The road to indigent old age is paved with WASTED opportunities. Why not GRASP the opportunity that comes to you?

We sell both improved and unimproved property.

Come in today.

HAD FINE LUCK.

The fishing party of fourteen gentlemen which returned the first of the week from Marr's Camps, near Moosehead Lake, Me., had excellent luck. In all, the party caught 467 trout. The largest fish was caught by Mr. Fred J. Brown of Woburn and weighed 2 1-2 pounds. Several weighing 2 1-4, and a number weighing from 1 to 2 pounds were hooked. No record was kept of the largest individual number caught, but it is said that Dr. Benjamin Lewis held that honor. During the stay the first few days were rather poor weather for the fishing, and later the run of logs from Moosehead Lake bothered the party some. Dr. Daniel C. Dennett had the strange experience of being struck on the shoulder by a partridge in fright, and two salmon were caught, one by Dr. Lewis. The Winchester gentlemen in the party were Messrs. Chas. A. Lane, Charles E. Barrett, Daniel C. Dennett and Benjamin F. Lewis.

USING YOUR NEIGHBOR'S TELEPHONE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The following is an extract from the Michigan State Gazette. Will you kindly publish it in your paper for the benefit of all those that are afflicted with the same habits which I am sorry to say are many around the telephone districts in Winchester. B.

There are a great many pretty nice people who would not think of borrowing their neighbors' money or good clothes, but who think nothing of "running in" to use the telephone. The idea of intruding upon a man's castle and tracking up the wife's hall carpet with muddy feet never occurs to them as being inconsiderate, yet it is just as much an imposition as anything can be. One man who felt that he was being imposed upon drafted the following set of rules and had them neatly printed on a card which he posted conspicuously by the telephone. The rules were as follows:

1. Neighbors will kindly note the number of this telephone, and tell all their friends where it may be found.
2. This telephone is yours; we only pay the rent for it. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."
3. Please ring the door bell loudly upon calling and retiring as our maid needs exercise.
4. Our meal hours are 7 a.m. noon and 6 p.m. Kindly arrange to disturb us at meal times.
5. If this 'phone is not in a suitable position we will have it altered.
6. Please scribble on the walls, as they need decorating anyway.
7. Callers will kindly stand in line and not wipe their feet, as it might spoil the door mat.
8. Long distance calls are our specialty. Kindly do not offer to settle.
9. Loud and long conversations desired at all times, especially at midnight.
10. Make all the noise you can, in order to keep the baby awake. He has no right to sleep anyway.
11. Please do not destroy the telephone directory, as it and the Bible are the only books we own.
12. Do not hesitate to ring us up at midnight about anything. We stay awake for that purpose.
13. Do not consider us for a moment if you wish to use the 'phone. We will wait indefinitely.
14. The public telephone close by is only a bluff. Use this one always.
15. Our family is prohibted from using the 'phone except between 6 and 7 a. m. Sundays.
16. These rules apply to everyone except you.—Michigan State Gazette.

RESULT OF A DOG BITE.

Five weeks ago Ben Robinovitz of Middlesex street was very badly bitten on his left arm by a dog that had followed his father home from Medford. The muscles of the arm were lacerated from the teeth of the infuriated beast as was his forearm. The boy was taken to a doctor and the wounds treated and he appeared to be getting along nicely, the lacerated flesh having healed. The dog was killed and its head was sent away for examination, but no sign of rabbies was discovered. During the past two weeks paralysis of the arm has developed and despite constant treatment at a Boston hospital there appears to be no improvement, and now it has been decided to perform an operation on his arm. Master Ben, who is only five years old, will be taken to the hospital Monday in the hope that the operation will result in a cure. The wounds in his arm were two and one-half inches deep.

The funeral services will be held at Milton on Sunday at 1 p. m. The burial will be in Wildwood Cemetery.

DAVID S. PERKINS.

David Smith Perkins, aged 88 years, died at his home on Irving street, Wednesday of appoplexy. He was born at Mount Vernon, N. H., and had resided in town about a year, moving here from Nashua, N. H. He is survived by his wife.

Funeral services will be held from the residence this afternoon at one o'clock, conducted by Rev. C. A. S. Dwight of the Second Congregational Church. The burial is to be in Wildwood Cemetery.

A MENACE TO HEALTH.

State Sewer Board Opens Pipe into Wedge Pond.

Stench Causes Local Board of Health to Act—But Preparations Made to Continue.

For the past few years many citizens have studied the problem of improving the condition of the ponds and of the Aberjona river, and at the present time there is a special committee considering this important matter. The ponds and river are in bad condition as all who have studied them will admit. The Russell brook that extends from Woburn and has an outlet in Wedge pond was considered a menace for many years to the health of the residents of Cutter's village, because of the sewerage from Woburn tanneries that entered it. This nuisance was only abated by a special act of the Legislature turning this brook over to the State Board of Health which has stopped it. Wedge pond is, however, at the present time in a most unsanitary condition from the great amount of filth that has entered the pond for years by means of the brook, and the local Board of Health has during the past year been considering plans for the improvement of the shores of the pond where this filth lies to the depth of many inches The Board arrived at the conclusion that the best way was to cover this filth with a generous coating of gravel, and to do this would cost the town a large sum of money. The Board has, or will, recommend to the town that this be done. So far so good, for the Russell brook nuisance. But what will the citizens think upon being told that a nuisance ten times greater had been foisted on the town by the Metropolitan Sewer Board, through its chief engineer.

This State official without giving the slightest inkling to anybody deliberately turned the sewage from the Mystic Valley sewer into Black Ball pond. At the rear of Symmes' hay and grain store on upper Main street, where the sewer pipe passes close to the pond, an opening was made and the sewage allowed to flow freely into the pond. The stench in the neighborhood became unbearable and complaint was immediately made to the local Board of Health. The Secretary, Dr. Allen, after viewing conditions immediately took the matter up with the State Sewer Board when the flow of sewage was cut off, at least temporarily.

Since then the State Board has caused to be built two catchbasins from which project two twelve-inch pipes leading to the pond. The STAR reporter was informed Monday afternoon by one of the workmen that these pipes were put in to take care of the excess sewerage that the present line could not provide for. From these pipes to the water have been built two cement trenches that the sewerage may easily pass into the pond, so that it will be seen that the State Board has not abandoned the idea of converting this pond and the river into a hugh drain for sewerage. Conditions on the shores of the pond at the rear of Mr. Symmes store are filthy, the mud slimy, the water black and the smell very bad.

It is, to say the least, a shameful disregard of the health of Winchester when a State Board, of all other agencies, should resort to such a method for taking care of sewerage. A business concern would be severely punished for creating such a nuisance, and yet the State proposes to continue to allow the overflow of the trunk line into the pond. This filth passes directly through the the centre of the town, along the Mystic Valley Parkway and thence into Mystic Lake.

As Mr. Whitney said in the STAR last week, the floating filth and scum that passed down the river clearly indicated that the stuff came from a sewer. The stench in the wheel pit at his mill from the water is simply unbearable, he says.

Now what does the local Board of Health and the citizens propose to do about it. That this action of the State Sewerage Commission is one of the most flagrant ever perpetrated against the health and comfort of the inhabitants of a town is clearly apparent.

The stench coming from the pond has been so offensive that people living on Highland avenue have been obliged at times to close their windows at night, although they were ignorant as to where the stench came from. It is said that during the night time is when the sewage is allowed to flow into the the pond.

CAROLINE HUDSON BOWERS.

On Sunday, May 23d, Mrs. Bowers entered upon an eternal Sabbath. Although a delicate woman, her wonderful courage, firm faith, and sweet serenity of disposition, carried her through more than fourscore years of devoted living for God and humanity.

She was born in Medford, Mass., Dec. 8, 1828, her parents being Thomas and Phebe Waite Hudson Pratt. After finishing her studies, she taught a private school in her native town for a number of years. Later, she married Mr. Luke Kimball Bowers, a native of Hancock, N.H., who as pupil and teacher was in Phillips Academy at Andover for ten years. In Andover both bodies await the resurrection. Inscribed upon the wedding ring was "Christ our life." True to the motto, both husband and wife were always active in work for the Master. Mr. Bowers served as deacon in various churches with which they were connected; and in Bible classes, missionary work, and other departments of church activity, both gave generously of time and money. They drew their motive for service from personal communion with Jesus, and loyalty to Him made no sacrifice too great.

From girlhood, Mrs. Bowers had been gifted with the pen, and many hymns of cheer and comfort found their way to sorrowing hearts. She comforted others with the consolations wherewith she herself had been comforted of God. Sunday school anniversaries and special occasions of different kinds, were often enriched by her tuneful contributions. Since her husband's death in 1894, she has gone on in cheerful performance of every known duty. "An angel in the household," her presence has been an inspiration and benediction, to all with whom she has come in contact. "No one who has heard her pleasant voice, seen her sweet smile, and know her loving ways, will ever lose the memory of her delightful Christian character." Her translation means added bliss to one who, even on earth, dwelt in the joy of her Lord.

WINCHESTER HIGH SCHOOL CHORUS.

The High School Chorus under the direction of Mr. Albert Edmund Brown, Supervisor of Music, assisted by Miss Mary C. Ogilvie, soprano soloist, and accompanied by a full orchestra gave its first annual concert on Friday evening, May 21, in the Town Hall before an appreciative audience. No attempt had been made to press the sale of tickets because the program was intended simply to show to those interested in the possibilities of music teaching in the High School, the character of the regular work done by the chorus in a single weekly period, the program being a balanced selection from the varied assortment used during this school year.

The first part was opened with "The Beautiful Blue Danube waltzes" by Johann Strauss. These consist of five waltz songs written originally for instrumental use and specially adapted for chorus work. The chorus won the favor of the audience in this initial number by its smooth and flowing tone quality and its precision of attack and release.

In direct contrast with the foregoing and as if to empha ize the breadth of their training a Welsh Folk Song of a quiet nature "All through the night" was sung. In this the emotional context was sympathetically interpreted.

In "Build thee more stately mansions" a fragment from Holmes' Chambered Nautilus set to music by Farwell, the contrapuntal element was expressed by the different parts of the chorus while in a stately number from Beethoven "The Heavens Resound" the strong maestoso movement was rendered with commendable solidity and volume of tone.

Miss Ogilvie's solos in the first part, Chadwick's "Sweet Wind that blows" and Chaminade's "Villinalle" were greatly enjoyed, the French song being particularly well phrased and interpreted. For an encore "Coming through the Rye" was sung to the great pleasure of the audience.

The second and more pretentious part of the program was composed of Noyes' beautiful setting of Longfellow's "Village Blacksmith" and Gounod's Gallia, a dissonant work worthy of much more mature voices. In the former the boys' voices were effectively heard in the strain "week in, week out, from morn till night, you can hear his bellows roar, etc." and as in the first number of the program the rendition was characterized by precision of attack and release. In both numbers Miss Ogilvie sang the solo parts most sympathetically.

The Gallio was the climax of the program and was enthusiastically applauded, but Mr. Brown wisely decided that the chorus had done enough and no encore was given.

As a whole the work had a verve and finish not frequently heard in High school work. The tenor part was weaker, as might be expected, than the others, although there were several excellent voices but the bass was full and strong. Another year it may be expected that the young men will be more numerous and will appear to even better advantage in both tenor and bass.

At the conclusion of the program Mr. Brown was deservedly complimented by many in the audience. The School Committee have secured his services for another year and those who believe in music as an important part of education will look for another delightful evening in May 1910.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

Next Sunday, Whitsunday, there will be a service of the Holy Communion at 8 a. m.

Parents having children to be baptized are asked to bring them Whitsunday in the afternoon. The service will be at 4.15.

In accordance with our usual custom in Winchester, the Union Service in connection with Memorial Day will be held next Sunday evening at the Unitarian Church. The service will be at 7 o'clock. Mr. Lawrance will preach.

Commencement at the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, comes next week. Sermon Tuesday afternoon, June 1st. Alumni Day at 5 o'clock at St. John's will be by the Rev. John H. Mellish, of Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, and the sermon Wednesday morning, June 2nd, at 10.30 a. m. at the time of the conferring of degrees and of the ordination of deacons will be by Bishop Lawrence.

LADIES OF HOME TO ATTEND LECTURE.

The ladies at the Home for Aged People have been invited to attend the next meeting (June 3) of the Ladies' Western Missionary Society. Mrs. J. K. Murdock will give an account of her trip through the English Lake Region and the homes of its famous poets in Scotland "Through the Trossachs." A musical program has been arranged. It is hoped there will be a full attendance of members and their friends. Rev. D. A. Newton is expected to be present.

Y. M. C. A.

There seems to be a growing sentiment in favor of the resumption of work in Winchester under Y. M. C. A. auspices. Many who are interested think it would be unwise to consider a location for a building while the grade crossing question is undecided, but meanwhile would it not be well to take up the work for a time suspended? A room or two might be opened in the fall, and evening service provided—where safe social fellowship, books and music would gather some of those whose homes do not afford these advantages. Testimony given at the mothers' meeting last week seems to prove the need and value of such places of resort in every town. The women of the Auxiliary have held together with fine courage and hopeful belief that further opportunity for work would come. It is suggested that the Y. M. C. A. officers call a conference (including the Auxiliary officers) to talk over plans, ways and means. The encouraging sum of money now at interest seems to involve the responsibility for its use in work of some kind for young men.

Who will help in so excellent a cause?

LEAVES A LASTING MEMORY.

The passing away last Sunday, soon after the close of her eightieth year, of Mrs. Caroline H. Bowers, will yet leave a grateful and lasting memory of her remarkable personality and gifts. Few such characters have been known to any of us. Exceptional in intellect, accomplished in letters and study, worshipful and modest, when shall we see another lady so charming, poised and gracious? Her slight figure, fine face, consecrated life and helpful ways, are not to be forgotten.

Leduc played well for Winchester.

BASE BALL.

WINCHESTER H. S. VS ARLINGTON H. S.

With the score at 6 to 5 in favor of Arlington H. S. on Monday the game was stopped owing to a disagreement over the umpire's decision. In the first of the ninth inning, with men on second and third bases, the score 6-3 against Winchester, Thompson placed the ball over the left fielder's head, good for a home run but on account of ground rules only went for a two bagger. Walling, thinking there was a man on first, got mixed up between third and home. But after running back and forth, succeeded in getting home. Umpire Smith called him safe at the plate. Coach Hendricks of Arlington said that Walling ran out of the base line so the umpire changed his decision and said he was out. Capt. Foley immediately refused to allow this decision, which was altered by Coach Hendricks, who, by the way had nothing whatever to do with the Umpire's decision. Coach Hendricks, seeing that Capt. Foley would not play any longer, drew his team from the field. He claimed that Walling ran out of the base line, but when asked to show where, he said they could not find the place. If they could not find the place the umpire had nothing upon which to base a decision. Thompson, Leduc and Flaherty showed up well for Winchester, while Dineen showed up well for Arlington.

AN ARRIVAL.

STEVENS—In Reading, on Monday, the 17th, a daughter (Gloria) to Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Stevens.

There came to port last Monday night
The queerest little craft,
Without an inch of rigging on,
I looked, and looked, and laughed.

It seemed so curious that she Should cross the unknown water
And moor herself within my room—
My daughter, O my daughter!

Yet, by these presents, witness all,
She's welcome into times,
And comes consigned to Hope and Love
And common meter rhymes.

She has no manifest but this:
No flag floats o'er the water:
She's rather new for British Lloyds—
My daughter, O my daughter!

BOSTON'S CITY CHARTER.

The Comittee on Metropolitan Affairs has at last reported to the Legislature a bill for the revision of the Boston City charter based upon the recomendations of the Boston Finance Comission. The members of the Committee are to be congratulated upon the results of their labors. They have been subjected to all sorts of political pressure, but they have shown commendable public spirit and have kept in mind the interests of the citizens of Boston. They deserve praise for the satisfactory results which are embodied in the bill and are entitled to the support of their fellow members of the Legislature.

The bill as reported is divided into two parts. The first part embodies the administrative features of the recommendations of the Finance Commission. It provides for a permanent finance commission, the administration of departments by trained experts approved by the Civil Service Commission, the initiative of the budget by the mayor, more careful safe-guarding of long time contracts entered into by the city, increase in the power of the auditor, carefully drawn provisions preventing the interference of the city council in matters of city contracts and city labor, the regular publication of a "City Record" and various other excellent details.

The second or political part of the bill is referred to the people in alternative form. The first plan provides for a two year term for mayor, a city council of thirty-six, (twenty-seven elected by wards and nine at large), with minority representation, and a return to the old convention system. The second plan calls for a four year term for the mayor subject to recall after two years, a city council of nine members elected at large for three year terms, and nominations by petition with the abolition of party designations on the ballot. Whichever plan is favored by the majority of those who vote upon these alternative propositions at the state election will become law.

As can at once be seen, the latter features of the bill are a compromise due to certain political considerations which could not be wholly withstood. The Committee, however, has carefully preserved in its draft all the essential features of the charter amendments recommended by the Boston Finance Commission. Some of these it recommends that the Legislature enact at once and the others it gives the people an opportunity to obtain by declaring at the state election for plan two.

The revelations of the recent Finance Commission have made clearly evident the necessity for the careful and unceasing watchfulness which a permanent finance commission will make possible. The proposal to have the Civil Service Commission certify as to the character, training and ability of proposed heads of departments meets the necessity for a higher grade of men in these places which has been so painfully evident in recent years. The other administrative features of the bill are equally commendable.

As for the so-called political features of the bill, the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs deserves praise for insisting that the citizens of this city should have an opportunity to adopt all the recommendations of the Boston Finance Commission. It is now for those who have been calling for the improved municipal machinery recommended by the Finance Commission to support this bill in its entirety and then to put before the citizens the importance of adopting plan two at the state election.

It is of the utmost importance that the bill should not be hacked to pieces by the various political forces which will unboubtedly try to secure its amendment in the Legislature and thus defeat the principles of the bill. Any amendment is bound to throw open a way for changes which will render the bill less satisfactory. The people of this city and of the State of Massachusetts have grown tired of the pulling and hauling upon this question which has been going on within the past few months and will not tolerate any further change in the draft as submitted. As this Committee gathers the temper of the people of Boston at the meetings which it has arranged and held in all parts of that city and from a large number of citizens with whom its members are in daily touch, it feels confident that the voters will give their heartiest support to the bill just as it is drafted and will recognize that any attempt to amend is bound to result in perpetuating the evils of the present system.

Every right minded citizen of Boston and every man in Massachusetts who desires to see Boston and State make commercial, industrial and civic progress should actively and persistently exert his influence to secure the enactment of the bill without amendment of any kind.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

For the fourth time in little more than seven months the local union has been called upon to lose one of its members. This time Mrs. Caro E. Bowers, whose gracious presence has for some time been missed from the meetings owing to her failing health, but whose sympathy and interest did not flag with her waning strength. She has been a quiet but faithful member, whose gentle spirit had a strong influence upon those who were privileged to know her and the members of the union mourn their loss deeply. The next meeting will be devoted to the memory of Mrs. Bowers and Mrs. Barbank both of whom had been long identified with the work and have passed away within a few weeks.

The Middlesex County W. C. T. U. held its spring convention in Westford, May 20, and was attended by four members of the Winchester union, the President, Mrs. G. M. Hamilton, Mrs. Mary Winn Mrs. Gage and Mrs. A. A. Rowe. The last named was especially honored by being chosen to present a life membership in the State Union to Mrs. Boynton of Pepperell, who has served the county union as treasurer for a quarter of a century. A memorial membership was also given for Mrs. Abby Saxe who had served as secretary for nearly as long up to the time of her recent death.

The trip to Westford from Lowell was made by trolley and the many delegates from neighboring towns made a very jolly party, the Winchester Union having one of the largest delegations present. The program was unusually interesting and inspiring.

The proposition to do away with the free luncheon at conventions failed to carry but will doubtless be brought up again.

MRS. MARY LANGFORD DEAD

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Langford, familarly known to a large number of Winchester people, died suddenly at her home on Main street last Friday of heart failure. For many years she had conducted a small store and electric car waiting room just north of the railroad crossing. The store was originally opened by her son, William, and upon his death she continued the business, occupying two rooms at the rear for her living quarters.

She was about 66 years old and was born in Ireland. No known relatives survive her. She had lived in this town for about 40 years, and at one time the family were quite prominent. Mr. Langford died about 20 years ago, and the three sons—William, Richard and John—passed away some years ago.

Funeral services were held from St. Mary's Church on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Fr. Daniel J. Keliher, who also celebrated requiem high mass at the church on Monday morning.

The bearers at the funeral were Timothy Laughlin, Jeremiah Laughlin, David Nagle, Jeremiah Connor, John Callahan and Robert Sullivan. The burial was at East Woburn.

READY FOR THE SEASON.

Wonderland enters upon its fourth season on Saturday the 29th instant. The doors will be thrown open at one o'clock to the inspiring strains of patriotic music by Teel's Military Band of Boston and the throwing to the breeze of thousands of flags and streamers. The management promises a "1915" year at this most popular recreation park down by the sea at Revere Beach with twenty cents worth of entertainment and enjoyment for every ten cents spent.

The management remains about the same as for the past three seasons which is a guarantee of the character of everything connected with Wonderland and insures a continuance of the patronage of the thousands of New Englanders who have found this great pleasure resort a delightful place to visit during the hot afternoons and evenings of summer.

The children will want flags for Decoration Day. Buy them at Wilson's.

PARK THEATRE.

"The Traveling Salesman," is now in the second month of its Boston engagement at the Park Theatre, where capacity business has been the rule at every performance. The success of this play, the large audiences that have already seen it and the equally large audiences still clamoring for tickets are facts of common knowledge and its reception thus far has been of a kind to warrant the expectation that many weeks will pass before a successor is needed. The great charm of the play is in its crisp dialogue, the fetching slang and the sharply drawn characters. One may give hearty laughter without humiliation and what is perhaps more remarkable, the spectator can carry away pleasant memories of what they have seen and heard. There will be the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees during the entire engagement.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Monday will be observed as Memorial Day, and for the 42d time the beautiful custom of decorating the graves of those who having served their country in the days when the Union was in deadly peril, have passed on to eternal camping grounds. It is a sacred duty and a holy privilege to thus honor the memory of the brave. The ranks of the G. A. R. are being broken by death and as years roll by the boys of 61-2-3-4-5 are dropping from the roll-call and are slowly joining the Grand Army of the immortals. To those remaining falls the privilege of decorating and adorning the resting places of those brave fellows. Memorial day should be observed and held as sacred as the Sabbath. The greater number of our population use the day as one of recreation and pleasure. It should be used to honor the dead, for to many it is an occasion for sad recollections and sorrowful memories.

The exercises here will be similar to those of past Memorial Days. Indeed there is opportunity for but little change. The order of exercises as arranged by Commander Wilson will be as follows:

HEADQUARTERS A. D. WELD POST, 118, G. A. R.
DEPARTMENT OF MASSACHUSETTS.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 1. } WINCHESTER, May 12, 1909.

1. It has very appropriately been said by a former Commander-in-Chief of our organization that "The Grand Army of the Republic represents the patriotism and love of country that made it possible to organize the splendid army and navy, through whose devotion and sacrifice the Union was saved from disruption. It has fostered and intensified reverence for the heroic dead of the nation and has tenderly cared for the widow and orphan of the fallen. It has kept up the elbow touch and heart beat of comradeship among the survivors of the struggle for the Union and in its annual gatherings has stimulated the patriotism of the people. The work, the purpose and the history of the Grand Army of the Republic attest the high character and devotion of the men who were willing to die that the Nation might live."

And now comrades another Memorial Day summons us to the sacred duty of commemorating the patriotism and valor of our heroic dead. We are reduced in numbers, but let us show by answering this call to the ranks that the fires of patriotism and love of country are burning as brightly in our hearts, as when in our young manhood we cheerfully volunteered in our beloved country's service to stem the fierce tide of rebellion that threatened to overwhelm the land. Come one, come all. Those who cannot march will be provided with seats in a comfortable carriage.

2. In accordance with the General Orders from Department and National Headquarters, and in obedience to Rules and Regulations, Monday, May 31st, will be observed by the comrades of this Post as Memorial Day.

3. Members of other Posts, and all soldiers and sailors who served in the war of the rebellion are invited to turn out with this Post and join with us in the observance of the day.

4. Comrades will report promptly at Headquarters, G. A. R. Hall, at 2.15 P. M., in the regulation uniform—dark clothes, Kossuth hats with gilt cords, white belts and gloves.

5. All citizens are requested to put aside other duties and pleasures and co-operate with the Post in the proper observance of the day.

6. The Post will form on Pleasant Street at 2.30 P. M., at G. A. R. Hall, and under escort of the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx, Capt. Thomas McCarthy, will receive the officials at the Town Hall.

7. Order of procession will be through Washington, Main, Church, Fletcher and Wildwood Streets to the Cemetery. Music by Winchester Brass Band.

8. Comrades will assemble at 7.15 o'clock P.M. at the Headquarters G. A. R. Hall, and at 7.30 march to the Town Hall, to attend services there.

9. Rev. Edwin Bradford Robinson of Holyoke will deliver the address.

10. Senior Vice Commander, Moses P. Richardson, and Comrade Philip Maher are hereby detailed to decorate the graves of our comrades at East Woburn.

11. The attendance upon Divine Worship the Sunday next preceding Memorial Day has been so long a custom by our Post that it has become a part of the services of Memorial Day. Each comrade is particularly enjoined to turn out with the Post, Sunday, 30th inst., at 7.00 p. m. in uniform at the Post Hall.

By order of
JOHN T. WILSON,
Commander.

S. H. BROOKINGS,
Acting Adjutant.

On Sunday evening at 6.45 o'clock the Post will assemble at headquarters and march to the Unitarian Church where Rev. William I. Lawrance will deliver a sermon.

Monday evening the exercises will take place at the Town Hall at 7.45 o'clock. Music will be rendered by children from the public schools under the direction of Mr. Albert Edmund Brown, Supervisor of Music in the public schools.

SCHOLARS TO WEAR CAPS AND GOWNS.

Pulpit and press have condemned the elaborate dress indulged in at High School graduating exercises as a hindrance to the welfare of the pupils, and an uncalled for expense to parents, many of whom are unable to afford the outlay which has come to equal that of a wedding outfit. School superintendents and teachers have given it as their opinion that the expense of graduation dresses deprived more scholars of diplomas than a lack of ability to keep up in their studies, as many among those who cannot afford the luxuries indulged in by their more fortunate schoolmates at graduation, drop out before the close of the term. It is reported that in Leominster the school board has decided upon a novel plan to avoid this obstacle in the way of a successful harmonious graduation by all the scholars who have completed their High School course. The Leominster plan is that caps and gowns alike shall be worn by all the members of the graduating class, and the town will provide the outfit. There may be some question as to the town going to the expense, but there can be none as to the adoption of a uniform graduation dress by the school authorities, as is the practice in many of the colleges and seminaries. The outcome of the Leominster plan will be watched by many towns, known to and interested in the experiment.

THE JUNE STRAND MAGAZINE.

The Strand Magazine this month contains an excellent selection of light literature eminently suited to the season. There are short stories by such well-known and popular authors as W. W. Jacobs, Morley Roberts, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Austin Phillips, etc., as well as further long installments of Hall Caine's "The White Christ" and E. Nesbit's "Harding's Luck." The color section is devoted to "The Actresses of Paris," in which we are introduced to many charming and beautiful "stars" of the Parisian stage. The series entitled "My Reminiscences" is devoted this month to Adelina Patti, who relates in a happy, easy style many interesting incidents of her professional career. "The Romance of Strong Rooms" is an article which will attract the poor man quite as much as the millionaire, for everyone is more or less interested in "wealth and how it is guarded." F. H. Aitken writes amusingly about "Tails," and gives J. A. Shepherd a great opportunity to contribute some of his most fascinating animal studies. "The Light Side of Finance," written and illustrated by Harry Furniss, is continued, while an article which should attract the attention of artists, is one which discusses the question as to "Which is the Finest Statue in the World?"

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Bert Leslie, who divided honors with Hattie Williams in "Finnty Rattles" last season, will be the principal attraction at Keith's Theatre the week of May 31st. Mr. Leslie in his "Hogan" sketches, with his outlandish slang, has always been a prime favorite in vaudeville. Another popular favorite will be Stuart Barnes, the monologist.

An acrobatic feature of great interest, will be that of the Willy Pantzer Troupe, the midget acrobats who do some astounding feats.

Charles and Fanny Van will remain for another week. Others on the bill are the Five Salvaggis with their sensational dances; the Big City Four, one of the best male quartettes now on the stage; Paul Kleist; Jennings and Renfrow, the comedians; the Daleys in a rolling skating act and others.

SUBURBAN LIFE FOR JUNE.

The June Suburban Life is an outdoor number throughout. The leading article is entitled "What the Camper Needs to Know About Tents." "Of Books and Garden" is a delightful contribution from the pen of Miss Zona Gale. "What Are We Going to Do About Our Roads?" is discussed by Allerton S. Cushman, Assistant Director of the United States Department of Public Roads. "The June-Planted Vegetable Garden," "Good Taste in the Arrangement of Cut-Flowers," and a handsomely illustrated article dealing with strawberries, will appeal to the gardener and the housewife. "Ten of My Boys" is contributed by Prof. F. A. Waugh, the "Birds of Night" is an out-of-the-ordinary nature story, while "Making Over an Old House" is an especially practical contribution. "Canning Fruits and Vegetable of Early Summer" is a particularly timely article by Gerald McCarthy.

TREMONT THEATRE.

"A broken Idol," which has just terminated its long and successful engagement in B. C. Whitney's home of musical comedy in Chicago will open its Boston engagement with a special Decoration Day matinee, May 31st. "A Broken Idol" is the laugh song success by Hal Stephens, Williams and Van Alstyne. The company, headed by Otis Harlan, will be brought here in its entirety. There are a dozen songs in it, and every song is a popular hit. Among them are: "In Politics," "Love Makes the World Go Round," "China Doll," "Springtime," "Happy Days," and "Alabam."

A mechanical mystery is an electrically illuminated balloon in which Miss Alice Yorke, the prima donna of the company, floats through the auditorium and makes a complete circuit of the atmospheric space of the body of the house.

Enthusiasts over the problem of perpetual motion are always hoping to perfect a machine that can be carried in a suitcase and set down wherever the power is desired. A machine called the Exide storage battery may well be said to typify such an ideal—it surpasses it in fact, because it is a reality. The battery contains remarkable capacity for power, which is instantly available with the ease of turning on an electric light. We scarcely realize how important these little packages are until we understand that they can be set into an electrically driven automobile and the owner can speed away in luxurious comfort. Much has been done to increase the capacity of these machines and thousands of people are now enjoying the results.

Health Protection.

The time is rapidly approaching when this town, if it desires the best sanitary service, will be obliged to pay the working member of the Board of Health a salary commensurate with the work that is required of him. It is not fair to expect him to sacrifice his private business in attending to the frequent demands on his time for the protection of the health of the inhabitants.

An Outrage to the Town.

That was a most surp ising thing for the engineer of the Metropolitan Sewer Board to do in causing a connection to be made with the Mystic Valley Sewer and Black Ball pond at the rear of Symmes grain store on upper Main street. What if the sewer is not large enough to take care of the sewage, it was no reason why the surplus should be diverted to this pond and thus poison the air in the centre of the town as the polluted water passes through on its way to Mystic Lake, and make a horrible nuisance of the pond, river and lake. It is almost beyond comprehension that a State board should do such an outrageous thing, and yet after protest by the local Board of Health, the State Board has gone ahead and made provision at the point mentioned above to continue dumping sewage into the pond when the trunk line is not able to take care of it. The town should rise up and protest.

The local Board of Health at the first indication of any more sewage entering the pond, should proceed to rip out the two connecting pipes and close up the openings. The people would sustain the Board in doing this.

WOMEN TO CLEAN UP TOWN.

Reading's "clean up day" program, called off last Saturday on account of the storm, will be held this coming Saturday, May 29, and the co-operation of every resident has been urged to make Reading the cleanest town in the state.

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Brown, Mrs. Lizzie B. Mitchell, Mrs. Elize T. Carr, Mrs. Clara L. Carter and Mrs. Isabel B. Robinson, the town improvement committee of the Woman's Club, will have charge. The object is to gather up all loose paper or debris blowing about the streets and yards and burn it.

A contractor has volunteered the use of a wagon and a man and other wagons will be hired if not volunteered. School pupils will help.

The story is (but the STAR will not vouch for its accuracy) that while a party of young people from Somerville were picnicing in the Fells near Spot pond Tuesday afternoon they were frightened away by the appearance of a bear accompanied by two cubs. The young people had spread out their lunch under a tree and were partaking of it when bruin and his children came upon the scene. It is reported that there is quite a contest on over the position of rural carrier in the local p stoffice. The place was left vacant a week or so ago by the resignation of Mr. Moses P. Richardson, who held it for many years. Three candidates are in the field as his successor, Clyde W Bell, Albert McLellan and James A. Dunnell, and it is heard that friends of the candidates are circulating petitions for their individual election along the route. Perhaps all three could be employed to advantage.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Who wants a 4th of July celebration this year enough so that he is willing to do some work for it? I understand that the association which has had charge of it for several years has got tired and will not undertake it further, but will turn its surplus, about a hundred dollars, over to the Selectmen or any satisfactory committee appointed by them. There certainly should be a celebration and there is never any doubt of getting plenty of money if you go after it. The town has already appropriated $250.00 and now that we have a local band there should be "something doing." Who will do it?

If we keep on the way we have been going we will soon be, if not already, the worst procrastinators in the Commonwealth. We have now so many things on the table that it is getting ridiculous. Years ago we used to take hold of things with vigor and put them through, but of late years we consider and recommend and advise and think it over and slop around. It is so with the town meetings, it is so with the officials. What is the trouble? Isn't there anything that will stir us up? We had better have too much politics than this sluggishness.

If any of the farmers want to read a book that is worth while, The New Earth, by Harwood is it. If not in our library, it should be.

It is too bad that the Boston and Maine timber supports at the Highland station bridge could not have been removed now that Cross street is being macadamized and rebuilt. These big timbers are an obstruction in the way and look badly a so. If the Selectmen had petitioned the County Commissioners, probably a new bridge would have been built and these supports done away with. It was certainly worth trying for anyway, and still is, and will cost nothing but a little effort.

Why should the Water and Sewer department have two Superintendents? When these boards were consolidated it was intended that one Superintendent should cover all of the work, but for some unexplained reason that change has not been made. If it were in some other towns, we would feel certain it was politics, but here it is not that, we know. Why is it then?

WESTON, Ocean-to-Ocean Walker,

Said recently: "When you feel down and out, feel there is no use living, just take your bad thoughts with you and walk them off. Before you have walked a mile things will look rosier. Just try it." Have you noticed the increase in walking of late in every community? Many attribute it to the comfort which Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into your shoes, gives to the millions now using it. As Weston said, "It has real merit."

A TIMELY WARNING.

The Lesson of the French Postal Strike.

Grave Danger In Enlarging the Field of Government Enterprise—Political Influence Would Control the Convenience and Welfare of the Country.

The post and telegraph strike in Paris has collapsed after a determined attempt by organizations of employees of the state to prove that they were superior to their employer, the government, and to reduce it to obedience.

Never has the inherent weakness of government ownership been more clearly revealed. On the one hand, there are charges, which are virtually admitted to be true, that favoritism and other serious abuses have pervaded the French postal and telegraph service because politics has largely controlled appointments and administration. The conditions are not peculiar to the French people. The further any government extends its operations in the direction of public service or industry the greater danger of corruption it creates.

On the other hand, the French postal employees and telegraph operators have not only utterly disregarded the public convenience, but they have openly defied the government's authority. Led by political agitators, they have undertaken to rule in their own way and for their own ends.

The strike was a political demonstration intended to intimidate the government into surrendering on their terms. If they blockaded the wires and the mails and brought trade and communication to a standstill they expected that M. Clemenceau would meet with such pressure from other quarters that he would be forced to yield. To the chamber of deputies M. Barthou, the minister of public works, declared:

"Among the rights of government officials there is not and never can be the right to strike—that is to say, the right to hurt the whole country in order to bring about the triumph of claims which are at least open to debate."

Yet the fact is, right or no right, the government employees did strike. And they were in a position to exercise the greater power precisely because they were government employees, for there may be an excuse for a private agency failing to do its work, but a government must keep its machinery running or confess its unfitness to exist.

Imagine what the situation would be if our own government were to take over the railroads of the country, which in 1907 employed 1,672,000 men. Under the government these employees would constitute a privileged class which every mischievous demagogue, every self seeking politician and every political party would strive to conciliate with the promise of greater privileges. Their organizations would not need to make the first advances, for their support would be worth any price unscrupulous politicians might contrive to make the government pay. Very little encouragement would make them as humble for favors as office seekers are for votes. The corruption of politics would work both ways.

In recent years we have seen the postal employees maintaining a paid lobby at Washington and campaigning for and against candidates for congress on the issue of more pay for the carriers. The women teachers have swarmed upon Albany, buttonholed members and intrigued at election time to have their own salaries raised. The political activity of the police of this city has been an unceasing scandal. The more the municipal service is extended and the offices multiplied the more frequent will be the occasions for similar abuses and the greater the difficulty of coping with them.

Whether it be the city, the state or the nation that enlarges the field of its operations, the growth of the power of political influence must help to diminish personal responsibility until at last the public's servants turn squarely against the public, as they have done in France, and demand a government of officeholders, by officeholders, for officeholders.—New York World.

Earnings Versus Expenses.

It is interesting to note that during the past five years the operating expenses of the electric railway companies have increased practically 8 per cent more than the earnings from operation, or 76.6 per cent instead of 68.9 per cent, and that taxes and fixed charges increased practically 10 per cent more than earnings from operation, so that the net income of the electric railway companies shows an increase of only 31.8 per cent, or less than half that of the gross, as compared with that of five years ago. * * * The wage earners, however, have gained per individual by this change more than the salaried employees, as their wages have increased 8.2 per cent, while the remuneration of the average salaried employee has advanced only 5.6 per cent.—Electric Railway Journal.

Another Claim Falls.

A recent typhoid epidemic at Nashville, Tenn., suggests that public ownership of the waterworks does not mean necessarily a pure water supply. The report of the state bacteriologist to the Tennessee board of health attributes the sickness to bad water. Plans are under discussion toward bettering the conditions, but Nashville has owned and operated its water plant for a good many years.—Public Service.

THE LUMINOUS HALO.

Psychic Explanation of an Oft Witnessed Phenomenon.

I was summoned one day to the Salpetriere in Paris to see a woman who lay in a bed in the dark. She was a woman whose body, nerves, brain, had been teased and tortured for years in psychic and occult experiment. What mental perturbation was racking that brain I did not know, and the physicians at her bedside did not know. With clinched hands and teeth and eyes open wide the woman lay there. Her breathing was irregular and not deep. What we saw was this: A luminous halo of a vague orange hue that circled her head, even as in the old pictures of martyred saints you see the heads crowned with faded gold. This halo was fluctuant. It came and went. It was a light that flickered, grew, faded, formed itself anew.

A miracle, this aureoled head?

If you want to call it that. Words are not of great importance. It was a miracle when it glowed around the head of a martyr tortured in the arena so tortured by pain and fear that his dissociated psychic centers produced the phenomenon of the exteriorization of luminous energy.

Perhaps it were better to call it at once a miracle and a prescientific fact—a fact, that is, which is occult, but is in the way of becoming known.

I asked Dr. Frere what he thought of this miracle.

"I have often seen it," he said. The field of his experiments was the mad house at Bicetre. There many neuropathic patients abide, and often in cases of severe headache or of religious ecstasy he has seen these fluctuant aureoles around the head.

"The rays are often twenty centimeters in extent, quite regular, forming a perfect aureole," he explained.

There is, then, a form of energy endowed with luminous properties emanating from the human body under certain conditions.—Vance Thompson in Hampton's Magazine.

THE LAND OF BIG GAME.

British East Africa as It Appears to the Hunter.

A brown village of thatched huts squatting in a trampled clearing of the forest and backed by thickset trees so closely laced with a living tapestry of woven green that the aching tropic sunlight can scarcely penetrate; slim, naked blacks slipping like shadows among the broad leaved bananas and rubber trees, staring furtively as your bearers file slowly past them; a lonely station far up or down river, where a haggard white man sits to receive tribute in the name of his trading company, marks an outpost of civilization in this jungle land. And through and under it all are the fevered glare of sunlight, the ceaseless drowsy whisper of the woods, the hot, dry scents of the parched earth, or, if the rains have come, all the land about will lie cloaked in steaming vapor, the sultry air as thick and humid as the air of a greenhouse at home. There you have the Kongo as the white man knows it—the Kongo or the jungle of Uganda. But all of this is only a part of what we have chosen to call and to picture as the dark continent.

For there, too, is the desert, widely different in all its aspects from Kongoland. On the slope of the rising ground that lifts from sea level at Mombasa and climbs to nearly 8,000 feet before it drops again to the lesser level of Victoria Nyanza is another vast waste as typical of Africa as this jungle country—the desert, as it is called, the plains of bush and grass. Six months of the year—from October to April—it lies half drowned under tropic rains. From April to September only occasional showers fall, and the wide plateau grills under the staring sunlight, all yellowing in the glare. Here upon these uplands is found the great variety of big game, the vast herds of wild things that have made and still make Africa the greatest shooting country in the world. This is British East Africa as the hunter knows it.—C. B. Taylor in Everybody's.

An Alibi.

The milkman stood before her nervously twirling his hat in his hands.

"So," she said sternly, "you have come at last."

"Yes, madam. You sent for me, I believe," he replied.

"I wished to tell you that I found a minnow in the milk yesterday morning."

"I am sorry, madam, but if the cows will drink from the brook instead of from the trough I cannot help it."—Harper's Weekly.

A Queer Dish.

A great dish at Egyptian harem feasts is that of a lamb roasted whole. After the manner of a nest of Chinese boxes, each smaller than the other, the lamb is stuffed with a whole turkey, the turkey with a chicken, the chicken with a pigeon, the pigeon with a quail and the quail with a becafico, the smallest bird known, except a humming bird. The lamb is roasted over a slow fire until it is almost ready to fall to pieces.

Try This.

Fasten a key to a string and suspend it by your thumb and finger, and it will oscillate like a pendulum. Let some one place his hand under the key, and it will change to a circular motion. Then let a third person place his hand upon your shoulder, and the key becomes stationary.—London Express.

The man who would rather be right than be president generally has his preference gratified.—Philadelphia Record.

TRICKS IN SMUGGLING

The Way Uncle Sam Is Swindled Through the Mails.

WATCHES IN WEDDING CAKE.

A Scheme That Was Disclosed by a Gleeful Girl Who Could Not Hold Her Tongue—Gloves That Came One at a Time and Corsets In Sections.

Too few people think it a crime to swindle the customs. For that reason many bright and brainy persons think hard how to get goods from abroad without paying toll to Uncle Sam. As most of the successful operators in this line are women, who have more time to think about such things than men, it can be imagined that the customs officers have to be eternally alert to protect the government.

The avenues through the steamship passenger route are pretty carefully guarded, and as comparatively few people go abroad the great mass of dwellers in this protected land are debarred from sharing in the humorous little game of hide the diamond or smuggle the silk. But there is another avenue that is being used enthusiastically by the anti-duty aggregation. It is the United States mail.

With the immense volume of foreign mail delivered to this country it is manifestly impossible to open and examine every package that seems to contain newspapers or merely a bulky letter to see whether or not some dutiable article is concealed therein. So far as it is possible, however, it is done, and the addressee has to go to the postoffice and pay duty on the amount at which the dutiable article is appraised.

The custom house experts at the postoffice have their hands full checkmating the clever moves of those who are constantly devising new ways to disguise dutiable things as innocent looking parcels.

"We used to pass cakes through without question," said one of the examiners. "It seemed too bad to lay hands on a Christmas pudding sent by relatives in England to some exile in this country. It also disturbed the sentimental side of a customs officer to demolish a section of wedding cake that had been sent from the old home in Germany to Fritz in America. So we let these sacred things pass through. But one day we had an awakening. One of the customs men heard that a neighbor had obtained a new watch from abroad. It had come through duty free, and the gleeful girl who was wearing it could not keep quiet about the clever way the postoffice had been deluded. It seems the watch had been baked right into the cake and had come through without discovery. Now, this forced us to take some step to prevent a repetition of such smartness, and ever after that we held on to all cakes or puddings that came in packages through the mail. A letter is sent to the person to whom the package is addressed, and this person it is almost always a woman, has to come to the postoffice and cut the cake or slice the pudding right in front of the customs officer. Do we catch a Tartar occasionally? Well, you may take it for granted that any one who would try this trick is a Tartar, to begin with, and so we don't get off without a scene when the cutting time comes.

"A trick that fooled us for a time was the sending through the mail of one glove a trifle creased to give the idea that it was merely a worn glove that had been left in Europe by a tourist. With the glove would come a letter to that effect, 'You went away without one of your gloves,' etc. Of course we passed it through unsuspectingly. But we got so many of these that it began to look suspicious. So we held on to one of them, and by the next mail there came another glove from the same address to the same person. The glove was the fellow to the other. Then we got another left hand glove and later the right hand glove to match it. The trick was simple and admirable in its simplicity. Gloves were being sent through in quantities, one at a time.

"But the queerest trick we exposed the other day. A woman was accumulating a large stock of fancy corsets without troubling about the duty that should have been paid on them. The trick was to send half a corset through the mail. We knew of no rule about paying duty on half a corset. It appeared to us to be a mere remnant of the up to date woman's attire and not important enough to consider as dutiable.

"So we passed the half corset along and thought no more of it. But half corsets began to drop in with all too great frequency. It looked as though corset remnants had suddenly attained considerable importance in some one's estimation. So one of the men put it up to his wife, and she took something less than a fraction of a second to puncture the scheme. The half corset was useless in itself, but when the other half arrived there was a French corset ready for wearing.

"We find fine silks done up in packages of herbs, watches, diamond rings and bracelets concealed in the leaves of books in holes cut for the purpose and separate diamonds hidden away in bottles of transparent liquid where the gem is scarcely visible. No doubt many dutiable articles escape us, but we are getting wiser every day to the tricks of the mail smugglers."—New York Tribune.

Keep your face always to the sunshine and the shadows will fall behind you.

Prorogation Seems Quite Distant at Present Time

NEW HAVEN BILL INTERESTS

Boston Charter Measure Will Cause Warm Discussion—Labor Leaders Criticized Regarding Eight-Hour Bill—Republicans Have No Contests on State Ticket

It looks as if the prorogation of the legislature was quite distant. There are several very important measures still before the great and general court which will require time to consider. The most important of these, in a general way, is the bill authorizing the creation of a holding company for the Billard stock in the Boston and Maine railroad. Governor Draper considers it of the first importance that the control of the Boston and Maine system shall be held in Massachusetts. At the present time nearly a majority of the stock is held, ostensibly, by Banker Billard of Connecticut. The actual control of this great railroad system, which is essentially a Massachusetts corporation, has departed from the state.

If a holding company, chartered by the state of Massachusetts, is permitted to hold this stock, the corporation would always be amenable to Massachusetts laws and Massachusetts control. Level-headed business men consider this much better for the commonwealth than permitting the control to go outside of the state, as has the control of the Boston and Albany within recent years. The experience of the state with the Albany has convinced many that we ought to retain in some way or other the control of the New Haven here at home.

The bill proposed aims to provide that a majority of the directors of the holding corporation shall always be residents of Massachusetts and puts a string upon the system so that it cannot get away from Massachusetts control.

There is some opposition to the legislation proposed by the governor, but it is not nearly as strong as it has been in former years and there is a probability of its becoming law.

Labor Men Are Criticized

A good many labor men are much disturbed over the action of their representatives at the state house in refusing to make concessions which might save the eight-hour bill. This bill constitutes eight hours a day's work for public employes working for the state or any county therein, or any city or town which has accepted the provisions of the act for an eight-hour day. It also applies to all contractors engaged on public work in cities or towns which had accepted the eight-hour day statute.

The practical objection to the bill was not to the principle therein but to the drastic language in the fifth section, in which it was provided that at any trial arising under the act, evidence that laborers, workmen or mechanics had worked or were working over eight hours in any one calendar day should be prima facie evidence of the violation of this act. It was pointed out that the section was probably unconstitutional to start with and that it imposed upon contractors unnecessary hardship in that they might be fined or imprisoned for men working over time when they might have no personal responsibility or knowledge of such acts.

The labor men were told long before the bill went to the governor that there was grave objection to this section and that its passage would be endangered if it was not changed. One labor representative was in favor of changing the section, but the majority refused to accept any modification. When it had passed both branches of the legislature and went to the governor, he immediately detected the danger in this section and let it be understood that he would not sign it unless that was changed. One of the leading labor men in charge of the bill was strenuously in favor of conceding this, but the majority declined to yield a single point and the bill was vetoed. Had the concession been made, the bill would have been withdrawn from the governor by the senate, the change made in section 5, and sent to the house for concurrence. Then it would have gone back to the governor and now be a law on the statute books of the commonwealth.

It is felt by many that some of these labor leaders were used by the Democrats in an effort to array labor against Governor Draper. The fact that many labor men are condemning their leaders for their bull-headed obstinancy shows that some of the labor men at any rate know where to place the blame for this failure to secure legislation.

The Boston Charter Bill

The Boston charter bill is one of the principal measures engaging the attention of the great and general court. The situation as it stands today is a good deal mixed. There is on one hand tremendous opposition to the passage of the bill and on the other strong support. As reported, the bill is based on the recommendations of the finance commission, and if enacted is to be voted upon by the people.

The measure provides for a permanent finance commission, the administration of departments by trained experts approved by the civil service commission, the initiative of the budget by the mayor, more careful safeguarding of long-time contracts entered into by the city, increase in the power of the auditor, strict provisions preventing the interference of the city council in matters of city contracts and city labor, and the regular publication of a City Record. This part of the bill is not referred to the people.

The second part gives them an opportunity to make a selection from two different plans. The first provides for a two-year term for mayor, a city council of thirty-six, nine elected at large and twenty-six by wards with a minority representation, and a return to the old convention system. The second plan calls for a four-year term for the mayor subject to recall after two years, a city council of nine members elected at large for three-year terms and nominations by petition, with the abolition of party designations on the ballot. The plan favored by the majority of those voting upon these alternatives would become law.

It looks as if the measure might have a stormy time in the house with a possibility of passage, while in the senate it will probably be strongly favored.

State Politics Very Quiet

There is very little interest in political matters just at this time. There is likely to be no change in the personnel of the Republican state ticket this fall. The appointment of Treasurer Chapin to the savings bank department and the election by the legislature of Senator Elmer A. Stevens to succeed him as treasurer removes the only position which might have caused a contest this fall. There has been some talk of Attorney General Malone declining another term, but it is quite unlikely that he will do so.

Democrats seem to be willing that James H. Vahey of Watertown shall be renominated as the Democratic candidate for governor. As a matter of fact, nobody else seems to care for the nomination, anyway, which is a pretty fair indication of the feeling among Democrats that it will be very difficult for them to elect a governor this year under any conceivable circumstances.

GOT THE WHOLE VOTE.

A Pledge That Was Freely Given and That Was Easily Kept.

It is related of a certain candidate for office in a certain Kansas campaign that he billed himself for a speech in a southern Kansas town on a certain October day and wrote ahead to a number of friends there to give him "tips."

One of them told him to see a certain colored man upon his arrival in the town. "If you can get the vote of this negro," wrote the friend, "you can get the vote of the whole negro population in this town. Don't fail to see him and get him to your way of thinking."

About the first thing the candidate did after registering at the hotel was to look up this negro. It was only a little while after the introduction that he was calling the negro by his given name, filling his pockets with cigars, passing him compliments and generally "giving him the taffy." The negro took it all and enjoyed the occasion immensely. The candidate spent several hours in the negro's company and after he thought the proper degree of warmth had been obtained broached the real object of his friendship:

"Say, John, I want the negro vote of this town."

"All right," replied John. "I'll vote fo' you, sah. I'll vote fo' you. I'm fo' you, sah."

"That's all right," said the candidate. "That's all right. I'm sure you will. I'm sure you will. But I want to have the whole negro vote of this town. I want to get all."

"Dat's all right," responded the negro. "I done said I'd vote fo' you. I'm yo' friend. I'll suttinly cast my vote fo' you."

"But, say, John, I know that," said the candidate. "See here, I'll be frank. The fellows told me that you are a big man among the colored folks down here and that if I got your vote I'd get the whole negro vote in this place. Do you catch on?"

"Sho," replied John. "Sho I do. You'll git de whole niggah vote, all right. Dey won't be trouble 'bout dat, sah. You see, I'm de only niggah in dis here whole town."—Mobile Register.

Why Tailors Sit Crosslegged.

A tailor making a dress coat sat crosslegged on a table, like a Turk. "Why do tailors always work in that uncomfortable position?" asked a visitor.

"Women's tailors don't. Only men's do," was the reply. "And for men's tailors it is the most comfortable and the most convenient position possible. You see, the sewing on men's clothes is very fine. The work must be held up close to the eyes. Well, in this position I lean the work on my elevated knees, and thus it is nearer my eyes, while at the same time my back remains straight. Analyzed, the position is a fine one. It keeps the back straight and the chest out, the knees make a table close up to the face, and eye strain is avoided.

"Tailors for women sit on chairs. For one thing, the sewing on women's clothes is less fine than on men's. For another, the woman's tailor has to get up every few minutes to go to the manikin, and all that rising, if he sat crosslegged on the floor, would tire him too much in the day's run."—New York Press.

A VALUABLE WEED.

The Teasel That Is Used to Raise the Nap on Cloth.

Our readers who never saw a teasel (spelled also teazel and teazle and even tassel) can imagine a fir cone or "swamp cattail," set all over with little stiff hooks. It is the bur (or tassel or flower head or thistle top) of the plant dipsacus, and so identified is it with cloth dressing that this use of it gave it its botanical name, Dipsacus fullonum, or fuller's teasel.

However familiar to people who live in lands where the teasel is extensively grown the fact may be that the prickly heads of that plant are universally used to raise the nap on cloth, a multitude of persons in his country probably never heard of it and will be astonished to learn in what enormous quantities the plant is raised.

In France alone several thousand acres of land are exclusively devoted to the cultivation of the teasel. French manufacturers use many thousand dollars' worth of the prickly heads and export thousands of tons of them, valued at perhaps millions of dollars. Hundreds of tons are produced in Austria, England, Belgium, Poland and the Crimea.

The prickles of the teasel have a small knob at the end, and this, mounted on an elastic stem and set with great precision on the central spindle, affords a little brush, such, it is said, as the utmost mechanical skill has never been able to rival, at all events at the same price.—New York Herald.

A LOST MINE.

The Tragic Legend That Is Associated With Bald Mountain.

The legend of a lost mine has given to Bald mountain, in Placer county, Colo., a fascinating interest for prospectors. Tradition is that early in the fifties of the last century three men disappeared from an immigrant party going over the old Gap trail. Search for them was without avail, and they were finally reported dead by the searchers.

Where or how they wintered no one knows, but the following spring, ragged, shoeless and demoralized, they filed into Michigan Bluff. Their blankets were converted into sacks, and with them they brought gold dust to the amount of $10,000 or $15,000.

Spending but a single night within the confines of civilization and giving no information as to the location of their large claim, they were followed on their return trip, and a few weeks later their murdered bodies were found in one of the dreary canyons that scar the face of the desolate peak.

Since then many a man has sought this lost mine, but apparently its immunity is as certain as that of the treasure of Captain Kidd.—Philadelphia North American.

Pensive Butlers.

The fashion of building houses with the entrance doors practically on a level with the street gives the observing stroller on Fifth avenue some humorous glimpses of butlers on duty. In the house of one of the most fashionable families in town the butler can be seen standing behind the bronze grill and glass doors staring disconsolately out at the passing throng for most of the afternoon, while across the street from this house the same kind of an entranceway often discloses a glimpse of a functionary of the same class seated in a poetical attitude by a circular marble table, his head supported by his hand. Outside of a hospital they are probably the saddest looking men in New York.—New York Press.

The Gordian Knot.

When one of Uncle Sam's sailor's, a man named Gordon, formerly serving on one of our vessels in a West Indian squadron, was taken to the Naval hospital in Washington he described with grewsome vividness to his companions there his adventure with a shark off one of the islands in the West Indies.

"I had jest fell over the bulwarks," said the able seaman, "when along comes a big shark an' grabs me by the leg."

"What did ye do then, matey?" asked one of the patients.

"I never disputes none with sharks," said the sailor. "I let him have the leg."—Harper's Weekly.

A Composer's Compliment.

Wagner once said he would prefer to go to Vienna to hear the waltzes of Strauss to hearing Italian opera. On a birthday of Mme. Strauss some years ago she had as guests many celebrated musicians. She passed around a fan on which the different composers and players were writing their names and excerpts from compositions of their own. When it reached Brahms he penned the first measure of the "Blue Danube" waltz and signed beneath, "Not, I regret to say, by your devoted friend Johannes Brahms."

An Opinion.

"Say, paw," said little Rollo, "why do they call George Washington the father of his country?"

"I dunno, son, unless it was because his country kept him hustling to keep it out of trouble and then came to look at him as a sort of old fogy whose advice didn't amount to much anyhow."—Washington Star.

What He Wanted.

"Be careful, young man. You know the old saying, 'Marry in haste and repent at leisure.'"

"That's why I'm rushing things. What I want is leisure."—Exchange.

When fortune fails us the supposed friends of our prosperous days vanish.—Plautus.

Don't Spend all Summer Dreaming of Profits.

There are, generally speaking, two classes of people, those who do things, and those who make excuses. Procrastination often means opportunity lost.

If it has become a conviction with you that you should buy a home or a building lot this summer, act upon it. The brain is an asset in planning valuable ideas only when those ideas are carried into execution.

Winchester's property is cheaper now than it ever will be in the future, and if you want to build, now is the time to start.

I can sell you a good lot at a bargain, or I will find you a desirable house "ready made."

Several very attractive propositions just at this time. Now's your opportunity.

On Sunday afternoon an automobile narrowly escaped wrecking a buggy in the centre. Both were going at right angles and it looked as though the clearance would be rather narrow, but the climax came when the buggy got directly in front of the auto and the horse dropped suddenly from a trot into a walk. A quick turn of the auto was all that saved the occupants of the buggy, and as it was the rear wheel was just touched, and that touch was enough to slew the carriage around three or four feet. In the buggy were four persons. Both drivers appeared to be at fault for taking chances, but no damage was done.

William H. Woodman and A. Wilbert Starratt have bought the land on Church Street next to the Miller property and near Wedgemere avenue containg about 14,000 feet and also the lot of land directly in the rear, facing on Calumet Road, containing about 15,000 feet, the total assessment being $3450. This is the property formerly owned by Charles H. Bond, being two of the most attractive lots unbuilt on in the town. M. H. Gulesian of Chestnut Hill was the grantor.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Palmer of Highland avenue are the parents of a son, born the first of the week.

Many person have noticed the darkened appearance of the streets about the town. This is due to their being spraved with a dust laying preparation. The streets from the Arlington to the Stoneham line are to be sprayed with a preparation of calcium chloride, as are those in the centre. Another preparation is to be used on the streets from the Medford to the Woburn line. Three sprayings are necessary, two having been already made on some portions of the surface. The success of the calcium chloride preparation depends to a considerable extent upon damp nights, as the moisture helps perform the work. If the nights are dry it may become necessary to use the watering carts, one sprinkling being estimated to be good for about twenty days. The preparation is sprayed on by the watering carts the same as the usual water.

THE WINCHESTER STAR.

VOL. XXVIII. NO. 48. WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, JUNE 4, 1909. PRICE, FIVE CENTS

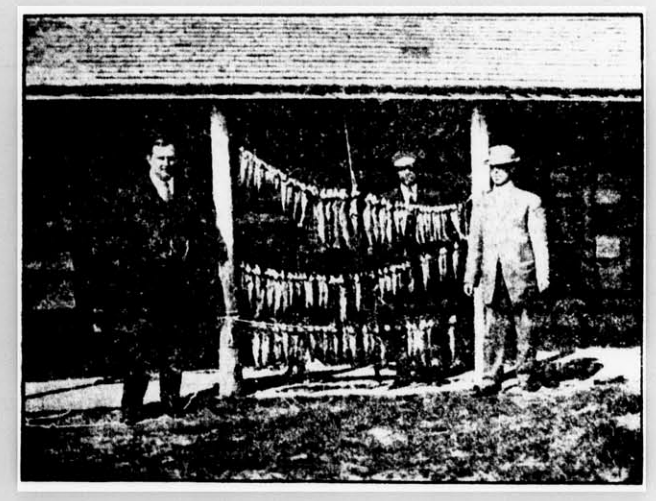

The above gentlemen represent a portion of the lucky fishermen who assisted in making the big catch of trout and salmon on Moosehead Lake last week. This is where they had their camp, amid the sweet smelling pines of the Maine forest.

WADLEIGH SCHOOL PUBLIC DAY.

Friday, May 28, was Parents' Day at the Wadleigh. The room programs ran from 8.30 to 12.30, and open house in the evening from 7.15 to 9.15. An even hundred adults improved the special opportunity of inspecting the work during the morning session and eighty-three were registered during the evening hours. Many expressed their appreciation for what they had seen and heard. The exceptionally fine exhibit of manual training work in sloyd and sewing won unreserved plaudits. The three hundred pots of geraniums in full bloom helped to make the rooms attractive and home like, and the wild-flower shelves with their 170 listed specimens received well deserved attention. The general conduct of affairs, in which the skillful class work by the teachers figured strongly, was highly commended by the appreciative parents.

A MEMORABLE SPRING.

We very much doubt if there is among the readers of the STAR a person who remembers a year that gave us such a cold, disagreeable spring, with its every-day piercing winds as the one just drawn to a close. At any rate it presents a striking contrast with the spring that saw the ending of our Civil War. The spring of 1865 was almost wholly free from east winds, and vegetation went ahead at a rate seldom witnessed. On the first day of June, the day the "Lincoln Fast" was observed, the clover fields, then so common on nearly all our farms, were in full bloom ready for the scythe Corn was knee high, cranberry beans up the poles two feet and potatoes planted dry were showing their blossom buds. And to cap the whole, a blade of rye, cut from a field of this grain in full bloom on what is now one of the Purrington farms on Cambridge street, measured seven feet and eight inches. When, think ye, shall we see the like again ?

The above picture shows the large catch of trout and salmon made by the members of the Winchester fishing party last week. Moosehead Lake was generous and yielded up good strings.

HENRY P. RANNEY.

Henry P. Ranney, 80 years of age, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Alfred S. Hall, No. 8 Summit avenue, on Monday afternoon. He had long suffered from a valvular disease of the heart, which finally became acute, and brought the termination of his earthly activity.

He had made his home in this town for the past two months.

Mr. Ranney was born at West Westminister, Vt., his parents being Joseph and Priscilla Ranney. He was a farmer by occupation and was highly respected in his native town, which he had represented in the Vermont legislature in various years.

He married Miss Frances A. Hambien in 1853. She died in 1903, eighteen days before their golden wedding day. Mrs. Hall is their only child.

The funeral services were held at West Westminister, June 2nd.

W. H. S. NOTES.

At a meeting of the Athletic Association on last Tuesday morning the report of the entertainment given in April was accepted.

Andrew Hanson resigned as manager of the base ball team and Ted Main was appointed to finish out the season in that position.

Base ball game at Woburn Monday will be the last contest of the year. Everybody accompanying the team will leave on the 2.35 car.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Clark of Sheffield road give a dinner tonight in Boston to a number of their friends and neighbors, afterwards entertaining them at the Pops. They give this as a farewell prior to sailing for Europe.

WINCHESTER TEACHERS' CLUB PICNIC.

One of the most enjoyable functions ever held by the Teachers' Club was its second annual picnic on Wednesday afternoon. Forty enthusiastic picnickers assembled at Camp Lincoln, Durgin's Grove, on the Stoneham-Wakefield line early in the afternoon. Principal Briggs, a member of the Executive Committee of the Club, had the afternoon's affairs in charge.

The base-ball game captained by Miss Lyons of the Chapin and Miss Browning, Superintendent Herron's Clerk, was an interesting feature. The five-inning contest resulted in a score of twelve to eleven in favor of Miss Lyons' side. The battery on Miss Lyon's team was Miss Mason pitcher and Mr. Briggs catcher. The losing side had Mr. May in its box and Miss Davis behind the bat.

Tossing of bean-bags and passing the basket ball occasioned much merriment. Miss Jameson of the Prince school admirably filled the role of musical director, assisted by her banjo. Mrs. O'Sullivan's coffee was superb, and that and the ice-cream provided by the club helped the much enjoyed basket lunches. The majority returned by the 8.05 Wakefield electric.

Y. M. C. A.

If there are mothers in Winchester who think a Y. M. C. A. building is not necessary will they please watch Manchester Field.

It seems to me it would be far better to provide some place if only a couple of rooms with good literature, games and music to attract and hold boys, rather than have the "gang" collect on a public playground playing cards and gambling. Children from five years of age and up are willing spectators. I am a mother of boys and hope in the near future to see something done for them along this line.

SEWAGE OVERFLOW.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In view of the agitation which has been aroused by the article appearing on the front page of your last issue in regard to the overflow outlets recently installed in the manholes in the Metropolitan sewers in the rear of Symmes' grain store, a reassuring word to your readers may not be out of place.

These two sewers have not been turned into Black Ball pond as one reading the article might suppose, but such provision has been made at the manholes in question that when the sewers are overloaded they will overflow into the pond instead of through the manhole covers in the streets, as happened three times last winter.

On May 7th one of these sewers—the old Mystic Valley—overflowed at this point because, owing to some mistake of the agents of the Metropolitan Water & Sewerage Board, the outlet pipe was put in below the normal high water mark in the manhole. That condition was remedied immediately, and contrivances in the nature of traps were built in the outlets so that it is now believed that they will not overflow at all, except when conditions are such that without the outlets the manholes in the streets, particularly in the lower parts of the town, would overflow.

There has been no overflow since May 7th, and there is likely to be none in the future except in times of very wet weather as during a spring thaw when the sewer becomes filled with surface water which leaks in.

The condition of things is of course not ideal, but at the present time there seems little likelihood of its becoming a menace to health or even an offensive nuisance. The present sewer, however, appears to be too small for the work required of it, and a new and larger one which seems to be the best and perhaps the only remedy for the existing state of things may be necessary. The board has been in communication with the Metropolitan Water & Sewerage Board since May 8th, and has been keeping a watch upon the outlets. We do not feel that we are at the bottom of the matter yet but are still investigating, and shall ultimately take those measures for protecting the inhabitants from dangerous and offensive conditions which seem most efficient and effective, even if that means an attempt to obtain a new and larger sewer with the great accompanying cost.

It is the hope of the board that this communication may allay in some measure the fears justly aroused in last week's article which fortunately depicted conditions much worse than those actually existing.

MARSHALL W. JONES,

BRIDGES--KELLEY.

Mr. Herbert Chester Bridges and Miss Bessie Gardner Kelley were united in marriage Thursday evening at the bride's home on Wilson street, by Rev. Mr. Hodge of the Baptist church, who used the double ring service. The young couple stood under a beautiful floral arch of bridalwreath and field pinks. The bride was gowned in white silk and carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley and Miss Effie Kelley, her sister, the bridesmaid, wore pink chiffon and carried pink roses. Mr. Harold Bridges was his brother's best man. Miss Clara C. Call of South Braintree presided at the piano, and the young people attended to the refreshments. The wedding was strictly a family affair only relatives being present.

After the ceremony a reception was held and the bride and groom started on a wedding trip amid lots of good wishes and bright prospects. They will reside at No. 16 Linwood street, Arlington, where a pretty furnished home awaits their return.

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES.

The Mission Study Conference has just completed the study of "The Frontier," a strong book on the great new West. The average attendance at the conference was about 20. The needs of western fields were so keenly realized that the Conference will hold a Lawn Festival on Thursday evening, at 509 Washington street, to raise money for home missions.

The Baptist Picnic this year will be held on June 17th, as usual, and the place will again be Canobie Lake, N. H. Tickets 50 and 35 cents.

BANCROFT—NICKERSON WEDDING PARTY.

BANCROFT—NICKERSON.

June, the month of roses and weddings, was ushered in by the marriage Tuesday afternoon of Miss Charlotte Nickerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nickerson, and Guy Bancrott of Cambridge. The wedding was solemnized at 4 o'clock in the Unitarian church, and was as picturesque as only a country wedding can be when skies are fair, like the poet's rare day in June.

Two special cars, bringing many guests from Boston, and numerous automobiles arrived shortly before the ceremony, and these guests, together with those from Winchester and neighboring suburbs, filled the church to overflowing. As the wedding guests wended their way to and from the church the greensward looked like an animated flower garden.

The decorations were simple and effective. At the chancel there was a beautiful arrangement of white peonies and pale tinted hydrangea blossoms against a background of southern laurel and palms. The pews in the centre aisle were ornamented with clusters of white peonies, tied with pink ribbons.

The organist, Mr. Joshua Phippen, played joyous music while the guests were assembling, finally drifting into the familiar strains of the wedding march as the bridal party entered. The bride, who was escorted to the chancel and given in marriage by her father, was handsomely gowned in white satin with trimmings of point and duchess lace, the corsage ornamented with a beautiful brooch of pearls and diamonds. She wore a bridal veil of tulle, fastened with a coronet of orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lillies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Mary Nickerson, sister of the bride, who wore an empire gown of rose pink with a touch of silver trimming, a picturesque hat, trimmed with white ostrich plumes and long pink streamers that tied coquettishly at one side. The bridesmaids were similarly gowned, they wore rose pink hats wreathed with roses and pink ribbons and carried pretty rustic baskets filled with pink roses. They were the Misses Margaret French, Mary Jenney of Brookline, Elinor Sawyer of Montclair, N. J., and Theodora Borden of Fall River.

Miss Mary Bancroft, the winsome little daughter of the groom's brother, Brig. Gen. Hugh Bancroft, and little Barbara Bancroft of West Newton were very attractive flower girls. They wore dainty frocks of white muslin set off with pink ribbons, and quaint little bonnets of lace and straw trimmed with rosebuds. They carried pretty baskets filled with the same fragrant blossoms.

Gen Hugh Bancroft was best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Kenneth Adams of Hartford, Conn., Albert Mason of New Bedford, Harold Hovey, Barrett Wendell, Jr., Richard Hale, Thomas P. Beale, Jr., Dr. William E. Ladd and Dr. Donald Gregg of Boston.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. William I. Lawrance, pastor of the church. Immediately after the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 92 Bacon street. The young couple were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson and Gen. and Mrs. William A. Bancroft. Mrs. Nickerson was charmingly gowned in blue satin, which was draped with jetted black lace. She wore a hat trimmed with ostrich plumes and tiny bunches of rosebuds. Mrs. Bancroft was beautifully gowned in black chiffon and point lace over old rose, the directoire train having a deep border woven in an exquisite design of flowers in most artistic combinations of color. She wore a black hat trimmed with ostrich plumes and a single rose which harmonized with her gown.

Refreshments were served under a marquee placed on the lawn at the rear of the house and festooned with laurel. The tables were bright and fragrant with June roses and the candelabra were set off with pink and silver shades.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Haviland of Limoges, France, who have been here on a visit, were most cordially welcomed and held an informal reception. Mrs. Haviland was Miss Katharine Bancroft, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. William A. Bancroft.

Mrs. Haviland was most attractive in an empire gown of pink chiffon with silver and pearl trimmings. She wore a large black hat with pale pink ostrich feathers.

At 7 o'clock the newly married couple departed on their wedding trip, and on their return will live in Winchester for the summer in the home of Mrs. Bancroft's parents on Bacon street.

CARLTON APOLLONIO.

From Milton Academy, "Orange and Blue," June—1909.

"Over the mantel in the Graduates, Room hangs a fine portrait of Carlton Apollonio, '04, given to the Academy by his classmates. A small brass tablet beneath the picture bears this inscription:

In Memory of
CARLTON APOLLONIO
Class of 1904
Born December 31, 1883
Died March 14, 1909
The Gift of His Classmates.

Accompanying the portrait came this letter:

Dear Mr. Cobb,—

I heard * * * * yesterday that the picture of Carlton Apollonio is at school. I do not think that the Class of 1904 would wish to have this memorial, which is only too small a token, go to you all, not accompanied by some word to let it be known how truly we all loved Carlton, and what his friendship and manliness will always mean to us, who had the happy good fortune to know him well.

He came to Milton Academy in our fourth class year, and from that time on, in school and later in college, I know of no one of whom we were more proud, and who did more good for Milton, truly carrying forward with him the best that there is in this world. I am grateful to be able to dwell now on the many good times that I have had with him, and though his life was cut off in its bright beginning, may we all of us who happen to live longer, leave as clear a memory, and as high and fine a record as he.

A better schoolmate, a finer college man, a dearer friend, none of us will ever know; and now that he is gone, we send you his picture, not fearing that without it you will forget, for that we know can never be; but as a memorial which we know you want, and which it does our hearts good to give you.

Most truly yours,
SAMUEL D. WARREN, JR.,
President of the Class of 1904.

This year's edition of "Summer Homes," the Central Vermont Railway's summer resort book, just issued, is a particularly attractive publication and as a guide to the many charming resorts among the Green Mountains and along the shores of Lake Champlain should be seen by every family looking for the ideal vacation land. The book contains scores of beautiful views of Vermont and the Lake Champlain together with descriptive matter, maps, routes, rates for board and a complete program of the Tercentenary celebration of the discovery of Lake Champlain which is to be celebrated early in July. The book will be sent by mail for 6c stamp on application to "Summer Homes" No. 6, 360 Washington Street, Boston.

WINCHESTER, MASS., May 18th, 1909.

TO THE BOARD OF SELECTMEN OF THE TOWN OF WINCHESTER:

RESPECTFULLY REPRESENT the undersigned that they are desirous of laying out and constructing a street or way over land owned by them in said Town of Winchester. Said proposed road or way running from Warren street to Wildwood street, in accordance with the plans thereof submitted herewith.

May 24th, 1909

Upon the foregoing petition it is ordered that a public hearing be given at the office of said Board on Monday, the 7th day of June next, at 8 o'clock in the evening, notice of said hearing to be published in the Winchester STAR for two weeks preceeding said hearing in accordance with the requirements of the Acts of 1907, Chapter 191.

THAT MIDNIGHT TRAIN.

"We learn," says the Stoneham Independent, "that, at the request of a number of Winchester people, the Boston & Maine authorities are to change the leaving time of the late train on the Stoneham branch from Boston, beginning with the summer schedule, June 21, from 11.25 to 11.55 p.m., so that it would be due to arrive here sometime in the wee small hours of the morning. This would greatly inconvenience Stoneham patrons, as the previous train out in the evening leaves at 9.35, considerably over two hours earlier. It is up to Stoneham people to enter a vigorous protest. If a few Winchester 'high bloods,' who are not satisfied with going to the theatre, but must also have an after-theatre supper following, are to dictate the time schedule of trains for all other places along the route, it's high time that the railroad officials should be made to stand up and take notice of the wishes of the large majority.

"It looks as if the Winchester 'high bloods' had found themselves unable to assuage their thirst before the usual 11 o'clock closing hour of licensed places and have devised this means whereby to take advantage of the privilege given a few of the leading Boston hostelries to keep open up to midnight."

NEW GARAGE OPENED.

The new Mystic Valley Garage was opened to the public for the first time Monday. This building is one of the handsomest and most convenient for the purpose in this vicinity. It is of concrete construction, 56 feet in width and 100 feet in length, with two wings 15x30. The floors are of cement, and at the rear of the building are two large rooms, one for washing automobiles and the other a fully equipped machine shop, for repairs of all kinds. In the front of the building is a handsome waiting room tastily furnished and also a toilet room. Opposite from this is the office and supply room where all the essentials for a proper equipping of autos can be procured. The office is furnished with mission furniture that gives a handsome setting off to the room. The firm propose to store cars, let cars, do all necessary repairs, furnish oil and gasoline and will be open day and night. The people are invited at any time to inspect the garage and all the equipment that is at the disposal of patrons.

J. H. GLIDDEN INJURED.

John H. Glidden and his wife of Beverly, former residents of Winchester, and his aged mother of Lowell, were seriously injured last Sunday by being pinned under their automobile, which capsized after skidding sideways a hundred yards at full speed while going through Wilmington.

Mr. Glidden is suffering from multiple injuries and is not expected to live. Both women were seriously injured, but are expected to recover.

The party were speeding along Main street at a fast clip. As he neared the Wilmington railroad station he saw a mud puddle in the centre of the road. He endeavored to avoid this, but struck the slime just as he had thrown over the wheel with the result that the auto went over a stone wall.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Through the office of Sewall E. Newman, Mrs. Eliza A. Martin has purchased of the Nash and Boynton trust lots No. 53 Wedgemere avenue and No. 54 Yale street, containing in all 30,250 square feet.

Through the office of Sewall E. Newman, deeds have just gone on record for the sale of lot No. 56 Yale street, Mrs. Eliza A. Martin being the purchaser and Mr. James J. Noyes the seller. The lot contains 15,250 square feet of land.

Through the office of Sewall E. Newman, deeds have gone on record in the sale of lot No. 9 on Calumet road to Mr. Frank Barr. The lot contains 14,198 feet.

We have received from Mr. Robert W. Fernald a copy of the Winchester, (N. H.) Star. We have reason to remember our namesake because of the many express packages and letters destined for us that have gone there. On one occasion about three tons of paper was shipped to our contemporary and it proved to be a costly mistake for some one.

The Winchester Boat Club held its first dance of the season on Monday night, about fifty couples being present notwithstanding the fact that many of the members were out of town. A number of guests from the Medford Boat Club attended.

Messrs. Kelley & Hawes Co's new brick fire-proof storage building on Park street is finished and is ready for the storage of furniture and valuables. This is the best equipped and safest storage building in this section and patrons are assured that their goods will receive the best of care and attention. a25,tf

HUBER—LEWIS.

William Lewis Huber, a musician in the 9th Company, C. A. C., stationed at Fort Warren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Huber of Winchester, and Miss Henrietta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Lewis of Stoneham were married last week Thursday evening at 7 o'clock by the Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight, pastor of the Congregational Church of Winchester Highlands, the ceremony being witnessed by about sixty guests at the home of the bride's parents, 21 Winthrop St. Stoneham.

The ring ceremony was used.

The bride wore a white silk muslin gown, with a head dress of lilies of the valley and carried a bouquet of white pinks. The groom wore the regulation dress uniform of the U. S. Army. The best man was Mr. Hallowell, also of the Coast Artillery Corps, and was in uniform. The bridesmaid was Miss Isabel Burrows Lewis, sister of the bride, who wore a pink muslin dress, and carried pink carnations.

A reception followed the ceremony, guests being present from Boston, Fort Warren, Lynn, Woburn, Winchester, Wakefield and Stoneham.

A collation of ice cream, cake and punch was served. Music, singing, and a general social time filled out the rest of the evening until past ten o'clock.

The parlor was handsomely decorated with flags, bunting and patriotic emblems.

The young couple received numerous presents of silverware, china, cut glass, bric a brac, linen, a beautiful quilt, pictures, a handsomely decorated wedding cake, a beautiful bouquet of peonies from Messrs. Charles H. Brown and Warren N. Oxley of the Coast Artilery service, also a handsome mixed bouquet from the best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Huber will reside in Boston.

OIL INTERFERES WITH CARS.

Sprinkling oil on Washington street has raised the deuce with the electric cars, compressed air brakes or any other brakes refusing to work, and the car glides along apparently unrammeled. The autum leaves are not in it for a minute. Three days after the oil had been put upon the street six pairs of car wheels became flat. These cost $30 a pair, so that the loss to the railroad was $180 besides the time consumed in changing the wheels. The railroad officials have notified the Selectmen of the fact and whether there will be a request for recompense is not known. A car on its way to the centre failed to take the switch on Washington street at Ridgeway, and while the motorman tried to stop the car it skidded along to Mt. Vernon street on the wrong side of the turnout. Had there been a car on the turnout there would have been a collision. A conductor says it is the smoothest kind of grease he ever met with. In Arlington before sprinkling the streets the tracks are sanded over, thus preventing the oil from getting onto the rail. As the motorman practically looses control of his car, in order to prevent possible accident the Selectmen should do the same as was done in Arlington, or else there is danger of an accident.

BROOKS ESTATE SOLD.

The old Brooks property in West Medford has been sold by the Francis Brooks estate to a syndicate who will cut it up into building lots.

There are about 50 acres, which have an assessed valuation of $227,000, and which are occupied by a mansion house, coachman's house, gardener's house, stables and great stock barns.

The old wall built by Pomp, the slave of Gorham Brooks, father of the late Francis and Peter C. and Shepard Brooks, stands on Grove street, near one part of the property. The graves of Sagamore John, chief of the Mystic Indians, and his braves are here and are marked with a monument.

BILL TO LICENSE ICE CREAM PARLORS.

A new law passed by the legislature and approved May 21, will go into effect when accepted by the citizens at an annual town meeting.

The law provides that licenses may be granted to reputable persons who on week days are retail dealers of ice cream, confectionery, soda water and fruit to keep open their places of business on Sunday.

This law does not apply to druggists and apothecaries. It goes into effect on its passage in Boston, but does not take effect in cities outside Boston until accepted by the City Council nor in towns until accepted by the voters at the annual town meeting.

Have you noticed the increase in walking of late in every community? Many attribute it to the comfort which Allen's Foot Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into your shoes, gives to the millions now using it. As Weston said, "It has real merit."

LARGEST MEAT CUTTER.

It is interesting to note that a meat cutter, which is claimed to be the largest ever made, has been recently changed from steam equipment to direct connected motor drive, because of the delays formerly experienced in getting up steam, which materially reduced the output of the grinder. The meat cutter in question, says Popular Electricity, has a 43-inch bowl and six knives, each of which has a cutting edge 18 inches long. The power is supplied by a 20-horsepower electric motor.

In the factory where this outfit is installed the capacity is 25,000 pounds of sausage a day. This cutter can handle the entire output if desired, as it has a capacity of 250 pounds in five minutes.

One of the main reasons for the change from steam to motor drive was the saving in the expense for attendance of an engineer, as well as the greater convenience when motor driven. The direct connection of the motor to the cutter eliminates belts, shafting, pulleys, etc., and effects a substantial saving in wear and tear. Most of the enterprising meat and provision dealers in Winchester use meat cutters and coffee mills driven by electric motors, for which the Edison Company furnishes the power service.

SEAL OF THE TOWN OF WINCHESTER MASS. WATERFIELD 1638 WINCHESTER 1850

WINCHESTER, MASS., May 18th, 1909.

TO THE BOARD OF SELECTMEN OF THE TOWN OF WINCHESTER:

RESPECTFULLY REPRESENT the undersigned that they are desirous of laying out and constructing a street or way over land owned by them in said Town of Winchester. Said proposed road or way running from Warren street to Wildwood street, in accordance with the plans thereof submitted herewith.

WHEREFORE they ask that said plans may be approved by your Board acting as a Board of Survey under and in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 191 of the Acts of the year 1907.

EDWARD F. JONES,
JOHN L. AYER.

IN BOARD OF SELECTMEN OF TOWN OF WINCHESTER.

May 24th, 1909

Upon the foregoing petition it is ordered that a public hearing be given at the office of said Board on Monday, the 7th day of June next, at 8 o'clock in the evening, notice of said hearing to be published in the Winchester STAR for two weeks preceeding said hearing in accordance with the requirements of the Acts of 1907, Chapter 191.

By order of the Selectmen of Winchester,
A true copy,
Attest,
G. H. LOCHMAN, Clerk.

THAT MIDNIGHT TRAIN.

"We learn," says the Stoneham Independent, "that, at the request of a number of Winchester people, the Boston & Maine authorities are to change the leaving time of the late train on the Stoneham branch from Boston, beginning with the summer schedule, June 21, from 11.25 to 11.55 p.m., so that it would be due to arrive here sometime in the wee small hours of the morning. This would greatly inconvenience Stoneham patrons, as the previous train out in the evening leaves at 9.35, considerably over two hours earlier. It is up to Stoneham people to enter a vigorous protest. If a few Winchester 'high bloods,' who are not satisfied with going to the theatre, but must also have an after-theatre supper following, are to dictate the time schedule of trains for all other places along the route, it's high time that the railroad officials should be made to stand up and take notice of the wishes of the large majority.

"It looks as if the Winchester 'high bloods' had found themselves unable to assuage their thirst before the usual 11 o'clock closing hour of licensed places and have devised this means whereby to take advantage of the privilege given a few of the leading Boston hostelries to keep open up to midnight."

NEW GARAGE OPENED.

The new Mystic Valley Garage was opened to the public for the first time Monday. This building is one of the handsomest and most convenient for the purpose in this vicinity. It is of concrete construction, 56 feet in width and 100 feet in length, with two wings 15x30. The floors are of cement, and at the rear of the building are two large rooms, one for washing automobiles and the other a fully equipped machine shop, for repairs of all kinds. In the front of the building is a handsome waiting room tastily furnished and also a toilet room. Opposite from this is the office and supply room where all the essentials for a proper equipping of autos can be procured. The office is furnished with mission furniture that gives a handsome setting off to the room. The firm propose to store cars, let cars, do all necessary repairs, furnish oil and gasoline and will be open day and night. The people are invited at any time to inspect the garage and all the equipment that is at the disposal of patrons.

J. H. GLIDDEN INJURED.

John H. Glidden and his wife of Beverly, former residents of Winchester, and his aged mother of Lowell, were seriously injured last Sunday by being pinned under their automobile, which capsized after skidding sideways a hundred yards at full speed while going through Wilmington.

Mr. Glidden is suffering from multiple injuries and is not expected to live. Both women were seriously injured, but are expected to recover.

The party were speeding along Main street at a fast clip. As he neared the Wilmington railroad station he saw a mud puddle in the centre of the road. He endeavored to avoid this, but struck the slime just as he had thrown over the wheel with the result that the auto went over a stone wall.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Through the office of Sewall E. Newman, Mrs. Eliza A. Martin has purchased of the Nash and Boynton trust lots No. 53 Wedgemere avenue and No. 54 Yale street, containing in all 30,250 square feet.

Through the office of Sewall E. Newman, deeds have just gone on record for the sale of lot No. 56 Yale street, Mrs. Eliza A. Martin being the purchaser and Mr. James J. Noyes the seller. The lot contains 15,250 square feet of land.

Through the office of Sewall E. Newman, deeds have gone on record in the sale of lot No. 9 on Calumet road to Mr. Frank Barr. The lot contains 14,198 feet.

We have received from Mr. Robert W. Fernald a copy of the Winchester, (N. H.) Star. We have reason to remember our namesake because of the many express packages and letters destined for us that have gone there. On one occasion about three tons of paper was shipped to our contemporary and it proved to be a costly mistake for some one.

The Winchester Boat Club held its first dance of the season on Monday night, about fifty couples being present notwithstanding the fact that many of the members were out of town. A number of guests from the Medford Boat Club attended.

Messrs. Kelley & Hawes Co's new brick fire-proof storage building on Park street is finished and is ready for the storage of furniture and valuables. This is the best equipped and safest storage building in this section and patrons are assured that their goods will receive the best of care and attention. s25,tf

HUBER—LEWIS.

William Lewis Huber, a musician in the 9th Company, C. A. C., stationed at Fort Warren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Huber of Winchester, and Miss Henrietta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Lewis of Stoneham were married last week Thursday evening at 7 o'clock by the Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight, pastor of the Congregational Church of Winchester Highlands, the ceremony being witnessed by about sixty guests at the home of the bride's parents, 21 Winthrop St. Stoneham.

The ring ceremony was used.

The bride wore a white silk muslin gown, with a head dress of lilies of the valley and carried a bouquet of white pinks. The groom wore the regulation dress uniform of the U. S. Army. The best man was Mr. Halloweli, also of the Coast Artillery Corps, and was in uniform. The bridesmaid was Miss Isabel Burrows Lewis, sister of the bride, who wore a pink muslin dress, and carried pink carnations.

A reception followed the ceremony, guests being present from Boston, Fort Warren, Lynn, Woburn, Winchester, Wakefield and Stoneham.

A collation of ice cream, cake and punch was served. Music, singing, and a general social time filled out the rest of the evening until past ten o'clock.

The parlor was handsomely decorated with flags, bunting and patriotic emblems.

The young couple received numerous presents of silverware, china, cut glass, bric a brac, linen, a beautiful quilt, pictures, a handsomely decorated wedding cake, a beautiful bouquet of peonies from Messrs. Charles H. Brown and Warren N. Oxley of the Coast Artilery service, also a handsome mixed bouquet from the best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Huber will reside in Boston.

OIL INTERFERES WITH CARS.

Sprinkling oil on Washington street has raised the deuce with the electric cars, compressed air brakes or any other brakes refusing to work, and the car glides along apparently unrammeled. The autumn leaves are not in it for a minute. Three days after the oil had been put upon the street six pairs of car wheels became flat. These cost $30 a pair, so that the loss to the railroad was $180 besides the time consumed in changing the wheels. The railroad officials have notified the Selectmen of the fact and whether there will be a request for recompense is not known. A car on its way to the centre failed to take the switch on Washington street at Ridgeway, and while the motorman tried to stop the car it skidded along to Mt. Vernon street on the wrong side of the turnout. Had there been a car on the turnout there would have been a collision. A conductor says it is the smoothest kind of grease he ever met with. In Arlington before sprinkling the streets the tracks are sanded over, thus preventing the oil from getting onto the rail. As the motorman practically looses control of his car, in order to prevent possible accident the Selectmen should do the same as was done in Arlington, or else there is danger of an accident.

BROOKS ESTATE SOLD.

The old Brooks property in West Medford has been sold by the Francis Brooks estate to a syndicate who will cut it up into building lots.

There are about 50 acres, which have an assessed valuation of $227,000, and which are occupied by a mansion house, coachman's house, gardener's house, stables and great stock barns.

The old wall built by Pomp, the slave of Gorham Brooks, father of the late Francis and Peter C. and Shepard Brooks, stands on Grove street, near one part of the property. The graves of Sagamore John, chief of the Mystic Indians, and his braves are here and are marked with a monument.

BILL TO LICENSE ICE CREAM PARLORS.

A new law passed by the legislature and approved May 21, will go into effect when accepted by the citizens at an annual town meeting.

The law provides that licenses may be granted to reputable persons who on week days are retail dealers of ice cream, confectionery, soda water and fruit to keep open their places of business on Sunday.

This law does not apply to druggists and apothecaries. It goes into effect on its passage in Boston, but does not take effect in cities outside Boston until accepted by the City Council nor in towns until accepted by the voters at the annual town meeting.

WESTON, Ocean-to-Ocean Walker,

Said recently: "When you feel down and out, feel there is no use living, just take your bad thoughts with you and walk them off. Before you have walked a mile things will look rosier. Just try it." Have you noticed the increase in walking of late in every community? Many attribute it to the comfort which Allen's Foot Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into your shoes, gives to the millions now using it. As Weston said, "It has real merit."

LARGEST MEAT CUTTER.

It is interesting to note that a meat cutter, which is claimed to be the largest ever made, has been recently changed from steam equipment to direct connected motor drive, because of the delays formerly experienced in getting up steam, which materially reduced the output of the grinder. The meat cutter in question, says Popular Electricity, has a 43-inch bowl and six knives, each of which has a cutting edge 18 inches long. The power is supplied by a 20-horsepower electric motor.

In the factory where this outfit is installed the capacity is 25,000 pounds of sausage a day. This cutter can handle the entire output if desired, as it has a capacity of 250 pounds in five minutes.

One of the main reasons for the change from steam to motor drive was the saving in the expense for attendance of an engineer, as well as the greater convenience when motor driven. The direct connection of the motor to the cutter eliminates belts, shafting, pulleys, etc., and effects a substantial saving in wear and tear. Most of the enterprising meat and provision dealers in Winchester use meat cutters and coffee mills driven by electric motors, for which the Edison Company furnishes the power service.

DROWNED IN MYSTIC.

Medford Boy Lost Life in Middle Lake Saturday.

The first drowning accident on Mystic Lake for a number of years occured in the Middle or Big lake on Saturday forenoon, a Medford boy losing his life after leaving his overturned canoe and attempting to swim to the nearby shore. The unfortunate youth was Morton Cole, 19 years old, son of Joseph F. Cole of Spring street, Medford.

Young Cole and a companion, Warren W. Foye, Jr., also of Medford were on the pond trying a new canoe, Cole having joined the Medford Boat Club this season. When on the big lake near the point of land below the park police house the canoe overturned. Both boys could swim, Cole being the more expert, and neither thought much of the accident. They held on to the canoe for a time and then decided to swim to the shore, which was not far distant. Foye started first, and after leaving the canoe turned around and asked Cole if he was coming. The young man answered in the affirmative and left the craft. When Foye reached the shore his companion was not to be seen, although he had not cried out or given any sign of being in distress.

Foye was taken into the carriage of Miss Grace Norris of Woburn, who had been attracted by the floating cushions on the lake as she was driving by, and taken to the Medford Boat Club, when the Winchester, Medford and Metropolitan Park police were notified.

Search was at once commenced for the body of young Cole, but owing to conflicting stories of the disaster the exact spot where the accident occured could not be definitely determined. Both Foye and the young lady located the place at different points, while passengers on the 10.45 train from Boston, who claimed to have seen the canoe capsize, stated it happened at a third point.

After searching with grappling hooks until Monday afternoon, the police used dynamite, a number of charges being exploded. The body was recovered with the grappling irons however at six-thirty, just as a heavy charge of dynimite had been laid to be exploded.

Cole was born in Winchester, his father being a carpenter here, and for many years in the employ of J. M. L. Enmam. The family moved to Medford a number of years ago. It is thought that the lad suffered an attack of heart failure during the swim to shore, as the body was recovered within fifty feet of safety in a place where it was not thought that he sank.

UNTANGLING TONEY.

"Untangling Toney," a comedy in two acts, was presented in Lyceum hall last Thursday evening by the Narcissus dramatic club and proved to be very successful. The large audience enjoyed to the utmost the successful efforts of those who took part.

The program included prelude, Narcissus, "Shine on Harvest Moon," by the chorus; two sketches by Miss Gladys Brooks, and the comedy in which the parts were taken by Amy Sanders, Pearl Smith, George Shelton, Sadie Brooks, Bessie Hunt, John Russell, Carrie Berch, Florence Lockwood and Charles Williams. Miss Maranda J. Parker was in charge of the ushers and the committee of arrangements included George Shelton, Miss Carrie Berch and John Russell. The social committee comprised S. Barksdale, Miss Sadie Brooks, P. Barksdale, Miss Annie Sanders and Lloyd Goodwin. Miss A. Spellman was pianist and the following composed the chorus: Bessie Hunt, Gladys Brooks, Florence Lockwood, S. Bellman, A. Truehart, Helen Lindsay, Pearl Smith, Annie Sanders, Rose Emerson, Charles Williams, Lloyd Goodwin, Fred Barksdale, Sadie Brooks, Carrie Berch, John Hunt, John R. Russell, S. Barksdale, E. Cummings, G. Shelton and L. Collins.

MRS. MARGARET E. BISWANGER.

Mrs. Margaret Ellen Biswanger of Halifax County, N. S., died suddenly on Saturday of heart failure while visiting her son, Adam S. Biswanger of 15 Canal street. She had been in good health during her two week's stay in Winchester and passed away while seated in a chair. She was 79 years of age.

Mrs. Biswanger was the widow of Joseph Biswanger, born in Halifax, N. S., of Samuel and Sarah (Warner) Soles. She leaves four sons and four daughters.

The funeral services were held from her son's home on Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Henry E. Hodge, pastor of the First Baptist church. The four sons of the deceased acted as pall-bearers. The burial was in Oak Grove Cemetery, Medford.

The New Boarder.

"What did you say your name was?" inquires the landlady in a hoarse whisper.

"Camp."

"Ladies and gentlemen, this is Mr. Grant."

She waves you to a vacant chair. The young lady on your right drops a half bow. The young gentleman to your left drops a pork chop. Thus, amid covert sneers, supercilious glances and general awkwardness, you take your place among an alien people.

"A hash house introduction always reminds me of a minstrel show," declares the humorous boarder. "Be seated, gentlemen; know each other and be acquainted."

Whereat you must smile.

"Chase the cow this way," continues the humorous boarder in time honored reference to the milk pitcher, whereat you must guffaw.

"You are always master of ceremonies," says a young lady boarder to the humorous one. "As for me, I'm too tim-

"Why are you so timid?"

"Oh, I'm so little!"

"Sweet goods come in small packages."

"So does poison."

Fine old repartee! After dinner you ascend to your hall bedroom and wonder if you will ever be at home in this company. But you know you will. Within a month you will be lending money to the humorous boarder and perhaps have a love affair started.—Puck.

Not a Success.

The manager of the subscription book department was telling of some of his experiences. "The funniest case I remember," he said, "was that of an applicant for a job at book canvassing from whom I expected great things. He made a careful study of the literature we supplied him with and was very enthusiastic. Judge of my surprise when the first morning he went out back he came and handed in his resignation.

"'But you should not be so easily discouraged,' I told him. 'Few make a success at the start, and you acknowledge that you went into only two places.'

"'Only two,' he said lugubriously. 'One was a real estate agent, who persuaded me to sign a contract for two lots in Fizzlehurst, and the other was a tailor, who sold me a suit of clothes I didn't want.' And, shaking his head mournfully, he mumbled 'Good day' and went out."—Lippincott's.

In the Hands of the Law.

An impecunious young lawyer recently received the following letter from a tailor to whom he was indebted:

Dear Sir—Kindly advise me by return mail when I may expect a remittance from you in settlement of my account. Yours truly, J. SNIPPEM.

The follower of Blackstone immediately replied:

Dear Sir—I have your request for advice of a recent date and beg leave to say that, not having received any retainer from you, I cannot act in the premises. Upon receipt of your check for $50 I shall be very glad to look the matter up for you and to acquaint you with the results of my investigations. I am, sir, with great respect, your most obedient servant, BARCLAY B. COKE.

—Success Magazine.

Redundant Particulars.

Cleveland people consider the name of their town sufficient as an address without the addition of Ohio, and one protesting against the use of the name of the state tells a story to illustrate the folly of redundant particulars. "It reminds me," he said, "of the fussy Englishman who went up to St. Peter and said, 'I'm from London.' And then, for fear the saint might mix him up with somebody else, he added, 'London, England, you know.' That riled the good old gatekeeper. 'From London, England, eh?' he said. 'Well, Mr. Man from London, England, you're knocking at the wrong door. Your new address is Sheol, Brimstone county, Dominion of Lucifer!'"—Exchange.

The Gnu in the Zoo.

They've got a gnu in the zoo. It's a new gnu. That is to say, no one ever knew it there before. When it arrived it had very little coat. Consequently it was in a state of gnudity; hence, this new ditty we are composing on the subject. But now it is no longer gnude. That new gnu knew something and grew a new coat for the cold weather. If some people knew what that new Nubian gnu knew, they would keep their hair on.—London Scraps.

Importance of Vowels.

Do you fully realize the importance of the vowel "e" in English? The inscription, "Prsrvyprfctmnvrkpthsprcptstn," over the Decalogue in an English country church puzzled people for 200 years. Pepper it properly with "e's" and you may read, "Preserve, ye perfect men; ever keep these precepts ten." Easy, isn't it?—Boston Globe.

Modest Modern Man.

Whatever may be said of the modern man, he cannot be said to be lacking in modesty. While the ancients did their utmost to prove that they issued from the gods, we do our best to demonstrate that we have descended from monkeys.—Paris Journal.

Merely Local.

Young Thomas, afflicted with a green apple pain in his midst, thus explained his condition to his mother: "Mother, I've got an awful bad pain right in the middle of my stomach, but the rest of me feels fine!"—Lippincott's.

In this world one must be a little too kind to be kind enough.—Marivaux.

Cleveland's Greediness For Work.

President Cleveland was often at his desk in the White House until 3 o'clock in the morning and up again at 9. I fell into the way of working until about 1 o'clock in the morning, and because of the oppressive heat I kept the door of my room wide open. Often during the hours around midnight I would step into the hall in hope of getting a stray breath of air. Once it so happened that as I looked across the hall to the half open door turned toward mine I saw upon its polished surface the reflection of the hand of a man writing with a patience and an industry that amazed me. I knew that the president was at his desk. I used to ask the watchman when I went to my task in the morning at what hour the president had knocked off work the preceding night. I found that it was generally about 3 o'clock in the morning, although sometimes when he had finished some severe task that he had set himself he would stop at 2 o'clock. I usually stopped work at 1 o'clock, but I did once or twice hang on until 2 in the hope that I might, if only for once, show an endurance equal to that of the man next door, whose greediness for work had become proverbial.—George F. Parker in McClure's.

New York's Lobster Palaces.

Nobody of distinction of appetite goes to a lobster palace to eat. One goes there in gaudy mood or when every other place is filled or closed or with the kind of man who thinks gayety means overdressed women, bedlamoned men, waiters rushing with champagne as if they had the fire buckets and a caterwauling orchestra. At midnight the din and the excitement incline a sedate man to ask himself whether he is not in a riot. If you have a lobster digestion, you don't hear the din or feel the maelstrom of omnibuses, waiters, head waiters and patrons swirling about you. A man who is eating lobster has to concentrate all his faculties, mental, physical, moral and intellectual, on the ordeal. You have heard no doubt of the young lady who was asked over her first lobster how she liked it. "I think," she declared, "it's perfectly delicious if there weren't so many large bones in it. They look like celluloid, don't they?"—Richard Duffy in Putnam's.

He Was a Poor Guesser.

He was a new conductor and anxious to expedite matters. When he saw a woman holding a two dollar bill in her hand he dispensed with the customary exhortation to pay her fare and began to count out change. There had been a drain on his pockets throughout the trip, and he was obliged to interview half the passengers in the car before he finally secured the desired small coin. Finally the transaction was completed, and the conductor returned to the woman.

"Fare?" he said.

The woman fished a nickel from her pocketbook. Then she looked at the two dollar bill.

"Dear me!" she said. "How careless I am! I forgot I had that money in my hand. Somebody might have stolen it."

"Chump!" growled the conductor.

The woman thought he meant her, but he didn't. He was cursing his own stupidity.—New York Globe

French Peasant Women Hard Workers.

The French peasant woman, Bretonne or otherwise, works hard as any man. It makes one sad to see the women working in the fields, digging and delving, carrying heavy burdens, driving the cattle, sometimes attending to the machinery employed on the farms. One wonders whether husbands and fathers appreciate it all, especially when you hear some of the ballads, for ballads are supposed to reveal the soul of a people. I heard one the other day of which the refrain is as follows:

Dear is my good wife Jeanne,
Her death I should deplore,
But dearer are my beaves,
Their loss would grieve me more!

—From Plougastel (France) Letter to New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Mennonites.

The Mennonites grew out of four sects of Dutch, Flemish and German Baptists. They derive their name from Menno Simons, a Catholic priest who became a leader of the anabaptists in about 1537. Simons was born in 1492 and died in 1537. His "True Christian Belief" was published three years before his death. Following the death of the leading spirit the sect underwent divisions and changes of creed.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Washington's Rebuke.

"Washington," said a senator, "was not a cynic, yet he sometimes said things so wretchedly true that they had a cynical note. Thus, rebuking a certain type of churchgoer, he once wrote:

"'The church's feasts and fasts are marvelously well kept up. The rich keep the feasts and the poor the fasts.'"

A Candid Critic.

Author—Have you read my new book?

Friend—Yes.

"What do you think of it?"

"Well, to be candid with you, I think the covers are too far apart."—Chicago News.

Reciprocity.

"Do you expect your constituents to believe all you tell them?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum, "and in return they must not expect me to tell them all I believe."—Washington Star.

If a man empties his purse into his head no one can take it from him.—Franklin.

Early Italian Surgery.

Benvenuto Cellini (1500-1571) tells of early Italian surgery. He had got a bit of chipped steel in his eye, "so far into the pupil that it was impossible to get it out, so that I was in very great danger of losing that eye. But the surgeon came to the rescue with the pigeons. The surgeon, making me lie upon my back, with a little knife opened a vein in each of their wings, so that the blood ran into my eye, and I was thereby greatly relieved. In the space of two days the bit of steel issued from my eye, and I found that I had received considerable ease and in a great measure recovered my sight."

Live and Learn.

Among the words given out for analysis recently by a district school teacher in Pennsylvania was "banknote." The instructor's astonishment may be imagined when one male pupil turned in the following unique paper:

"Bank-note is a compound, primitive word, composed of 'bank' and 'note.' 'Bank' is a simple word, meaning the side of a stream; 'note,' to set down. 'Bank-note,' to set down by the side of a stream."—Lippincott's.

A Large Toast.

A prominent man, unexpectedly invited to an entertainment, found himself called on for toasts among others. He was unprepared; but, being a quick thinker, he arose and said, "A toast to the toast that was toasted by the toaster who had toasted all the toasts that were ever toasted by a toaster."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Sewage Question.

The fact that Mystic Valley sewage has flowed into Black Ball pond and that two 24-inch overflow pipes from catch-basins connected with the sewer pipes have been laid to the water's edge is, we think, a serious matter. With the first heavy downpour of rain this sewage will undoubtedly again overflow into the pond. This question should not be glossed over.

The sewage should not be allowed to enter the pond for any reason whatsoever, no matter whether an enlargement of the sewer is necessary or not. These overflow pipes should be got rid of as soon as possible, as they have been put there for a purpose, and that is to discharge the surplus sewage into Blackball Pond. They are a menace.

The local Board of Health have a communication in another column on this matter, to which we call attention.

ROUTE OF NEW ELECTRIC ROAD.

The Boston, Lowell & Lawrence Electric Railroad Co. filed its two plans of location with the Railroad Commissioners last Saturday.

One route only affects Winchester. This comes down the westerly side of Cambridge street, crosses under it by a tunnel just south of Everett avenue, and runs across private lands to Winter pond, which is crossed by a wooden trestle, and thence to the Woburn line just south of the Edison Co's power house. During its route in Winchester all streets are passed under by tunnel.

The other route is through Arlington, Lexington, etc. A hearing has been set for Monday, June 14th at the Board's office, 20 Beacon street, Boston.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Two ladies and their escorts meeting in the Fells the first of the week, one of them remarked "Well, it seems to me that you wear a pretty good dress in your pilgrimages through the woods." She replied, "Perhaps I do, but in order to wear it at all, it is necessary to do so where no one will see it. A short time ago while walking along the street, a shower of the poisonous spraying used on the shade trees fell onto my dress completely ruining it." The other lady then said: "You have my sympathy. Late in the winter I attended a closing dancing party in Waterfield Hall and for the occasion wore for the first time a dress just made. Imagine my feelings when I got home to find the bottom of the dress covered with some kind of oil taken from the floor of that hall. I tried to take the stain out but was not able to do so, neither was a tailor who makes a specialty of that kind of work. The dress is ruined and valueless.

Two liquor raids were made in town on Monday night, one at the house of Michael Mawn on Winchester Park street and the other at the house of Michael Hearn on Hill street. Nothing was found at either place.

The exercises on Memorial Day were carried out according to the program printed in last week's STAR. The day was perfect. The oration by Rev. Edwin Bradford Robinson in the Town Hall in the evening was one of the best in recent years, a fact that caused much pleasure to the many friends of Rev. Mr. Robinson. The singing by the school children under the direction of Mr. Brown, was excellent and proved to be a feature that will linger in the memory of the large audience for some time to come.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Edward L. Garcelon a former postmaster of Winchester was drowned at Yarmouthport Tuesday, in the millpond at Weir village about two miles from Yarmouthport Center. Mr. Garcelon lived in Boston, being engaged in the real estate business on School street. He was a son of the late ex-Governor Garcelon of Maine, and while postmaster here was much liked.

Rev. C. A. S. Dwight, Ph. D., will lecture this Friday night at the Baptist Church at Lowell on "Turkey." The lecture will be illustrated with the stereopticon.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Gerlach entertained the Class of 1883 of the Luther V. Bell School of Somerville at their home on Everett avenue Monday afternoon and evening. The affair was the 26th annual reunion of the Class. During the afternoon the guests enjoyed canoeing and motor boating on the Mystic lakes, together with automoble rides about the town and west side hills. Supper was served by a caterer on the lawn adjoined the house, and in the evening a musical program was given by a number of the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Fred N. Kerr of Lakeview road were the only Winchester members of the class outside of the Gerlach's.

An interesting incident in connection with the Bancroft—Nickerson wedding of Tuesday was that the day was also the 23rd anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. O. en C. Sanborn, and many of the guests at this week's ceremony were also present when Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn were married. In this connection it was an especially happy anniversary for the Sanborns, who held an informal reception at their home, "Aigremont," during the evening receiving some forty guests from the Bancroft—Nickerson wedding. Refreshments and music were enjoyed, together with a vaudeville entertainment given by Boston artists.

From present indications the local High school boys will not put a crew out for the Lawson Trophy this year in the Inter-Scholastic canoe race. But little interest is taken in the event among the boys at the school and not enough candidates have appeared to make up a crew. When this trophy was donated by Mr. Lawson he undoubtedly had in view the exceptional advantages enjoyed by the Winchester boys for development in water sports, and desired to create and stimulate their interest in aquatics. The local boys have never won the race during the years it has been held, although it has always been in Winchester and paddling in it entailed no inconvenience of transportation, etc. That they will not enter at all this year is to be regreted.

Mr. Frank F. Flowers and Miss Kathryn Smitherman were united in marriage Tuesday evening at the parochial residence, Rev. Walter J. Roche officiating. The bride was prettily gowned in white net over white liberty satin and carried brides roses. Miss Mary A. Smitherman, her sister, was bridesmaid. Her gown was of pale blue pongee silk and she carried a large bunch of lillies of the valley. Mr. Samuel S. Smitherman, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Suter and Rev. and Mrs. Addison Mills have gone for a couple of weeks to Maine to enjoy the fishing.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It is nearing the time for that June town meeting and yet nothing is heard from the grade crossing commission. It should not be difficult for the Selectmen to find out what delays the report so, but you would think this commission was located at the North pole, it appears to be so inaccessable to us. Undoubtedly all the other parties in interest know why, but the party with the greatest interest doesn't seem to have "kick" enough to find out where it stands. If some prominent citizen should happen to get ground up at this crossing now, there would be action taken regarding this commission that would be pretty drastic. It is playing with us.

Why not raise the rest of the money required for the 4th of July celebration by an appropriation at the coming town meeting. It would cost all of those who subscribe now less and all others should be willing to be taxed five cents on each thousand dollars to celebrate the national holiday. A few have to do all of the work of the celebration and they should not be forced to find the money also. About $250.00 more would be enough.

If the engineer of the Metropolitan Water and Sewer Board has opened the sewer into the pond he should be taken to court, but it would certainly be surprising if such action has been taken. They have tried to unload this Mystic Valley sewer upon us for many years, but never have been quite smart enough. The North Metropolitan Sewer was designed to serve its territory for thirty years and has been outgrown in just half the time, but as the State Board of Health made the estimate, that is not surprising. When this district is called upon to build another sewer, as it will be soon on account of this blundering, it should ask some questions.

The High School house lot will look like something after the grading is completed and it will be a decided improvement over the way it was left in order to save an old tree, which obligingly died out after a hundred dollars or more expense on its account.

If the committee on the Linden street house had authority to report upon the stable it could make an interesting report. That was one of our poor jobs.

An out of town man who has been a prosperous farmer all his life, calls frequently as he waits for a car in the centre for our print butter. He knows butter because he has made and sold it. His verdict of the Seneca Brand of VERMONT CREAMERY Butter in prints is as fine a creamery butter as he has tasted. The price he has been paying and the modest price we ask (32cts. the pound) almost made him shed tears. There is a trifle of a reason behind these little stories.

You may like Sage Cheese, Young America, or a mild cheese. You will find a choice cut at the shop for 18cts. the pound. THE PRICE, THE TASTE, THE PURSE. Think it over. ## W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The last meeting of the local Union before the summer vacation will be held Friday, June 11, at 3 p. m. in the Congregational Church vestry. The public is cordially invited.

June 17, Miss Hill, resident worker at the Frances E. Willard Settlement, of Chamber street, Boston, is to bring a party of the neighborhood young people to a picnic on the shore of the pond, as guests of the local union, Mrs. Kelley and Mrs. Hamilton being in charge. Members of the Union are asked to assist in entertaining the visitors.

The recent discussions of the liquor question in the magazines have aroused much interest and it is noteworthy how the commencement essays reflect the popular sentiment, very many of them discussing some phase of the problem.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union department of Purity has been very active in protesting against the production of some of the questionable plays that have been conspicuous on the New York stage the past season and is congratulating itself in being a factor in their suppression in several instances.

At the Eastern Division meet of the A. C. A. at Providence, the Medford Boat Club won but seven points this year. They finished second in the war canoe race, about seven lengths behind the Dedham crew which won. The water was extremely rough, and one of Medford's fours tipped over during its race, one of the boys narrowly escaping drowning.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The success of "The Geisha" was to be expected. This bright and merry musical comedy begins its third week at the Castle Square on Monday, and there is every indication that there will be few seats to spare at any performance afternoon or evening.

From the opening chorus it is a constant succession of the melodies, and whether Miss Young be singing Chon Kina, Louise Le Baron, The Jewel of Asia, Mr. Friebus Hey Diddle Diddle or Mr. Meek Chee Wee, the audience is in the seventh heaven of delight.

Included in the cast are Mr. Craig, Bert and Wilfred Young, William Evarts, Mabel Colcord, Gertrude Binley and the entire sixty members of the John Craig Stock Company.

NEGLECT AND DISHONESTY.

An Inefficient Administration of the Water Register's Department Has Cost New York City Millions.

That the city has for years lost millions of dollars through failure to collect full water charges and that lack of system in the water register's department for years placed a premium on dishonesty and inefficiency are allegations made in a report just completed by the bureau of municipal research. The report is based on a thorough inspection of the books and records of the department and a careful inquiry made with the co-operation of the present register, M. C. Padden.

Other statements contained in the report are that practically no effort was made to keep track of meters, that hundreds of meters had been worthless for years, that arbitrary reductions in charges were made by subordinates in the register's office, that thousands of persons who were paying $6 or $10 a year for water were using many times that much a month and that bills paid by the city for private interests were allowed to go on for years uncollected, large amounts being invested in this manner. There is a strong suggestion throughout the report that a huge graft system at one time flourished in the department and that clerks and other subordinates reaped a golden harvest.

"It has been stated," says the report, "both in the department and out that a considerable number of former employees of the department are regularly employed in going about from user to user making a business of impairing meters. A pointer standing at 90,000 need be removed but one point to cancel a water charge of $90.

"Of 6,028 meter records analyzed for the period from Jan. 1, 1906, to Sept. 30, 1907, a total of 2,919, or 48 per cent, were shown to have been in a condition of neglect for a greater period than two months after being first reported, the average period of neglect being 9.8 months, some of them continuing in this condition for years."

Addresses are given where meters have not been read for nine and ten years. At 261 Tenth avenue, for instance, where ten stalls are in use, there has been no reading of the meter since March, 1905.

"During the last two years," says the report, "the average bills were stated by the water register to have amounted to $1,800,000 and that these had been settled for about $900,000. A large part of the $900,000 stated to have been lost could have been saved by more effective administration. By permitting such conditions to exist the city has not only been deprived of revenue, but has maintained a system which has put a very large premium on inefficiency and dishonesty."—New York Herald.

BLUNDERING BOOKKEEPING.

Muddled Accounting Prevents Accurate Comparison Between Municipal and Private Plants.

In the lack of separation between the public service properties and other operations municipalities appear as the chief offenders. The greatest criticism which must be offered against the municipal methods was the merging of public service accounts with those of the city. Revenues which should be credited to the treasury of the utility were turned into the general fund of the city, while the plant's operating expenses were generally paid out of the same city fund, showing no record other than the general entries "cash paid."

While the public plants often received no credit for hydrant service or water for sprinkling service or electric current for street arcs or incandescents, the city paid the interest on the construction bonds, reasoning that this is a fair compensation for the service received. This may be true, but it cannot be proved from the accounts or records of the property.

The accounts of the municipally owned utility should be affected no more by the transactions in the municipal funds than should the accounts of the private utility reflect the activities of the shareholders. In many cities, especially the smaller ones, the inspection of the distribution system is a part of the duties of the street superintendent or marshal. Meters are read and often inspected by the same city officials at times when not engaged in other municipal duties, but the public service property is not charged with any proportion of their expenses. The city clerk and his assistants generally furnish, without additional cost, much of the service which is reported by private plants under the head of administrative or general expense.

Until a separation of accounts between the two departments is made a comparison with private enterprise to determine relative efficiency is impossible.—Second Annual Report of Railroad Commission of Wisconsin.

Winnipeg's Costly Plant.

The agitation for the public ownership of public utilities as a settled policy has been making such progress through western Canada in the past few years that the sudden revelations that the work thus far done on Winnipeg's high power plant has been done at a huge excess over private estimates have caused a sensation. The city council has asked the county court to investigate the entire situation and ascertain why it has cost the city $210,000 to acquire what two responsible firms offered to do for $129,000.—Wall Street Journal.

Discontent is the lever and municipal ownership the fulcrum by which the agitator is striving to overturn the social order.

A REAL MONTE CRISTO

The Tragic Career of Picaud, a Cobbler of Paris.

HIS RISE TO GREAT WEALTH.

Thrown Into Jail by Secret Enemies, He Was Left a Fortune by a Fellow Prisoner—Released, His Scheme of Vengeance Brought Him Death.

That romantic creation of the brain of Alexandre Dumas, "The Count of Monte Cristo," had a counterpart in real life in France in the last century This is the tragic story:

In 1807, when Napoleon was at the height of his power, Francois Picaud was a sturdy young journeyman cobbler of Paris, full of health and animal spirits and happy in the love of Marguerite Vigoureux, a young girl of his own station in life. On the eve of his marriage hidden enemies denounced him to the imperial government as a spy. He was cast into prison, where he remained, forgotten by the world, for seven years.

Among his fellow prisoners was a wealthy Milanese priest, who treated him like a son and bequeathed to him 7,000,000 francs on deposit in the Bank of Amsterdam. Furthermore, this ecclesiastic told Picaud the secret of a hiding place in Italy where were concealed jewels to the value of 1,200,000 francs and specie amounting to three millions.

When the empire was overthrown in 1814 Picaud was one of a vast number of political prisoners throughout France who were given their freedom. He proceeded to gather the priest's treasure and to plan vengeance upon his enemies. Who they were he did not know.

Disguised as an Italian priest, he succeeded by bribing the least guilty of the conspirators and discovering the entire story of his undoing. The leader in the plot he learned was one Loupain, who had married Marguerite Vigoureux, prospered and become the proprietor of one of the handsomest cafes in Paris.

Picaud went to the capital and under a suitable disguise obtained work as a waiter in Loupain's establishment. Fellow servants there were Guilhem Solari and Gervais Chaubard, who, with Loupain, had denounced Picaud in 1807. The pretended waiter was not long in bringing his vengeance to a consummation. Chaubard was the first victim of his wrath. His body, pierced by a knife, was found on one of the bridges over the Seine. Loupain was disgraced, reduced to penury and finally stabbed to death in the Tuileries gardens. Solari was poisoned and died in frightful convulsions.

But speedy retribution overtook the implacable avenger. One night Picaud was seized, bound and borne to an abandoned quarry. In the darkness a terrible voice said:

"Picaud, what name are you passing under now? Are you still the priest Baldini or the waiter Prosper? You wished for revenge. You have sold yourself to the powers of hell. Ten years you have given to the pursuit of three wretches you should have spared. Me you dragged down to perdition. The diamond by which you bribed me was my destruction. I killed him who cheated me. I was arrested, condemned to the galleys and escaped only after years of torture. My one thought has been vengeance on the priest Baldini. You are in my power. Do you know me? I am Antoine Allut. How much will you pay for bread and water?"

"I have no money," groaned Picaud.

"You have sixteen millions. These are my conditions: I will give you something to eat twice a day, but for each meal you must pay me 25,000 francs."

However, the cupidity of the prisoner proved stronger than his hunger. He underwent terrible suffering without any signs of yielding until his captor, goaded to fury at the prolonged obstinacy, threw himself upon Picaud and stabbed him to death.—Bookman.

A Thackeray Story.

A correspondent of London Notes and Queries contributes this anecdote of Thackeray:

Thackeray once desired to succeed Cardwell as M. P. for the city of Oxford and when returning from his canvass said: "What do you think, Cardwell! Not one of your constituents ever heard of me and my writings." He prefaced "constituents" with a strongish adjective.

Strange, if true. They must have been starving in the midst of plenty.

A Straight Tip.

Johnnie (to new visitor)—So you ar, my grandma, are you? Grandmother—Yes, Johnnie. I'm your grandma on your father's side. Johnnie—Well, you're on the wrong side, you'll find out!—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Horrible.

"That was an awful disaster. There was only one survivor. Isn't that terrible?"

"Fearful. What a bore he'll be!"—Cleveland Leader.

Disenchanted.

"Do you believe in the superhuman?"

"I used to, but I don't any more."

"Why?"

"I married him."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A PLAGUE OF ANTS.

The Vicious Insects Are a Nuisance In Southwestern Africa.

"Ants—white, black and yellow—are a great nuisance in Nigeria," says Charles Partridge in "Cross River Natives." "They march from place to place in military formation. Some carry their young, others bear food, and scouts and a fighting escort are always on duty. Their column looks like a long black snake curving along the ground.

"They leave behind them a well formed road about four inches broad and half an inch deep, worn smooth by the tread of the countless throng.

"They do not bite when the sun is high, but woe betide the hapless wight who comes in their way at other times! While traveling through the bush you occasionally find them in possession of a section of the road. Perhaps you are in the midst of them before you discover the presence of your small but fierce adversary. The first man bitten yells out something meaning, "Ware ants!" and we all hurry forward, stamping vigorously. Those of us upon whom the little warriors have fastened tear off our clothes and nip the foes to death. My little black horse always wanted to turn back when he came to a column of ants. My dog Bob, a native, used to dance like a bear on hot bricks when the driver ants got between his paws and had to be held down while they were plucked out.

"One night I suddenly awoke with a feeling that something was amiss. All the household pets, such as snakes, lizards, rats, toads, centipeds and spiders, seemed to be bestirring themselves restlessly. No sooner had my foot touched the ground than I knew what it was, for a fierce bite told me that the driver ants were upon us.

"On lighting a candle I found a column marching across the floor and a whole regiment attacking my bed. I roused the assistant district commissioner, and eventually, using wisps of burning paper, we drove out the enemy. Fire or hot ashes are the best means to use for expelling them."

A HOTEL DINNER.

The Husband Ordered It, and His Wife Criticised It.

On the midnight train ride from town, where he and his wife had been entertaining one of his best patients at dinner and the theater, the suburban doctor spoke bitterly:

"What a dinner! And it cost $15. The cooking in these big hotels is atrocious. They smear sauces over everything. I suppose it is to hide poor materials."

"It isn't the fault of the cooking that our dinner was a failure. It was its selection that doomed it."

"What was the matter with the selection?"

"You should not have done the ordering. You have your meals chosen for you almost every day in the year. It is the women of people in our circumstances who ought to arrange the menus at restaurants. Look what you ordered! Bisque of lobster, a soup with a body of thick white sauce. Sweetbreads—cooked, as usual, with a cream dressing. Virginia ham with champagne sauce—a brown sauce as thick as molasses. Then for dessert you took a chance on pudding Reine Victoria—candied fruit and lady fingers swimming in soft custard."

"Well, how is a fellow to know? Lobster soup, sweetbreads, Virginia ham and pudding Reine Victoria—it sounds fine."

"But a woman knows that it is a wretched combination of splendid dishes. It is the woman's dull duty to choose menus for 365 days in the year. She learns a good deal about selection. Yet when a sum of money, equal to a week's food expenses, is to be squandered on one dinner at a hotel it is the man who seizes the menu and tries to look capable. He makes a failure frequently, as you did tonight. It would have been a pleasure for me to order a fifteen dollar dinner—a change from manipulating dinner for four on $1. But men feel too important in a restaurant to submit the menu to their wives for assistance."—Exchange.

BOSTON LETTER

District Attorney Hill Making Great Record

WAITING FOR TARIFF BILL

Massachusetts Manufacturers Will Boom Business When It Is Enacted —Hibbard May Run Again for Mayor of Boston

District Attorney Arthur D. Hill of Suffolk county is proving the right man in the right place. When he was appointed to succeed the late John B. Moran there was a general feeling that the office of the district attorney would be found wide-awake as long as he remained in it. He has already secured two convictions against prominent men accused of swindling the city of Boston, and there are a good many other cases still pending which he proposes to try in the near future. He has had very much better success than John B. Moran, and the other men whose cases are soon to come to trial are trembling in their boots.

When he entered the office, he was confronted by a peculiar situation. There is strong circumstantial evidence that for some years certain firms of lawyers have added to their legitimate work the business of "fixing" juries. In several cases where the evidence was overwhelming against certain men the jury was unable to agree. The thing became so flagrant and bold that some of the newspapers made very plain statements in regard to it.

In addition to this, District Attorney Hill has found it quite as necessary to secure good juries and to guard them while deliberating over cases, as it was to properly prepare and present to the court his evidence. The two convictions which he has recently secured indicate that he has gotten at the root of the trouble. It is alleged that some firms of lawyers maintained in addition to a corps of lawyers, a corps of "jury fixers" as well, and that they have found it an immensely profitable business.

There is very little doubt that in some cases the inability of John B. Moran to convict some of the people accused, who were tried during his term of office, was due in part at least to this system of "jury fixing." Mr. Hill has located the trouble and found a remedy. He is making an unusually efficient and successful district attorney and if he keeps on in the same line on which he has started he will win a name for himself equal to that of any man who has filled the position.

Waiting For the Tariff Bill

There is great interest all over the state in the pending tariff legislation at Washington and an earnest desire that the work of perfecting the tariff bill shall be completed at an early period. From indications gathered from every part of the commonwealth it is apparent that every line of business is ready to take a boom. The uncertainty in regard to the tariff schedules is the only thing which is holding the manufacturers back at the present moment.

It is perfectly natural that the people of this state should desire its products to be well protected, and perhaps it is equally natural that they should desire to get their raw material duty-free. Some of the western congressmen are fond of saying that New England wants protection for its manufactures and free trade in everything they buy, but of course tariff bills are not made up that way. They are the result of a compromise, and if Massachusetts expects protection on her manufactured goods, those from whom she buys her raw materials, which are the manufactured goods of some other section, will expect protection also.

It is perfectly natural that it should be so, looking at it impartially. There would seem to be no more reason for protecting New England manufactures than there is for protecting the manufactures of other sections of the country. One man's finished product is another man's raw material, but under a scientific tariff plan one is as much entitled to protection as the other. When the tariff bill is completed, it is quite probable that Massachusetts will be as well pleased with it as with that of any other tariff bill enacted in recent years.

Hibbard and Another Term?

There are indications that Mayor Hibbard would not refuse a renomination this fall. He has not said definitely what his plans may be, but those who claim to know his mind believe he will be the candidate of the Good Government association if invited to do so. He has now been nearly a year and a half in office, and it must be said in all fairness, even by those who oppose his non-partisanship, that he has saved the city a considerable amount of money. Nevertheless, among the workers of the Republican party who have expected some reward for their efforts in assisting to elect him, there is strong opposition. It is quite likely, however, that a very large element of the rank and file of the Republican voters would not only favor his nomination but also his re-election.

Even his friends do not claim that he has been infallible in his administration of the city, but his enemies concede that he has made an honest effort to give the city an economical government and clean up the departments so far as he was able and put them on a strictly business basis. He has succeeded fairly well and the improvement over the administration of John F. Fitzgerald has been most marked.

There is no doubt that ex-Mayor Fitzgerald will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination. Up to the present time there is no substantial opposition to this program. It is true, however, that a very large body of the Democratic voters has seen enough of Fitzgerald and would very strongly favor any other Democrat who might enter the field.

Chairman James Donovan of the Democratic city committee is believed to look with disfavor upon the candidacy of Fitzgerald. He is an astute politician and if he should back some other Democrat for the nomination it would go hard with the ex-mayor.

Mr. Hibbard would have a tremendous fight to defeat a Democrat. He would stand a better chance of defeating Fitzgerald than most any Democrat who might be named, although the city is normally from 15,000 to 25,000 Democratic. There is a great deal of independent voting at city elections, however.

Telephone Protection

A SUBSCRIBER'S STORY—

As told to an official of the Traffic Dept.

ABOUT one o'clock this morning I accidentally overturned the telephone, which stood on a small table by my bedside, and it fell to the floor. As I picked it up I heard the operator say: "Number?" I explained what had happened, and apologized for having troubled him. He replied in an exceedingly pleasant tone of voice: "It's all right—no trouble at all, madam." I wish you would express to him my appreciation of his courtesy. I assure you I resumed my slumber with a new sense of security at the thought that someone was so near in case of need.

SONDER CLASS TROPHY.

The making of the trophy for the International Sonder class boats has been assigned to Gustave Rogers of Marblehead, who lived for a time at Winchester and who was the Handicraft Society's instructor in metal working.

President Taft is the donor of this trophy, through the Eastern Yacht Club under whose auspices the races will be held early next September. Two years ago similar races took place and the trophy was then given by President Roosevelt.

In making their choice of a trophy cup, the Regatta Committee has this year departed from the usual course of ordering a cup from one of the commercial silversmith concerns. They invited sketches from artist craftsmen. Mr. Rogers submitted three sketches, one of which the Committee chose on account of its artistic merit. The preliminary design shows a large bowl about sixteen inches across, massive and rich in appearance. The ornamentation on either side consists of eagles with outspread wings, very decorative and simply treated, while over the handles are female figures.

Mr. Rogers is an independent craftsman working all the year in a little old-fashioned house at Marblehead, Mass., within a stone-throw of the harbor. He is a director and member of the council of the Society of Arts and Crafts, Boston. He is a well known teacher, having taught classes in arts and crafts at the Byrdcliffe, N. Y., Summer School, Worcester Art Museum, the Winchester Handicraft Society, and at Marblehead.

Another of Mr. Rogers' recent trophy cups is to be sailed for this summer by the members of the Boston Yacht Club in the knockabout twenty-one-footers. In this trophy there is a large round silver bowl supported by a wave through which a dolphin is plunging. While there might be a suggestion of imitating the Japanese in placing the bowl as if it was carried along by a billow, the American artist is undoubtedly the first to conceive a glistening silver bubble carried on the crest of a breaking wave.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Next week will unquestionably be the biggest of the year at Keith's Theatre, for it will mark the first appearance here in a number of years of Vesta Tilley, the undisputed queen of the London music halls and the highest priced vaudeville artist ever brought to this country. Mr. Keith has been paying her $3,150 for every week she has been on his circuit and that it has been a profitable venture, even at this enormous figure, is shown by the fact that he would keep her longer were she not compelled to return to London to fulfill her contracts there. Miss Tilley has for a long time held a unique place as a male impersonator. Since she first made her appearance there have been hundreds of imitators, some of them good, some of them indifferent—but all have had their day and been forgotten. Miss Tilley on the contrary by her consumate art has increased her popularity and has always been able to give something new. Besides her striking costumes, she has been making a hit with her long list of songs, every one of which has been in itself a feature and created an endless amount of comment. One of her best is called "That's a Time a Fellow Wants His Ma."

FEATS OF STRENGTH.

A Blacksmith Who Fairly Outdid Augustus the Strong.

Not all the world's strong men have been performers on the public stage. Indeed, instances might be multiplied in which the feats of professionals have been equaled or excelled.

Charles Louvier, a carpenter of Paris, found it child's play to roll a tin basin between his fingers into a cylinder. On one occasion he carried off a soldier on guard who had gone to sleep in the sentry box and deposited both the box and the soldier on a low churchyard wall near by.

Another man who sometimes found his great strength a source of amusement was a Danish locksmith, Knut Knudson. While standing in a window on the ground floor he lifted with one hand half a bullock from the shoulder of a butcher who was toiling past with his load.

Augustus the Strong, the elector of Saxony, once entered a blacksmith's shop to have his horse shod. To show his suit how strong he was he picked up several horseshoes and broke one after the other, asking the blacksmith as he did so if he had no better. When it came to paying the bill the elector threw a silver piece on the anvil. It was a very thick coin. The blacksmith took it up and broke it in half, saying, "Pardon me, but I have given you a good horseshoe, and I expect a good coin in return." Another piece was offered him. He broke that and five or six others. Then the humiliated elector handed him a louis d'or, saying, "The others were probably made of bad metal, but this gold piece is good, I hope."

An Italian, Luigi Bertini of Milan, performed a similar feat. Besides horseshoes, he broke nails a finger thick.

The Duke of Grammont, the minister of Napoleon III, frequently astonished the women at court by bending a twenty franc piece in his hand.—New York Tribune.

Willing to Help.

Lord Pauncefote suffered greatly from rheumatic gout in his latter days, and he walked stiffly and sometimes had to use two canes. He went one afternoon to make a call, and he remained quite a long time, so long that the horses got restive, and the groom walked them up and down the street. When Lord Pauncefote left the house the carriage was not in front, and, thinking there was some mistake in his orders, he started to walk to the embassy, which was only a square or two. But he had twinges of his old enemy, and the pavements were icy. He was a large, heavily built man, and he feared a fall. While he was pondering over his dilemma along came a young man in working clothes, and the British ambassador, after a courteous salutation, asked: "My friend, will you walk beside me and help me home? It is just a short ways, but I am afraid of falling. I shall greatly appreciate it." The young man looked him over and then said thickly, "Old gent, I am pretty full myself, but I'll do the best I can—the very best I can."

Eliminate the Risk. . . .

Remember that there is as much danger of fire from without as within.

Some people think that because they use every available precaution to avoid fire starting inside, they can afford to economize in the matter of insurance.

But they forget that a blaze in the house next door might easily reach them and that the incendiary is ever abroad.

Eliminate the risk entirely. Why take any chance at all when insurance costs so little?

Let Your Money Grow.

Give it a chance and it will. Do not hide it in a stocking, or lock it up in a safe deposite vault.

Everything grows better out of doors. That includes money too. Plant it in well chosen Winchester real estate. Improved property pays a good rate of interest. Vacant property is steadily becoming more valuable and presents an attractive opportunity for investment.

You want to be making more money and living more comfortably. You can do either one or both by investing wisely in Winchester property. Our expert advice is yours for the asking.

CROSS STREET DRAINAGE.

The Highway Department has just completed laying a drain on Cross street near the Highland station, to take care of the surface water in that vicinity. This drain will take care of all surface water from junction of East and Holton streets to the Aberjona river bridge for probably nine months of the year, or at such times as the water in the river is normal.

When the river rises beyond a certain limit the same old trouble will occur and the water will flow back into the low point at the railroad bridge. This matter can never be thoroughly remedied until the B. & M. tracks and the grade of Cross street are both raised.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Next Thursday, Bunker Hill Day, June 17, a group of young folks from the Frances E Willard Settlement, Chamber street, Boston, will be entertained by the Winchester Union from 10 to 5. Mrs. D. Kelley is at the head of the committee and has planned an interesting program. The members of the Union and any others who may be interested are invited to come and assist in making the outing enjoyable. Miss Nellie Hill, the head resident worker will chaperone the party.

The visitors will bring their own luncheon but members and friends are asked to bring or send to Mrs. Kelley's, 12 Park street something in the way of household supplies as a donation for the Settlement work, which is supported chiefly by the gifts of the W. C. T. Unions throughout the State. Groceries, table and bed linen, etc, or cash will be acceptable as the Settlement provides a boarding home for young women whose wages are less than five dollars a week, and sometimes helps a girl to tide over a period which politicians call "industrial depression" but which is really the tragedy of being out of work with no reserve funds. Visitors to the Settlement, in what was formerly St. Andrew's church, will find much that is of interest and encouragement to the student of social problems.

MRS. LAURA A. PINGREE.

Mrs. Laura Alice Pingree, widow of the late Charles B. Pingree, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter N. Stilphen, No. 4 Westley street, on Saturday of dropsy. She was 73 years of age.

Mrs. Pingree was born in Ireland during a trip to that country by her parents, Patrick and Alice (Holland) Cahill. Her life was spent in Montreal, Can., where her parents made their home. She had made her home in this town for the past nine years. Her husband, who died some 30 years ago, was a dealer in groceries and provisions, having stores at Charlestown and Malden.

She leaves two sons and two daughters—D. H. Pingree of Melrose Highlands, Joseph of Charlestown, Mrs. J. S. Pingree of Melrose Highlands, and Mrs. Walter N. Stilphen of this town.

Funeral services were held from St. Mary's church on Tuesday morning at eight o'clock, high mass being celebrated by Fr. Walter J. Roche. During the service a solo "Waiting" was sung by Miss Gertrude Keleher.

The pall bearers were the three son-in-laws of the deceased and her grandson—Messrs. J. F. Kelley and son Leo of Charlestown, J. S. Spinney and Walter N. Stilphen. The burial was in the family lot at Woodlawn.

SECOND CHOIR FESTIVAL.

On Friday evening, June 18th, in the Stoneham Armory and under the patronage of 42 prominent women, the Euterpean Chorus of 50 voices will sing "The Rose Maiden" by Cowan. The soloists are Mabel F. Barstow, soprano, and Ouida Cefrey, alto at the Unitarian Church, Lynn, and Lambert Murphy of the Old South Church, Boston. Mr. Murphy recently made a very favorable impression with his singing in the Winchester Congregational Church. Wm. V. Dixey will conduct and Josephine G. Collier of the Lang Studio, Boston, will be the accompanist. The proceeds are to be used towards rebuilding the Methodist Church, recently destroyed by fire. For reserved seats at 50 cents, address W. C. Whitcher, Stoneham, or phone 179-2. The Armory is to be decorated with thousands of June roses and Poinsettas. Several Winchester ladies are much interested in the Festival and it is expected that a large party will go from here. All the surrounding towns are assisting in many ways and there has already been a large sale of seats.

WESTERN MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETING.

Thursday, June 3rd, 75 ladies of the Western Missionary Society assembled in the Congregational Church vestry to hold their monthly meeting. At 12.45 o'clock the ladies laid aside their sewing and partook of a delicious lunch. After the business meeting Mrs. J. K. Murdock read a paper on her travels through the Lake region of England and Scotland. The paper was enjoyed by all. Francis Hemenway played two solos very gracefully and a duett with Miss Maud Gurney was prettily rendered. Francis Hemenway is a wonder in her piano playing being a self taught musician. A vote of thanks was given Mrs. J. K. Murdock and the young ladies. The next meeting will be the first Thursday in Oct. which will be Oct. 7, when there will be a sale of aprons, cake and candy. The Society mourn very deeply the loss of one of its elderly members Mrs. Caroline H. Bowers. The President and others made remarks befitting her merits.

PROPOSED ELECTRIC R. R. ROUTE.

The route of the proposed Boston, Lowell and Lawrence Electric railroad in Winchester will enter the town at the Langley estate at the Arlington-Winchester line; pass under Cambridge street, thence by an elevated structure up the west side of the latter street, crossing over Fenway road, continuing along to within about 300 feet of Myopia road; thence across to the east side of Cambridge street by an elevated structure; across Everett avenue elevated, over Glen road, then drops down and passes under Church street at the Witherell estate; then up through to the Westerly side of Winter pond running parallel with Wedgemere avenue about 150 feet; crosses Winter pond by a wooden tressle, and continuing across the old golf links of Mr. Ginn thence to the Edison power station at the Woburn line.

Y. M. C. A.

I often hear it said, Winchester does not need a Y. M. C. A. There is the Christian Endeavor, the Epworth League and the B. Y. P. U. that care to the need of anything else. With due respect for all those mentioned, I still say there is need, and more than that, the need is great, even in this beautiful town.

Think for a moment. Each of these societies meet one evening out of seven, and then on Sunday evening. What about the rest of the week? If there are pleasant homes, well and good, but are there not some boys in our town to whom it is our duty to supply, as far as possible, the want of a home? I think so. The late Thomas B. Grady was once asked to deliver an address before an Association which needed to raise $50,000, and was asked to mention the fact. Mr. Grady said among other things that if $50,000 was the means of saving one boy to a life of purity and usefulness, it would be money well spent. He was asked at the close if that wasn't a bit high for one boy, and with the quick wit for which he was always noted, he replied, "No, not if he is mine." Is it not well to remember that to a certain extent at least "we are our brother's keeper."

THE JORDAN-GOODRIDGE COMPANY.

The following article appeared in the June issue of Walden's Stationer and Printer published in New York and Chicago.

Incorated on April 1 and starting in business on April 15 last, The Jordan-Goodridge Company is the latest grist in the trade of the city from the Massachusetts corporation mill. Generally speaking, this company will carry on a manufacturing stationery business, but in a larger sense it will do more than that for it will specialize in bank and office methods. As such, particular attention will be given to financial institutions, large corporations and other houses, for which office systems will be originated and manufactured according to the special requirements of each. This will be done direct, or through public accountants, with several of whom the company has already formed connections.

A better idea of its scope will perhaps be gained by enumerating the lines, which are embraced in its work and which are taken from the company's business card as follows: Office system work, binders, ledgers, holders, loose leaf methods, lithographing, engraving, printing, ruling, binding, manifold book and multiple copy work, filing cabinets, cards, indexes and supplies. As a specific illustration of the company's plan, it is pointed out that the company will, as it were, take up the work of the manufacturers of typewriters and billing and adding machines where they leave off, and will supplement them by devising and making supplies for minimizing and simplifying methods, and thus expediting the work both of the operators and the house.

The company's office and factory are located at 83 Franklin street, of which it has taken a lease, and a part of which was formerly occupied by the Metropolitan News and Publishing Company. The principals of the company, which is a close corporation, are Fred B. Jordan, who is president, and George A. Goodridge, who is treasurer.

Mr. Jordan has been identified with the trade for the past fifteen years and was formerly president and treasurer of the F. E. Bacon Manifold Company, Portland, Me. He was mechanical head of that business. Coming to this city he became salesmanger for the A. E. Martell Company, to which he sold four patents for loose leaf devices, of which he was the patentee and under which that company is now manufacturing. Mr. Jordan has also patented several other devices along similar lines, the applications for which are still pending. Latterly Mr. Jordan has been identified with the C. S. Binner Corporation, of which he was a director and general manager. He retains his interest in that company. Mr. Jordan, besides being president of The Jordan-Goodridge Company, is its practical man and mechanical head.

Mr. Goodridge, the treasurer of the company, is new to the stationery trade. He was until recently one of the principals in the firm of Goodridge, Crocker & Parks, of Boston, importers and wholesale coffee and tea merchants. This firm has been consolidated with another in the same line of business. Mr. Goodridge will give particular attention to the management of the company's finances.

The company starts out with excellent prospects. Its trademark is a triangle, the essential features of which are the name and address of the company in the margin and within which is an inverted triangle. Adjacent to the three sides of the smaller triangle are the words, "Price," "Quality" and "Delivery," referring to the single word, "Right," in the centre.

Both Mr. Jordan and Mr. Goodridge are residents of Winchester, Mr. Jordan residing on the west side and Mr. Goodridge on the east side. They are identified with several of the local organizations.

TO DECORATE GRAVES.

The members of Waterfield Lodge, Odd Fellows, will decorate the graves of deceased brothers in Wildwood Cemetery Sunday. In the morning they will attend services at the First Baptist Church, pews being reserved for them. The Pastor, Rev. Henry E. Hodge, will no doubt preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion. The local Lodge inaugurated the custom of decorating the graves a few years ago, and this commemorative custom has been continued each year since. In addition to placing flowers on the graves, a flag emblematical to the order is placed at the head of the grave, the same as is done to deceased veterans of the civil war.

Miss Margaret Walsh the well known information operator at the Winchester Telephone Exchange has resigned after six years service in the company on account of her health.

About $600 was cleared at the June Breakfast this year.

EWELL—MITTON.

A pretty home wedding was observed on Tuesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George Bigley, No. 285 Washington street, when Miss Alice Leoata Mitton of Moncton, N. B., sister of Mrs. Bigley, was united in marriage to Mr. Wesley Franklin Ewell of this town. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev Henry E. Hodge, pastor of the First Baptist Church, in the presence of about 60 relatives and friends.

The residence was decorated for the occasion with palms, asparagus fern, peonies and bridal wreath. The couple entered the parlor to the wedding march, played by Mr. Ralph Arnold on the piano, and the wedding took place beneath an arch of green and flowers with a background of palms. The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law. She wore a handsome gown of white organdie, trimmed with lace, and carried a bouquet of bridal bells and snowdrops, her veil being caught with the same flowers.

Miss Viola Mitton, her sister, was maid of honor, she carrying a bouquet of pink bridal bells

Following the ceremony a reception was held, Mr. and Mrs. Ewell being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Bigley and the bride's sisters, the Misses Viola, Margaret and Susie. During the evening music was rendered by an orchestra and bountiful refreshments served, merriment and fun prevailing until the departure of the couple upon their wedding trip.

Many handsome presents were received, including a handsome parlor lamp, clock, $50 in money, besides a quantity of table silver and cut glass.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Ewell will reside in Winchester at their new home, No. 143 Washington street.

WE MUST BRING BACK THE PURPLE MARTINS.

Five years ago those useful birds, the purple martins of Massachusetts, were almost exterminated by a series of cold storms in the nesting season. Recent observations indicate that they are now beginning to come back. The State Ornithologist will be grateful for any definite information in regard to instances of nesting of these birds within the state. Locality and approximate number of birds now breeding are important items.

She was married a year ago this month, spending her honeymoon with her husband travelling in Germany and Holland. She leaves besides her husband a little daughter. Two sisters, one in Winchester and one in New York, also survive her.

JULY 4TH ASSOCIATION DISBANDED.

The July 4th Association, which has been responsible for a number of years for the excellent celebration on Manchester Field, the band concerts and the entertainment in the town hall all tending to provide a safe and sane enjoyment of the day for both young and old, has dissolved. The notice of the disbandment of the association, together with the funds at its disposal, amounting to something over $100, has been placed in the hands of the selectmen.

The association recommended that a committee to provide entertainment for the 4th be appointed by the selectmen and it is probable that the matter will come up at the special town meeting, June 21st.

DEVOE TOOK 9½ GALLONS LESS

Judge I. D. Fairchild of Lufkin, Texas, had two houses painted, both same size. One was painted with a leading top-price paint, and took 25 gallons. The other was painted with Devoe, and took only 15½ gallons. The "leading paint" referred to is adulterated 15%, but is sold at the same price as Devoe.

The most economical paint always is the one that takes least gallons and wears longest, and that's Devoe.

YELLOW JOURNALISM.

The three men sentenced on Thursday by Judge Schofield, for stealing from the city, were sent to Deer island yesterday. Regarding two of these men public opinion is unanimous that their punishment is deserved. Concerning the third, a young lawyer, an undoubted unfortunate victim of circumstance and practically only a tool in the hands of another, public opinion would have approved of a more lenient disposition of his case.

When the time came to take the prisoners to Deer island the penal officers were obliged by force to remove photographers from certain papers from the Deer island wharf. Under false pretenses these photographers then secured admission to a neighboring ferry wharf, only to be driven from there; thence to the fire escape of a nearby tenement house, which fortunately, because of the foresight of the officials in shielding the prisoners with a huge umbrella, was of little avail to them in the accomplishment of their purpose.

This was a scandalous exhibition of misuse of the power of the press. To picture these unfortunate men in the act of going to prison only pandered to the mob, and debased in human nature and served no good purpose. It was piling up the suffering of the innocent families of the men concerned who, as it is, have suffered enough. It is yellow journalism at its filthiest and even those who approve of the exploitation of the sensational must agree that there are times in the interests of decency when the line must be drawn. [Boston Traveller.

We saw a disgusting exhibition of newspaper photographers at the recent Jordan trial at East Cambridge. Some day there will be passed a stringent law prohibiting the use of the camera for such purposes.

LEST WE FORGET.

A number of our subscribers seem to have forgotten that the time for which their subscription was paid has expired, and we are sending out a friendly reminder, which is all that is needed in most cases. The fact that we are now under the new postal law compelled to collect subscriptions due for more than a year, has also been called to the attention of others less punctual in attending to our requests. In some cases we have been obliged to discontinue the mailing of our paper to delinquent subscribers after repeated demands for a settlement of account, and in such cases these bills have gone to our attorney for collection. We dislike very much to do this, but if subscribers pay no attention to our requests after waiting three or more years for what is due us, they have no ground for complaint if we do give their bills to our attorney for adjustment.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The second service Sunday is at 5.30 p.m. This will be the last of the afternoon services until September.

Next Sunday will be closing day for the Sunday School. The service will be as usual in the church at 12.15 p. m. Parents of the scholars and all friends of the Sunday School are especially urged to be present at this service.

The summer arrangement begins June 20 and lasts throughout September 12. There will be service every Sunday morning throughout the summer. The hour of service to be 10.30 a. m. There will be no afternoon or evening service.

The quarterly meeting of the vestry will be held at the rector's house, next Wednesday evening, June 16, at 8 o'clock.

SPEED OF AUTOS.

Under the state law an automobile that goes at a rate of speed in excess of eight miles per hour at cross roads, at intersections of streets and around curves where the view is obstructed is prima facie going at an excessive speed and the burden is upon the driver to show that the speed is reasonable. In thickly settled places, a speed of twelve miles an hour is allowed, and outside of these a speed of twenty miles an hour. The law provides that the speed shall be at all times reasonable and proper, having regard for the traffic, the use of the way and the safety of the public.

People Tell Each Other About Good Things.

Fourteen years ago few people in the world knew of such a preparation as a Powder for the Feet. To-day after the genuine merit of Allen's Foot-Ease has been told year after year by one gratified person to another there are millions who would as soon go without a dentifrice as without Allen's Foot-Ease. It is a cleanly, wholesome, healing, antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes, which has given rest and comfort to tired and aching feet in all parts of the world. It cures while you walk. Over 30,000 testimonials of cures of smarting, swollen, perspiring feet. It prevents friction and wear of the stockings and will save in your stocking bill ten times its cost each year. Imitations pay the dealer a larger profit, otherwise you would never be offered a substitute when you ask for Allen's Foot-Ease, the orignal powder for the feet. Imitations are not advertised because they are not permanent. For every genuine article there are many imitations. The imitator has no reputation to sustain—the advertiser has. It stands to reason that the advertised article is the best, otherwise the public would not buy it and advertising could not be continued. When you ask for an article advertised in this paper, see that your get it. Refuse imitations.

BIRDS KILLED BY SPRAYING.

A large amount of circumstantial evidence seems to justify the assumption that birds are killed by spraying trees with arsenical insectscides for the purpose of killing insects. Last year many birds were found dead where trees were sprayed and the State Ornithologist began an investigation to determine whether the birds were killed by spraying. The evidence secured was not conclusive enough to clear up the matter fully. It is now time to begin spraying for the gypsy moth, brown tail moth and elm-leaf beetle. Dead birds usually may be found within two or three days after spraying has been done.

All who are interested in bird life are requested to be on the watch for dead birds under or in the vicinity of sprayed trees and to forward any found to E. H. Forbush, State Ornithologist, Room 136, State House, Boston, Mass. It is proposed to have the birds' bodies analyzed to learn if they have been poisoned by the spraying mixture.

In a Pinch, use ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE.

A powder to shake into your shoes. It cures hot, tired, aching, swollen, sweating feet and makes walking easy. Takes the sting out of corns and bunions. All druggist, 25 cents. Don't accept any substitute.

THE ESSENCE OF PATRIOTISM.

BY W. J. BYRAN

From a Memorial Address at Washington, May 30, 1894.

The essence of patriotism lies in a willingness to sacrifice for one's country, just as true greatness finds expression, not in blessings enjoyed, but in good bestowed. Read the words inscribed on monuments reared by loving hands to the heroes of the past; they do not speak of wealth inherited, or of honors bought, or of hours in leisure spent, but of service done. Twenty years, forty years, a life, or life's most precious blood, he yielded up for the welfare of his fellows—this is the simple story which proves that it is now and ever has been more blessed to give than to receive. The officer was a patriot when he gave his ability to his country and risked his name and fame upon the fortune of war; the private soldier was a patriot when he took his place in the ranks and offered his body as a bulwark to protect the flag; the wife was a patriot when she bade her husband farewell and gather about her the little brood over which she must exercise both a mother's and a father's care; and, if there can be degrees in patriotism, the mother stood first among the patriots when she gave to the nation her sons, the devinely appointed support of her declining years, and, as she brushed the tears away, thanked God that he had given her the strength to rear strong and courageous sons for the battlefield.

To us who were born too late to prove upon the battlefield our courage and our loyalty, it is gratifying to know that opportunity will not be wanting to show our love of country. In a nation like ours, where the government is founded upon the principle of equality and derives its just power from the consent of the governed; in a land like ours, where every citizen is a sovereign and where no one cares to wear a crown, every year presents a battlefield and every day brings forth occasion for the display of patriotism. We shall fail short of our duty if we content ourselves with praising the dead or complimenting the living, and fail to make preparations for those responsibilities which present times and present conditions impose upon us. Pericles, in speaking of those who fell at Salamis, explained the loyalty of his countrymen when he said: "It was for such a country, then, that these men, nobly resolving not to have it taken from them, fell fighting, and every one of their survivors may well be willing to suffer in its behalf." The strength of a nation does not lie in forts, nor in navies, nor yet in great standing armies, but in happy and contented citizens, who are ever ready to protect for themselves and to preserve for posterity the blessings which they enjoy. It is for us of this generation to so perform the duties of citizenship that a "goverment of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

TREMONT THEATRE.

"A Broken Idol."— A Concensus Criticism.

It is very easy to understand why "A Broken Idol" which made its Boston bow at the Tremont Theatre last Monday, had such a phenomenal run in Chicago, for it is a typical musical extravaganza that must be seen to be appreciated. Like a bottle of champagne, it is sparkling, frothy, gay and amusing, and no matter how hot the weather, it is sure to make one good-natured. Even were it not for the distinct novelties it presents in the way of scenic effects and surprises, the piece would take rank as the musical comedy, or if you prefer to say it the way the authors do, the laughing song play of the Boston season. The musical numpers have an allure that is irresistible, the fun-making is rapid-fire and sure, and the setting is a revelation in itself.

There is a real plot in this charming farcieality, as it is called. It tells of a little Chinese wife living in the Chinatown of Los Angeles who is deserted by her white husband. He falls in with an English Lord who is in love with an American heiress. The American heiress is in love with a newspaper man who hasn't any money, which shows that he is a real reporter. The bad man tries to have the young man arrested for theft, but little Sing Wee, the Chinese girl, makes all turn out happily and gets her funny husband back, too. The plot amounts to little, but the girls and the colors and the sumptuous costumes and the beautiful stage setting are delightful. Of course Otis Harlan as Doc Whatt is the big fun-maker. Alice Yorke was the young heiress and sang her part sweetly and with becoming grace Carrie Perkins is an old favorite in a part suited to her. Charles Bowers is another Boston favorite who is sure of a welcome every time he is seen here. George Richards renewed old acquaintance by an amusing impersonation of a politician. Miss Beaumont was pleasing and Miss Madge Voe as Sing Wee deserves a special word of praise. Among the sensational features of the piece was a long, sinuous dragon that wound itself around the stage and suddenly dissolved itself into a score of laughing dancing girls. The startling act which closed the play was the floating of the prima donna in an illuminated balloon out over the heads of the audience.

JUNE BREAKFAST.

The annual June breakfast of the Winchester Visiting Nurse Association was held in the town hall on Saturday morning from 6 till 9, and although the weather was not as good as could have been wished, it did not prevent the people of the town coming in goodly numbers to participate in this unique event. As near as can be estimated nearly 1200 breakfasts were served.

The menu was a tempting one, and included bananas, a choice of five kinds of cereals, eggs, boiled or scrambled; baked beans and brown bread, cold ham and tongue, pickles, peanut butter and cheese, rolls and doughnuts, cocoa, coffee and tea, with strawberries if desired. Gas ranges had been installed for the cereals and coffee, while at the ends of the tables chafing dishes served to cook the eggs as they were wanted. Everything was as hot and appetizing as one could have at his table at home.

Some idea of the magnitude of the undertaking can be gained from the amount of supplies which were used. They included 3000 rolls, 100 dozen doughnuts, 175 dozen egg, 20 pots of beans, 25 loaves of brown bread, 100 gallons of coffee, 4 crates of strawberries, 18 hams, 20 tongues, 50 gallons cream, 20 gallons milk, beside serveral bunches of bananas, packages of various cereals and other articles.

The tables presented an attractive appearance with their white linen, china and silverware and floral decorations. The ladies who presided at the chafing dishes, as well as the young men and maidens, were gowned in white. Nineteen tables were set on the floor of the main hall, on the stage and in the galleries. The cake and candy table, which i usually on the lawn, was set in the corner of the hall this year.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The daring of Mr. Keith in presenting Vesta Tilley, the three thousand dollar a week star, and the vaudeville bills in keeping, for a summer attraction, was fully justified after all. All Boston and New England for that matter, are already whistling her songs and talking about her startling costumes, but there will be only one more week to see her, and if you haven't already done so, don't miss the opportunity this week.

If Miss Tilley were not on the bill, the Great Lester, the ventriloquist from the West, would be sufficient attraction to draw crowded houses. Lester has only one dummy, but it is one that will be remembered. An exceptionally good musical act will be that of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Voelker. Others will be Kelly and Barrett in "The Battle of Too Soon," Hayes and Johnson, Cornalla and Eddie, Patsy Doyle and the Hess Sisters.

Messrs. Kelley & Hawes Co's new brick fire-proof storage building on Park street is finished and is ready for the storage of furniture and valuables. This is the best equipped and safest storage building in this section and patrons are assured that their goods will receive the best of care and attention. s25,tf

INEFFICIENCY OF GOVERNMENT

It Is Seen and Felt Everywhere Around Adana

PLACE SWARMS WITH TROOPS

They Eat Up Best There Is to Be Had. While Many Thousands of Survivors of Massacre Get Rations From Supplies Gathered In the Country—Huddled In Camp In Open Plain In Rags and Squalor

Beirut, June 7.—It is evident that conditions everywhere in Asia Minor are far from settled and that it will take time and a government much stronger than the present one to make it possible for the people to resume their labors and go about with any degree of safety.

After the terrible massacres and the pillage and burning of Adana a new vali and new troops were sent from Constantinople. Much was expected of these newcomers, but it is evident that thus far they have done little to improve conditions.

The inefficiency of the government is seen and felt everywhere. The new vali sits back comfortably and makes the most suave assurances, but what the city needs is a man with a strong hand and a clean, honest heart. Six thousand troops and hundreds of officers swarm about Adana and eat up the best there is to be had. They corral the cows, gather up the wheat and eat the butter, so that the relief committees are compelled to send out into the country for the commonest food staples.

The work of relief at Adana is being pushed so far as means and energy will allow. At present in the big camp there are 11,800 persons on the ration list, while 1400 more are drawing their daily rations from the home of one of the missionaries.

In Adana these unfortunates are hoarded together like so many cattle on an open plain. It is a pitiable sight to see them in rags and squalor, huddling under inadequate shelters to protect themselves from the heat of a tropical sun, and again, at night, crowded together to protect themselves from the cold because of insufficient covering.

Under such conditions there are in this camp today hundreds of children with measles. It is not surprising that the line of babies' graves is growing. In one hospital alone there are over 500 wounded, some with not one or two, but with dozens of wounds.

The crops in all Adana regions are ripe for harvest. Unless they are gathered famine will inevitably stare people in the face the coming year, and this in addition to all the misery and horror which already has befallen them. Guards to protect the people who have dared to venture out to gather their crops have time and again proved the treachery of the Turk. The farmers have been either stabbed or shot down like dogs as soon as they came outside of the city limits.

BEEF BILL PASSED

Safeguards System of Stamping Meat In Massachusetts

Boston, June 3.—The bill to provide for better protection for the system of stamping beef was passed to be engrossed in the house. The bill says that no inspector shall permit the use of his beef stamp, and that no unauthorized person shall use a beef stamp.

The bill is a direct result of the exposure of the lax methods of stamping and inspection of beef in this state. It provides a penalty of $100 fine or imprisonment for sixty days or both.

MOB LAW RULES

Negro Already Sentenced Taken From Jail and Lynched

Talahassee, Fla., June 7.—Dangling from a limb of a tree in the county jail yard and within sight of the dome of the Florida state capitol, the lifeless body of Maik Morris, a negro, met the gaze of the people of this city Sunday.

Condemned to death for the murder of William Langston, late sheriff of this county, the negro would have, within a few weeks, legally paid the penalty of the crime, which is life.

Volunteer Soldier an Embezzler

Boston, June 7.—Lieutenant Bernard J. McCarron, Co. B, Fifth infantry, Massachusettts Volunteer Militia, was found guilty of embezzlement of company funds to the amount of $73.94 by courtmartial and ordered dismissed from the service.

Thaw Stays In Matteawan

New York, June 6.—Harry K. Thaw must remain in the state asylum for the criminal insane at Matteawan under a decision rendered by the appellate division of the supreme court in Brooklyn.

Boston's Heavy Customs Receipts

Boston, June 4.—The customs receipts for the port of Boston in the month of May were the largest in any single month in the history of the port. The total amount was $2,864,581.24.

LION HUNTING A CINCH

No Danger Attends Those Who Bring Down the King of Beasts

New York, June 6.—Dr. Lewis L. Seaman of this city, who returned yesterday by the Lusitania from a hunting trip in Africa, over the same ground that Mr. Roosevelt will traverse, has little patience with the terror-talk that some travelers have indulged in concerning the dangers Roosevelt will run.

"A lion stands no chance at all," said Seaman. "Before the hunters get a shot at him he has been chased by the beaters until he is so winded that there is little harm left in him. For the most part, African hunting is about as thrilling as in an English park. The one real danger is the tsetse fly, in the lowlands."

Dr. Seaman is a friend of the former president and was at the dinner given in honor of Roosevelt at Mombasa on April 21.

SEWING OVERALLS

Battis, McCullough and Cassidy Begin Work In Prison

Boston, June 6.—Garbed in the dull-colored suits in vogue at the house of correction on Deer Island, former Alderman George H. Battis, Leo F. McCullough, former president of the common council, and Attorney James T. Cassidy, all convicted of grafting from the city of Boston, were put to work today sewing overalls and jumpers, with 200 other convicts. Battis must serve three years, McCullough two and Cassidy one.

The three were taken to Deer Island yesterday from Charles street jail, where they had been locked up after being sentenced. Each maintained an impassive demeanor.

GRIM EXECUTION OF DEATH PACT

Man Kills Sister and Self When About to Lose Home

Boston, June 7.—Anticipating the arrival of a constable and the landlord armed with a writ of ejectment for non-payment of rent, Walter F. Towns, 46, and his sister, Anna I. Towns, 50, grimly executed a death pact and the tenement they occupied for a number of years at 21 Center place, Jamaica Plain, is without a tenant, and their landlord, Henry Frazer, is stricken with remorse because he believes his notice of eviction directly caused the double tragedy.

When Frazer and Constable Brooker got into the house they found the discouraged brother and sister lying lifeless in a lower front room, locked in each other's arms. Towns had first given his sister chloroform and then deliberately slashed her throat with a razor found near. This duty, as he evidently believed it, accomplished, he calmly shot himself through the middle of the forehead with a revolver. This is the version of the associate medical examiner.

FRANCE BREATHES EASIER

Statistics Indicate That Race Suicide Has at Last Been Checked

Paris, June 4.—The vital statistics of France, which in 1907 showed an excess of 19,892 deaths over the births for that year, a fact that led to the most pessimistic predictions for the future of the French race, have now been published for 1908.

Their study brings to light more reassuring official figures and shows an excess of 46,441 births over the deaths for that year. The total of deaths decreased 48,266 in 1908, while the births increased 18,067.

GIANT BLOCK OF GRANITE

Chunk Valued at $200,000 Blasted Out In a Barre Quarry

Barre, Vt., June 6.—The largest piece of stone ever quarried in Vermont—a block of granite containing 161,000 cubic feet—has been blasted out at one of the quarries here. Figuring at the current value of $1.25 for each cubic foot, the great block is worth a little more than $200,000.

Under pressure of sixty pounds of powder, the stone broke nearly square. So great is it that it will have to be broken into several pieces before it can be removed from the quarries.

Quarry Workers' Strike Ends

Milford, Mass., June 4.—A strike at the quarries of the Massachusetts Pink Granite Quarries company of quarry workers, which threatened to tie up the extensive granite cutting and quarrying industry of the town, ended when the company accepted the workmen's demand for the discharge of a foreman.

Wireless Telephone Experiments

Toulon, June 6.—Trials of the wireless telephone system were made between the armored cruiser Conde, which was at sea, and stations on shore, conversation being carried on perfectly at a distance of 110 kilometres.

Strike Action Deferred

Pittsfield, Mass., June 7.—At a meeting of the carpenters' and painters' union, action on the matter of joining in the strike of the bricklayers' and building laborers' union was deferred.

CONCESSIONS TO STRIKERS

Philadelphia Railway Men Resume Positions on Cars

STRIKE BREAKERS LEAVE CITY

Men Agree to Accept Twenty-Two Cents an Hour and Other Terms Offered by Traction Company—Will Demand Further Advance If Books of Company Show It to Be Warranted—Further Rioting Occurs

Philadelphia, June 6.—The strike of the employes of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, which began one week ago this morning, has ended, and at the same hour the men quit their positions on May 29 they again took up their burden today, following the deportation of the 459 strike breakers who came here from New York.

The termination of the trouble between the company and its employes was brought about primarily by State Senator McNichol, the Republican leader of this city, at conferences with the traction officials and the strikers' representatives.

The delegates chosen by the strikers met and discussed the propositions which had been made by the traction people. After being in session nearly all day the men agreed to accept 22 cents an hour. The old "swing system" has been abolished; ten hours will constitute a day's work; all employes will be permitted to purchase their uniforms in the open market; all future differences are to be adjusted between the company and a grievance committee chosen by the employes.

If, after an investigation by the city comptroller of the books of the company, it can be shown that more than 22 cents an hour can be paid without crippling the finances of the Rapid Transit company, then the men will insist upon a further advance in wages.

A sub-committee of seven employes, which was chosen by the committee of nineteen—one from each car barn—met and ratified the agreement with the company. The elevated men are also to receive an increase of 1 cent an hour.

Notwithstanding that the strike, to all intents and purposes, was practically settled before 6 o'clock last evening, no effort was made to run cars after dusk. There were several incipient riots in the northeastern section of the city early in the evening, but the crowds which congregated were soon driven to shelter by rain.

There was a small riot at Twelfth and York streets, where a mob of several hundred persons took up a position along the elevated tracks of the Reading railroad and pelted a passing car with rocks, coal and bricks.

The crew and passengers dashed from the car and the mob, bent on destroying the car, made a rush for it, but a score of policemen drew their revolvers and fired several shots into the air. The crack of the firearms had a quieting effect upon the lawless crowd and they withdrew in double-quick time. There were half a dozen arrests.

The present strike has been the most complete tie-up ever experienced by local trolley companies, and the temper of the people was more violent than in the strike of 1895.

PATRICK STAYS IN PRISON

Habeas Corpus Writ Is Refused the Slayer of Millionaire Rice

New York, June 6.—Albert T. Patrick's application for a writ of habeas corpus releasing him from Sing Sing prison, where he is under life sentence for the murder of William M. Rice, was denied by the appellate division of the supreme court in Brooklyn.

In the opinion of the court, which was written by Justice Jenks, the most striking paragraph was one holding that the "degree of punishment is not determined by the preference of the convict."

This was in answer to Patrick's declaration that life imprisonment was a greater hardship than death.

Suicides In Vermont

Montpelier, Vt., June 7.—Forty-eight suicides were reported during the past year in this state, out of a population of 343,641 people. Many, however, were committed, which never became public.

Mackerel Fishermen Strike Luck

Liverpool, N. S., June 7.—Five American schooners have struck the mackerel off Western Head and have taken from 150 to 300 barrels per vessel. The fish are schooling in large quantities.

Australia Offers a Dreadnought

Melbourne, June 7.—Alfred Deakin, premier of the commonwealth, has sent a cablegram formally offering to the imperial government a Dreadnought, or a corresponding addition to the navy.

Flanagan Makes a New Record

New York, June 7.—John J. Flanagan made a new world's record with the 16-pound hammer thrown from a 7-foot circle, hurling the hammer 174 feet, 3⅜ inches.

A Slight Difference.

Uncle Bob, who lived in Washington and worked at the war department, was at the old home for a few days. Little Ted was a devout worshiper and tagged about after his uncle all day long, listening to him and asking questions. Finally he delivered himself of an important matter.

"Uncle Bob," he said, "do you ever see the president in Washington?"

"Oh, yes; often. I see him nearly every day."

"Uncle Bob," asked Ted solemnly, after careful thought, "does the president see you?"—Woman's Home Companion.

Her Retort.

It is always gratifying to meet a person who is contented with his lot. For that reason it would be delightful to make the acquaintance of the woman who had the last word in a suffragist controversy. The writer of a suffragist communication in a newspaper wrote sadly that "woman is nothing but a female relative of man; the man is the noun, the woman is the preposition." "Well, what do I care?" was the triumphant retort. "The preposition governs the noun."—Youth's Companion.

Highly Encouraging.

One fine day, just as I was walking on, I got the trac (blue funk) and could not speak my lines. I turned hopelessly and with pleading eyes toward the leading lady, who could not go on with her part until I had spoken; but, for all help, she hissed at me from between her teeth, "Parle donc, petit animal!" (Go on, speak, you little beast.) Of such was the "encouragement" I received on one memorable occasion.—Coquelin's Reminiscences in London Telegraph

Notice.

Next Thursday being a holiday, correspondents will confer a favor by sending in copy as early in the week as possible. Advertisers desiring a change in their advertisements are requested to send copy to the office Wednesday forenoon.

Not a Word Yet.

Not a word yet from the special grade crossing commission. The members will soon be taking vacations on account of the warm weather, and then there will be further delay. The special town meeting soon to be held should take notice and force action either one way or the other. All improvements in the centre of the town have been held up for three years because of the dilitoriness of the commission.

Should be Encouraged.

The movement that is being made to form a Young Men's Christian Association in Winchester is one that should receive the careful consideration and support of all those people who believe in the future well fare and comfort of our boys and young men. The previous Association here did not receive the support that it should have had, and as a result it was discontinued, much to the regret of the active workers and the boys and young men who recognized its great benefits. The future of boys who spend their spare time on the streets is not apt to be particularly brilliant—just the reverse is likely to be the case. The young men of 40 years ago would have considered themselves fortunate if they had the opportunities afforded at the present day by the Young Men's Christian Association—pleasant rooms, library of selected books, games, instruction by the best teachers, etc., etc., all amid the most healthy surroundings. It is a great work that is going on for the boys, but we elderly people fail to appreciate it half as much as we ought to.

The work of reorganization now being undertaken by the Women's Auxiliary and a few interested and public spirited citizens, should meet with hearty success. The Auxiliary has a considerable fund at its disposal toward the erection of a Y. M. C. A. building, and advantage should be taken of it as soon as possible. It is well to remember that the ladies and gentlemen who give their time and thought to this work, do so solely for the benefit of the young people that they may grow up to be honored and respected citizens. We have the Visiting Nurse Association, and soon we will have the Winchester Hospital, both to look after physical ailments, now let us have the Y. M. C. A. whose mission is to improve mentally and morally which is fully as important as the work of the two first mentioned organizations.

Cheap Water.

The town by-law reducing the metered water rate from $12 to $8 has been approved by the Attorney General. This was quite a reduction and was recommended by the Water Board. It goes to prove that Winchester has one of the least expensive water plants in the State. Some twelve years ago, a member of this Board urged the town to enter the Metropolitan Water system, he claiming that in ten years the town would outgrow its supply. A town meeting voted to do so, but at the next session reconsidered the vote. Ten years have come and gone, and the supply is still bountiful. If Winchester ever does enter the Metropolitan system, the inhabitants can make up their minds that they will pay considerably over the present rates.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. Hodge leaves next Monday for Portland, Oregon, where he will attend the anniversary gatherings of the Northern Baptist Convention to be held June 25 to July 2, as a delegate of the First Baptist Church, and also of the Boston East Association. ### OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

That electric railroad crosses Cambridge street and Everett avenue by an elevated structure instead of by tunnel. Nothing is said about a station in Winchester, but I imagine it will be strongly opposed by that section of the town, anyway.

If the overflow sewage has got to be emptied in the one place or the other, then by all means let it be at the street openings where it can be readily taken care of, and not let it flow into the pond.

For years it has been said that when labor had an eight-hour day it would be satisfied. But now the carpenters and others are demanding a Saturday half holiday without loss of pay, and of course if that is established the next thing will be a Saturday whole holiday without loss of pay. Of course labor will never be satisfied any more than other professions, and everybody should know it, but it does seem as if it should be more politic.

Shall we continue our 4th of July celebrations? Speak up. Time is short.

There will be an article in the warrant for the town meeting Monday, the 21st inst., under which inquiry can be made regarding the status of our grade crossing petition, and it would seem as if the Selectmen or town counsel should be prepared to answer. It certainly seems that the matter is being held up for some reason and we should know why. If no satisfactory answer is given it would be in order to instruct the Selectmen to withdraw the petition and proceed to petition the Railroad Commission to act, as the present law provides. As the whole question must go to that Board anyway, it would serve the special commission just right, and we might be better off. There is a point where patience ceases to be a virtue. Have we not reached it?

I understand that some members of the Board of Selectmen have become weak-kneed on our street lighting contract since the Boston agitation, and fear to make the contract they recommended and advocated at the annual meeting. Inasmuch as about 95 per cent of the Boston agitation was purely political, why should it affect our action?

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES.

The discussions at the Business Men's Conference are proving very helpful.

Our prayer meetings have a very large attendance, and are wonderfully inspiring. Nearly 50 people take part every Wednesday night out of an attendance of about 90.

During the Pastor's absence in Portland, Oregon, the regular services of the Church will be continued under able and inspiring leaders who will be announced later.

Mr. F. S. Osgood gave a most interesting account of his balloon ascension at the prayer meeting Wednesday night.

VOLPE & PICCOLO DISSOLVE.

It is understood that the firm of Volpe & Piccolo, fruit dealers, have dissolved their partnership this week, the business to be conducted in the future by the Piccolos, Erasmo and Steve. The Volpes will go to Maine, where they have taken a store.

BASE BALL.

WOBURN 5. WINCHESTER 3

Sharp hitting at the right time resulted in Winchester's defeat at the hands of the Woburn team Monday afternoon. Woburn started off by getting one run in the first, but could get no more until the sixth when they piled up 4. Winchester got one run in the fourth and by tallies one in the eight and ninth. Winchester got more hits than Woburn and also made less errors, but the hits were scattered and errors were made at critical points. Foley out-pitched Wall through the entire game, getting 10 strike outs. Finn played good for Woburn accepting five chances with only one error. McGovern and Crovo were the big-stickers for Woburn, McGovern getting 3 hits and Crovo two. Leduc played well for Winchester.

WINCHESTER 10 STONEHAM 7.

Winchester High defeated Stoneham High on Manchester field Wednesday afternoon. Ross, Stoneham's pitcher, was not very effective when men were bases, and that resulted in their defeat.

It looked like an easy victory for Stoneham when she made 8 runs in the first, but Winchester came back and scored in every inning up to the fifth. LeDuc batted well for Winchester getting three hits for a total of five bases.

TOWN VAULTS TO BE RECONSTRUCTED.

Henry E. Woods, Commissioner of Public Records visited town this week and as a result has ordered that numerous changes be made in the town's vaults at the town hall building. He expressed himself as not satisfied with their construction. The law provides that all vaults containing public records shall not be lined or fitted with any material of a combustable nature, and as the town's vaults are wooden lined and contain numerous wooden paritions considerable work will have to be done on them. His order for their reconstruction was received Tuesday. The selectmen have not yet determined just what will be done in the matter.

The High school was visited also and the records there inspected, Mr. Woods expressing himself as satisfied with their safety.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Those who go to the Castle Square next week will see a college play that is one of the best of its kind. It is called "At Yale," and it does for that Connecticut college what "Brown of Harvard" does for our own university across the Charles.

Songs will be sung during the progress of "At Yale" that will give it additional interest, and the cast will include the entire John Craig Stock Company. The role of the hero will be acted by William P. Carleton and the other parts have been arranged with Mr. Friebus as Dave Burley, Mr. Burley, Mr. Meek as Jimsey, Evarts as Clancey, Miss Young as Dorothy Randall, Miss Binley as Name Brady and Miss Colcord as Mrs. Randall.

The run of "At Yale" will be limited to a single week.

Paper napkins and wax paper for lunches at Wilson the Stationer's.

GET TEN-HOUR DAY

Increase In Wages Also Granted Pittsfield Railway Employes

Pittsfield, Mass., June 4.—The cars of the Pittsfield Street Railway company are running with their usual regularity, the conductors and motormen who went on strike having returned to work.

By the agreement reached, the strikers gain their two principal demands, the increase in wages and a straight ten-hour day. The men will receive 21 cents an hour for their first year's service, and each succeeding year will receive a raise of 1 cent an hour until they reach a maximum of 25 cents an hour. After ten hours they will receive an overtime rate of 30 cents an hour. Three minor claims of the union, including the demand that the company shall employ none but union men, were withdrawn.

Where Wives Are Kept Under.

A Chinese Mrs. Caudle is inconceivable, for she would promptly be returned to her father labeled "Too muchee bhoberry." Only by one means can the lady obtain any right whatever to use even the mild moral suasion wherewith the tactful western wife is wont to turn events to her liking. If as a bride the Chinese woman succeeded in sitting on any corner of her husband's clothes at the moment when, halfway through the nuptial ceremonials, they first seat themselves side by side she is understood to occupy the position of mistress in her own house. Even then it generally stops at understanding.—From "Things Seen In China," by J. R. Chitty.

SOCIALIST LOGIC.

False Premises Lead to Absurd Conclusions.

The Success of a Municipal Lodging House Cannot Be Made the Basis of an Argument For Public Ownership. Private Enterprise Is Always the Pioneer In Fields of Public Utility.

In a recent issue of Wilshire's Magazine (Socialist) the municipal lodging house lately opened in New York is made the text for a comparison of "public and private enterprise," the foil being a Bowery ten cent lodging house. The comparison is, of course, and doubtlessly correctly, very much to the advantage of the municipal lodging house in the matters of cleanliness and comfort. The writer neglects, however, to mention that he is comparing a charity with a business enterprise. Nor does he tell us how much each of its nightly guests costs the city. Certainly that cost exceeds 10 cents. Therefore the comparison is an unfair one. The ten cent lodging house must limit its accommodation to what its guests can afford to pay. If they can pay more they go to a "hotel" where they can get a private room (with bath privileges) for a quarter If, as is possible, each of its guests costs the city a quarter, then the comparison should be made with one of these hotels, and the publicity of the city's open dormitory, with its scores of almost contiguous beds, does not compare favorably, in that respect at least, with the privacy of the cheap hotel.

Another point must not be lost sight of. Private enterprise has provided cheap lodging houses for the homeless poor for half a century. Until the present year the municipal lodging house was of a type which even a municipal Socialist would not choose for a comparison with private enterprise, and prior to 1897 the city's only provision for them were the benches in the parks and the cells in the police stations, neither of which appealed to the man who had any self respect and both of which would have been inadequate had not private enterprise taken care of most of the homeless ones.

As a basis for advocating public ownership—in view of the half century delay one can scarcely say public enterprise—the municipal lodging house, desirable as it is, scarcely supplies the necessary argument. In fact, Mr. Wilshire's use of it shows to what extremities the municipal Socialist is pushed.

If you told the average patron of a municipal electric plant that he differed only in degree from the homeless wanderers whose night's lodging is provided by the taxpayers he would smile incredulously or get hot under the collar. Yet the statement would in most cases be true, for he is getting light at less than the cost of production and is therefore a recipient of public charity, for it is a rare case where, sooner or later, the taxpayers, direct and indirect, do not have to go down into their pockets to make good the financial losses of municipal plants.

There is, however, one noteworthy difference. Most electric light users are well to do, while most of the poor do not have electricity in their houses; hence one has the edifying spectacle of the poor being taxed to provide a partial charity for the well to do, instead of the latter being taxed to provide beds for the very poor.

The municipal lodging house is also typical of the way in which public "enterprise" follows private enterprise at a more than respectful distance. State Socialists talk glibly of the state railroads of continental Europe, forgetting apparently that they were built by private enterprise, which was generously permitted to operate them so long as there was uncertainty as to their being a financial success. The same statement may be made in regard to the telephone system of France, the telegraph and the tramway systems of Great Britain and the lighting plants of that country and our own. It has always been private enterprise which has blazed the way, incurred the initial risks, demonstrated the possibility of success, only too often to be held up and forced to turn over to unenterprising public officials the business which it has carefully nurtured and which usually soon stagnates under the lack of enterprise which is the distinguishing characteristic of a bureaucracy.

Advise Abandonment.

A committee appointed by the town of Wakefield, Mass., to investigate the municipal electric light plant has reported that the town can buy current more cheaply than it can make it. The committee accordingly recommends that the plant be abandoned. The town has owned the plant since 1894.

The committee appointed by the selectmen of Brookline, Mass., to investigate the question of establishing a municipal electric light plant has decided against the plan and recommends that the town continue to purchase electricity from the Boston Consolidated Gas company.—Electrical World.

A Typical Estimate.

A hard hearted man with a bent for mathematics recently tackled the "estimate" prepared for a municipal electric plant by a Kentucky city engineer. He found that in order to get the "estimated" income it would be necessary for each of the customers to install eighty-two incandescent lamps in his residence—and pay for service on that basis. When faced with these figures the council suggested that the "estimating" engineer guess again.

CURED OF LEPROSY

Many Persons Long Confined In Molokai Colony to Be Freed

Honolulu, June 4.—After some of them had spent twenty years of their life in the leper settlement on the island of Molokai, ten supposed lepers were yesterday declared to be free of the disease, following a re-examination.

Eleven persons were brought to Honolulu for examination at the instance of a legislative committee. Only one of the eleven re-examined was found to have leprosy, but some of the older freed patients will petition to be returned to the island of Molokai, as they have been shut off from the world and their friends so long that they have no other place to go.

Nineteen other supposed lepers will be brought from the settlement for re-examination in a short time.

BOON TO NAVIGATION

Work on Cape Cod Canal Breakwater About to Be Begun

Plymouth, Mass., June 7.—The Cape Cod canal is developing into a reality, with the arrival here from Maine of some of the granite to be used in its construction. Already three schooners have brought cargoes of granite, which will be used in the breakwater to be built at the cape entrance.

Two million tons of the stone have been contracted for, which will require the employment of about fifty vessels. It will all be from Maine.

The canal is to be eight miles long, with a five-mile approach in Buzzard's bay and another of 3000 feet in Cape Cod bay. It will eliminate the hazardous trip around the cape.

POLICEMAN HELD FOR BOY'S DEATH

Chelsea Officer Is Charged With Manslaughter

Chelsea, Mass., June 6.—Charged with manslaughter in causing the death of 20-year-old Richard D. Walsh, Policeman Herbert J. Bradley was arraigned in court, pleaded not guilty to the charge and was ordered held in $1000 for a hearing next Wednesday. The officer secured bail. He was reinstated as a member of the department by Chief Shannon, who decided to call off the suspension of the officer pending the outcome of the manslaughter charge.

While Bradley was being arraigned the funeral of Walsh was held in St. Rose church.

Walsh was shot while, it is alleged, he and two companions were making their escape after stealing six barrels of oil.

DIGESTIVE ORGANS FAILED

Mrs. Fisk, Vice Regent of National D. A. R., Succumbs to Starvation

Pawtucket, R. I., June 4.—Mrs. Stephen F. Fiske, vice regent of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution and prominent throughout Rhode Island, died last evening. According to the Fisk family physician, Dr. Wheaton, death was due to lack of nourishment. Mrs. Fisk was 57 years of age and was the wife of a druggist of this city.

Mrs. Fisk was operated upon for an internal trouble on March 24, but her condition was weak at the time, and since the operation her digestive organs had been so inactive that they could not perform their proper functions. The result was that she died from starvation, according to a statement issued by Dr. Wheaton.

Lowell, Mass., June 7.—Louisiana Piette, Lowell's "sleeping sickness" girl, died Sunday after lying on her bed practically unconscious for thirty two days. During that time the only nourishment which passed her lips was the milk forced through her teeth.

The girl had had four other similar spells of lying unconscious for days, each spell longer than the last. A sleep last fall of thirty days was ended by electric treatment given by physicians.

PLUNGED KNIFE INTO EIGHT MEN

Awful Dead of a Maniac In a Packing Establishment

FIVE STABBED IN THE HEART

Three Others In Critical Condition and Unlikely to Recover—First Man Assaulted Was a Government Inspector, Who Is Practically Disembowelled—Powerful man Given Fearful Beating Before Overpowered

Cambridge, Mass., June 7.—The death of Dr. Daniel C. Hays, who was probably fatally stabbed by John Murphy, the hog butcher who slew five men and seriously wounded three others at Somerville Saturday, is expected hourly, while John Cheevas and Joseph Chicosk, the others to receive dangerous stabs, are both in a critical condition and their recovery doubtful.

All three are at the Cambridge relief hospital. Dr. Hays is a government inspector of slaughter houses, 37 years old, and has a family in Waltham. Cheevas and Chicosk are Poles, aged 29 and 24 years respectively, and living in this city.

The men killed by Murphy are: Thompson Crowe, 42; Michael Yenser 18; John Carper, 21; Joseph L. Leveroni, 30, and Edwin Neurese, 26.

Murphy, who weighs 200 pounds, became violently insane while engaged at his regular occupation of killing pigs at the North Packing and Provision company, Somerville, and in his mad lust for blood drove more than 300 employes from the seven floors of the building. He was finally overpowered and disarmed in a fierce struggle after he had stabbed eight men.

In a padded cell at the Somerville police station Murphy is still stark mad and allows no one to approach him. As murder was committed the maniac will have to go through the different courses of the law before he can be adjudged insane and confined in an asylum.

Murphy was working on a platform killing the pigs as they were swung into the long room on the seventh floor of the building. Extending from the platform was a long bench at which the pigs were being dressed by 125 workmen, while only ten feet away stood Dr. Hays, the government inspector.

According to some of the workmen, Murphy had been acting peculiarly for some days, but he returned from his dinner Saturday noon apparently in good spirits.

Shortly after 2 o'clock he suddenly uttered a terrific shriek and jumped at Hays waving his 15-inch razor edged knife in his hand. He cut Hays a deep gash in the neck, stabbed him over the heart and practically disembowelled him.

The terrified workmen leaped from their places and rushed for the door, but were not quick enough for Murphy, who ran after them, slashing right and left. Every man whom he struck went down with a groan.

The crowd plunged downstairs, with Murphy after them, and at every landing he struck somebody. On the third floor he caught up with two of the men, to whom he delivered death blows. On the second floor one of the workmen seized a heavy bar of iron and felled Murphy to the floor, but before the others could come up Murphy was on his feet again and wounded another on the way to the street floor. There he was given another terrific blow on the head and his knife was wrenched from his hand. Two police officers came in to assist the crowd and Murphy was given a fearful beating before he was finally overpowered.

So closely were the blows delivered and so accurate was the aim that every man was killed by being stabbed to the heart. Those who were wounded suffered great gashes in the back and on the arms, which they received in the flight downstairs.

Murphy is 50 years old. He was regarded as one of the strongest men in the plant. He is married and has two children.

Darragh Gets Seven Years

New York, June 6.—A sentence of not less than seven years nor more than twenty years in Sing Sing prison was imposed upon William Darragh, a chauffeur, whose automobile ran down and killed Ingvaard Trimble in this city. Motions for a new trial and arrest of judgment were overruled.

Graft Detectives Held

Pittsburg, June 6.—John Van Ness, Thomas Donovan and H. H. Herron, detectives employed by the Voters' league in the recent municipal graft scandal, who were charged with conspiracy by Mrs. Anna Klein, wife of a convicted councilman, were held for court in $2500 bail.

Prefers Pulpit to College Presidency

Halifax, June 7.—In the belief that the active work of the Baptist ministry is more congenial to his tastes and better fitted to his ability, Dr. W. R. Hutchinson, for two years president of Arcadia university, has resigned and will assume an active pastorate.

Legislature to Adjourn About June 19

INDUSTRIES BOOMING HERE

Tariff Still Greatly Interests Massachusetts—Trade With Canada Growing Rapidly—State Convention to Have 1816 Delegates

In all probability the state legislature will be prorogued somewhere between the 16th and 19th of June. It is very uncertain today which of these dates will see the closing up of the work of the great and general court for 1909. A good many legislators believe the final prorogation is easily possible by the 16th. Perhaps quite as many other members believe that it will be as late as Saturday, the 19th, before all measures now pending will have been acted upon.

Some of the state officers think it will be physically impossible to adjourn earlier than June 19 owing to the large amount of engrossing of bills which must be done before that event. There are several measures, codifications of various laws, which will take a long time to engross. Then, in addition, there are the ordinary measures which require engrossment before final action.

One of the most important bills now before the legislature is the act to provide for a high-pressure fire service in the city of Boston. This bill involves the expenditure of a million dollars, and the first of this week the hearings upon it had not been finished.

Perhaps the most important general measure in many ways of the entire session is the act of creating a holding company whose duty it shall be to control the Billard stock in the Boston and Maine railroad.

It has long been the custom for the members of the legislature to defer until the last days of the session the most important measures to be considered. This year is no exception to the general rule. A legislative body is not accustomed to move very swiftly in pleasant weather, but when the days begin to take on summer heat the members commence to think of home and accelerate their movements. A few hot days with the thermometer at 90 degrees would see a large amount of work dispatched in a short time.

Our Canadian Trade

The tariff bill still holds the attention of congress and the business interests of the commonwealth are watching with great interest the evolution of the Payne measure in the senate.

For a number of years there has been a movement on foot in New England for reciprocity with Canada. It has been felt by some citizens that the United States was not doing sufficient business with the Dominion and that under a treaty of reciprocity it might be possible for the states to get a larger proportion. A report just issued by the Canadian government is quite a valuable contribution to this discussion. From these figures it appears that our imports into Canada are constantly increasing and have been since the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty between the two countries after the Civil war while during the life of that treaty our exports and imports to and from Canada declined. In 1869 Canada imported 34 percent of her merchandise from the United States. In 1879 she imported 53.5 percent from the United States. In 1899 her imports from the United States formed 59 percent of her total imports. For the fiscal year ending March 31, 1909, she bought over 60 percent of all her imports from this country.

England and Canadian Trade

This condition of things has been a source of great displeasure to England, since the United States is rapidly supplanting that country in its business relations with this British province. Various efforts have been made to counteract this situation but without avail. A few years ago the Dominion of Canada granted a preferential import rate of 25 percent to the mother country. As that was not effective it was shortly increased to 33 1-3 percent, and still the Dominion continues to buy American goods and to sell us in return her natural and manufactured products.

It is perfectly natural that this should be so. The merchants of Canada can order goods in the United States and have them delivered within forty-eight hours. If they buy in England it is a matter of weeks before they receive them. In addition to that, Canadian people have become accustomed to American goods; they like the quality and the price is not exorbitant when value is considered.

It is extremely doubtful if the volume of trade between the United States and Canada would be increased by the negotiation of a treaty of reciprocity.

The two countries are next-door neighbors and their trade relations seem to be excellent and likely to so continue. The chief bond which binds the Dominion to England is one of sentiment, and sentiment has to give way in plain business transaction.

The Next State Convention

The next Republican state convention will be held in Boston on Thursday, Oct. 2, in Symphony hall at 10:30 a. m. The convention will be entitled to 1816 delegates, which is the largest held by the Republican party in this state for a number of years. It is due to the fact that Governor Draper received such a magnificent vote last November, the representation being based on the vote for governor in the preceding year. Several prominent Republicans have been mentioned in connection with the chairmanship of the convention, among them being Congressmen Washburn and Lawrence.

The return of prosperity is everywhere evident, not only in Massachusetts but in the rest of New England. Industries which have been running on short time have now resumed on full schedule time and everything indicates a great year for business. The stock market is almost invariably an accurate barometer of business conditions. The appreciation in the price of stocks during the last month or two has been so marked as to bring cheer to everybody. With labor and capital both fully employed and securing good returns, it may readily be concluded that panic days have disappeared, for the present at least, and that an era of prosperity is in prospect—in fact is here.

One of the first elements of prosperity is always the crop situation. Up to date the indications all point to splendid crops throughout the central and western part of the country and thus nothing seems to be lacking to the return of good times. In this state the evidence of prosperity is seen in the construction of new mills and workshops in many directions and especially in the woolen line.

Judge Dewey's Suit

The suit brought by former Judge Henry S. Dewey of Boston against members of the Good Government association revives the memory of the famous campaign of 1905. This was the campaign in which Judge Dewey prevented by his candidacy the election of Speaker Louis A. Frothingham, now lieutenant governor of the commonwealth. Mr. Dewey alleges that he suffered great mischief to his reputation at the hands of the Good Government association at that time. He is suing for over $76,000,000 which he seeks to recover at the hands of the defendants.

The case in many of its features is unique and is attracting considerable attention from the politicians as well as other citizens of the commonwealth. Mr. Dewey always handles his own cases in such matters and has done so in this instance.

Gaynor's Charges Against Police Commissioner Being Investigated

New York, June 3.—Sitting as a magistrate in private session, Mayor McClellan began an investigation today of charges made by Supreme Court Justice Gaynor against Police Commissioner Bingham of this city.

The case of George Duffy, 19 years old, who, Gaynor complains, was repeatedly arrested by the police on baseless charges, will be first taken up, and later testimony in general regarding Bingham's conduct in office will be heard.

In his letter to the mayor Gaynor in effect asks for Bingham's removal.

Telephone Protection

A SUBSCRIBER'S STORY—

As told to an official of the Traffic Dept.

ABOUT one o'clock this morning I accidentally overturned the telephone, which stood on a small table by my bedside, and it fell to the floor. As I picked it up I heard the operator say: "Number?" I explained what had happened, and apologized for having troubled him. He replied in an exceedingly pleasant tone of voice: "It's all right—no trouble at all, madam." I wish you would express to him my appreciation of his courtesy. I assure you I resumed my slumber with a new sense of security at the thought that someone was so near in case of need.

TWELVE THOUSAND LIVES EVERY YEAR

Awful Toll Exacted by Tuberculosis in Ireland

New York, June 7.—An appeal for co-operation in the effort recently inaugurated by the women of Ireland for prevention of the spread of tuberculosis in that island was made from the platform of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, last night, by the countess of Aberdeen, wife of the lord lieutenant of Ireland, who arrived in New York Saturday night.

The appeal was directed particularly to Americans of Irish descent, whom Lady Aberdeen regarded as most directly affected by the toll of 12,000 lives, exacted in Ireland yearly by the disease.

Thanks to the campaign of education conducted by the Women's National Health Association of Ireland in the past two years, she said, the mortality as regards tuberculosis had been decreased this year "by a decimal point."

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

Seriously, are you perfectly contented to go on living in a rented house year after year, paying out a large percentage of what you earn by hard work just to keep a roof over your head?

If not then take the bull by the horns and buy a home for yourself.

If you think you haven't enough ready money, you had better investigate. It doesn't take as much perhaps, as you have been figuring on.

And don't let any scruples against assuming an obligation deprive you. If everybody had to wait until they had enough saved to buy outright, mighty few people would be living in their own houses.

See me about this without delay.

Principal Edwin N. Lovering of the High school has been notified by the Worcester Polytechnic Institute that the Winchester High school has been granted the renewal of certificate privilege, under which pupils may be admitted to that institution upon his certificate in lieu of examination. This continues until Jan. 1, 1912, and is supplimentary to the certificate privilege granted by the N. E. College Entrance Examination Board, of which notice was published last week. It is not uncommon for this certificate privilege to be withdrawn from the school to which it has been issued, as has occured in various schools in this vicinity, but it has never yet been withdrawn from the Winchester High school.

The teachers contracts have been signed for next year in the public schools, there being only one change to date, that of the master of the Wadleigh school, which has been announced previously. It is expected, however, that vacancies will occur by the opening of school next fall owing to teachers leaving town for better salaries elsewhere.

Mr. A. A. Kidder and family are at Marblehead Neck for the summer.

On Sunday evening about nine o'clock an alarm of fire from box 38 called the department (and a big crowd as well) to a house on Spruce street occupied by an Italian family. The fire was in some bedding and was thought to have been caused by a lighted pipe. No water was turned on, the smoldering beding being thrown out of the window by the firemen.

At six o'clock on Sunday night one of the residents of the Italian colony on Swanton street started out with the proclamation of "doing up" a fellow countryman living on Irving street, taking a good sized razor with him to work with. He was taken into custody by the police and to the Woburn court on Monday. The judge did not deem the proofs sufficient to warrant sentence and he was discharged.

He illustrated the different methods of keeping ones self afloat by five examples, performed by Irving W. Small in the Mill pond, he using a canoe. Upon Mr. Murphy's direction Mr. Small tipped the canoe over, clung to it, supported himself by a paddle and righted the canoe. The large number of scholars who witnessed the exhibition attracted numerous carriages and automobiles on Pleasant street and the Parkway, even the electric cars stopping to see the fun.

VOL. XXVIII. NO. 50. WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, JUNE 18, 1909. PRICE, FIVE CENTS

REV. MR. DWIGHT RESIGNS.

Will Take Effect the 31st of July Next.

At the morning services at the Highland Bethany Chapel last Sunday Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight, D. D., read a letter resigning as pastor of the Society after having served for about four and a half years, during which time his ministry has been very successful. His resignation was not unlooked for, yet his announcement was received with feeling of sorrow. He was the first minister under the new church organization.

His letter of resignation was as follows:

WINCHESTER, MASS., June 13, 1909.

The Second Congregational Church of Winchester:

In January 1905 an invitation came to me to preach in what was then known as the Highland Bethany Chapel, at Winchester Highlands. With the exception of a Sunday now and then I have been preaching here ever since; for these nearly four and a half years not a single service having been lost through ill health. After a year's ministry in charge of the Chapel work, I sounded the call for a church organization, to which fifty-six persons responded, the First Church, with friendly feeling for this work, supplying twenty-three of that number, some eighteen others joining on confession of faith. For some twenty years previously there had been a religious work, with irregular fluctuations, at the Highlands, but no one had succeeded in forming a church until I, with the blessing of God, drew the people together for church organization.

In the period during which I have been pastor of the Second Congregational Church, which I founded and named, I have not failed to preach sound doctrine, and in that time the membership has about doubled. The ideal which I have steadily held up has been that of an evangelical community church at the Highlands. For this service—which from the fact that it was an initial church enterprize can never be duplicated—I was willing to accept a small and inadequate salary, but I have never asked you to raise it, and have been in no sense self-seeking. The hardest work has been done, and now others, some of them entering the church in easier times, are reaping where I have sown. Yet, for whatever of good has been accomplished, the glory belongs to God.

And now, in view of my abundant opportunities in the larger kingdom of Christ, I feel that I cannot be expected to make any further sacrifices for this church, which I have loved so well. I hereby resign the pastorate of The Second Congregational Church of Winchester, that resignation to take effect on July 31, 1909.

I add a prayer that the Second Church may ever be faithful to the doctrinal teaching of its Creed and Covenant, and zealous of good works.

SECOND POP CONCERT.

The second annual Pop Concert of the Calumet Club was held last evening. A concert was given on the piazza of the club house by the Woburn Brass Band from 8 until 11.15, and ices and soft drinks were served at numerous tables placed about the billiard rooms and piazzas. The affair proved an even greater success than that of a year ago, it being attended by a large gathering of club members and their friends.

VENETIAN FETE.

Not for many a day has there been a prettier scene than the Venetian Fete given on the lawn of Mrs. Roland H. Sherman, Everett avenue, last Saturday evening. The scene was enchanting beyond question because of the numerous Chinese lanterns, pretty costumes of the ladies, the placid waters of Mystic Lake, the numerous canoes, the charming music, and last but not least the costumes of the Venetian troubadors and their singing and playing, and also the costumed pretty waiters. It was an ideal place for such an event it couldn't be better, and there was no attempt at improvement. Scores of small tables were scattered over the terraced grounds, while from the large balcony was stationed the orchestra. Once seated at a table the costumed waiters served refreshments—and who could resist the appeals of these young ladies.

The orchestral music and the troubadours caused the evening to pass rapidly and oh, so pleasantly. Mr. John Little of Malden was the conductor of the orchestra, and he proved to be no novice at wielding the baton. Mrs. W. H. W. Bicknell, with her tambourine and Venetian songs and dance, was the lite of the evening, as she sang, danced and tamboed her way into the hearts of the large company—and it might be said, their pocketbooks too. Mr. Bicknell, who is always so willing to give of his time and talents for every good cause, was in large measure responsible for the success of the evening. And this brings to mind, the report that Mr. Bicknell proposes to form an orchestra in town next winter. If this is done, the inhabitants will be surprised at the excellent talent within the confines of Winchester unknown at the present time. But more anon.

A motor boat took many parties for a sail on the lake.

The Fete was given under the auspices of the Woman's Guild, and a goodly sum was realized. The affair was chairmaned by Mrs. T. E. Thompson, and as all know, this lady is a worker; she knows how to plan and her undertakings spell success. Mrs. Thompson was ably assisted by Mrs. John W. Suter, Mrs. Roland H. Sherman, Mrs. Anthony Kelley, Mrs. George W. Fitch, Mrs. H. S. Underwood, Mrs. Francis D. Cleveland, Mrs. Edward O. Punchard, Mrs. Addison R. Pike, Mrs. Rufus Crowell, Mrs. Sylvester H. Taylor, Mrs. Minnie Ely, Mrs. A. P. Weeks, Mrs. W. E. Wilde, Mrs. William I. Kendall, Miss Edith Billings.

The above ladies were assisted by the following: decorations, Mr. and Mrs. Bicknell, Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Thompson; refreshments, Mrs. F. D. Cleveland, Mrs. Wm. C. Sache, Mrs. W. I. Kendall, Miss Edith Billings, Mrs. T. E. Thompson—all of whom were in costume—Helen Russell, Tabor Carr, Elinor Barta, Marian Gray, Dorothy Brown, Gladys Burt, Alfred Little, Theo. Hurd, Elizabeth Hopkins, Margaret Lawrence Ruth Carpenter, Ruth McCall, Margaret McCall, Elmer Curry, Geo. Marshall, Sanford Ames, George Hazeltine, Dudley Murphy, Roy Gilman; punch, Mrs. Sylvester Taylor, Mrs. Addison R. Pike, Mrs. Minnie C. Ely, assisted by Ruth Lawrance, Edmund Cottle, Philip Suter, Ethel Sargent; candy, Mrs. Geo. W. Fitch, Miss Lucy Jenkins, Mrs. R. H. Sherman, Miss Cumings.

The four posters by Miss Billings were auctioned by Mr. Sylvester Taylor and brought $10. The Troubadors were Messrs. Erastus Badger, Charles Main, Robert Boone, Eliott Barta, Chas. Dutch. Mrs. Bicknell was soloist to their accompaniments and several times they sang the chorus. These gentlemen made a charming feature of the evening, their music and the singing sounding beautiful on the night air.

A DIRTY LOOKING POND.

The small pond in front of Wedgemere station is not beautiful to look upon. There is no need, however, to remind the many citizens who take the train at this station of this fact. They see conditions every day, and some say, smell them too, while property owners are not enthusiastic because they have the pond close by their real estate, which they do not at the present time consider an asset. The reason for the dislike of prevailing conditions is that the shores are untidy, the mud black and slimy, and a breeding place for mosquitos and noxious smells. Desiring to improve conditions a numerously signed petition was sent to the Metropolitan Park Commissioners, and the following was the reply:

Mr. George Everett Pratt,
Winchester, Mass.

Dear Sir:—The Commission have considered the petition of yourself and others that they make improvements in the portion of Mystic Valley Parkway near Fenwick road and Wedgemere Station, and direct me to make reply as follows.

The Commission desire to make clear that they are not responsible for, and do not wish to assume, any authority to interfere with the conditions so far as the water in the pond and river are concerned, as the height of the water is a matter not within their control. So far as the improvement of the land in question is concerned, they are obliged to answer that there are no funds at their disposal available for the improvement which you suggest. As to the land immediately along Fenwick road, it has occurred to them that some of the petitioners may, for their own convenience, desire to improve it at their own expense, and the Commission direct me to say that they would have no objection to this course, if a plan therefor should be presented such as they could approve.

Very truly yours,
JOHN WOODBURY, Secretary.

STUART—JOHNSON.

A pretty June wedding was solemnized in the Church of the Epiphany on Monday afternoon, when Mr. Arthur Thompson Stuart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Stuart of Lyndonville, Vt., was united in marriage to Miss Edna Jewett Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Johnson of Highland avenue. About 100 intimate friends and relatives of the two families witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. John W. Suter, rector of the church.

The wedding party entered to the strains of Lohengrin, played by Mr. Albert Willson of Somerville, and during the ceremony the choir sang "O Perfect Love," Mendelssohn's march and the Recessional being played and sung at its close.

The bride wore a gown of white bengaline, with a waist of dutchess and point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Miss Barbara B. Johnson, her sister, was maid of honor, being dressed in lilac colored chiffon and carrying a bouquet of orchids. Attending the bride were two little flower girls, Myrtie Dunn and Carline Murphy, who were dressed in tunics of white pongee and carried baskets of sweet peas and forget-me-nots. They wore wreaths of myrtle and flowers tied with pink ribbon. Mr. George W. Grebenstein of Cambridge was best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The church was decorated for the ceremony with Canterberry bells and palms, which were massed in front of the altar and arranged to form an arch over the chancel. The ushers were Messrs. Henry McCall and Lawrence Symmes of Winchester, Arthur Soule of New York and Robert Thompson of Gloucester.

Following the ceremony at the church a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents at Dun-Cairn on Highland avenue, attended by a large number of guests. In the absence of Mrs. Charles Stuart, the groom's mother, who was confined to her home by illness, the bridal party were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Samuel W. McCall, her sister. At the house the decorations consisted of mountain laurel and cut flowers, yellow roses predominating.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart left at six o'clock for their wedding tour, and upon their return will reside in Brookline.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The union meeting of last week was devoted in part to the memory of Mrs. Ann G. Burbank and Mrs. Caro Bowers, both long identified with the union and its work. Mrs. A. A. Rowe conducted the services and Mrs. Holt and Mrs. Herrick assisted.

At the business session there was a Quiz prepared by Miss Elizabeth Gordon, acting president of the Massachusetts Union, to enlighten members and others with regard to the proposed amendment to the State constitution, or rather upon the referendum—which will give the voters of the Commonwealth the opportunity to express themselves on the question of prohibition of the liquor traffic. The State Union is planning a vigorous campaign and hopes to meet with success in its efforts. The recent temperance tidal wave in the other parts of the country make even Massachusetts people hopeful.

Mrs. A. A. Rowe, 6 Bacon street, superintendent of the Flower Mission Work spoke of the needs of her department and asked for contributions of flowers or other help in carrying on the work. The flowers are sent in early Saturday mornings to the Congregational House and thence are distributed among the sick and poor. Any one who is interested is asked to send flowers to Mrs. Rowe Friday afternoon or evening or very early Saturday morning.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

The Misses Josephine and Cora A. Quimby, with their cousin, Miss Edna Dow of Brighton, sailed June 12th for a three months' trip to Europe. The party will visit Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Belgium, France and England.

The fire department was called out on Wednesday night for a suspicious fire in the house at the foot of Water street occupied by Wm. J. Hanley. Owing to the fact that boxes 43 and 44 were both pulled at the same time, the first alarm could not be read, but it was followed by a second alarm from box 44, pulled by members of the fire department living in the vicinity. The first alarm was rung in by boys who were passing the premises and saw the fire. At that time the family were sitting outside of the house. When the firemen arrived they found two fires burning, both in closets, one in the parlor and one in the kitchen. Chemicals extinguished the fires with little damage, and the state fire marshal will investigate the matter today.

"What is the loss?" "What is the insurance?" These are the first questions asked after every fire. If you are not well insured, better attend to it at once. George Adams Woods Agent.

Principal and Mrs. Arthur P. Briggs of the Wadleigh School will entertain the teachers of that school and the special teachers in the schools of the town, at their home on Park avenue on Tuesday evening.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Esther O'Connor, and her gown was of fawn color messaline, and she carried a large bouquet of Killarney roses.

The best man was Mr. Daniel E. Sullivan of this town, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, only the immediate families being present.

The young couple were the recipients of many handsome and costly presents, included in which was a substantial purse of gold, the gift of the members of Winchester Council, No. 210 K. of C. of which the groom is a member and also Past Grand Knight.

WESTON, Ocean-to-Ocean Walker,

Said recently: "When you feel down a dozen times there is no use living. Just take your head thoughts with you and walk them off before you have waited a while things will look rosier. Just try it." Have you noticed the increase in walking of late in every community? Many attribute it to the comfort which Allen's Foot Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into your shoes, gives to the millions now using it. As Weston said, "It has real merit."

The Boston Elevated's mammoth terminal at Sullivan Square is to be rebuilt, at the cost of a million dollars. The plans for this immense undertaking are now in the hands of the Massachusetts Railroad Commission for approval, and few, if any, changes in these plans are expected to be called for by the members of the commission. Within two months a great force of workmen will doubtless be set to work on the Sullivan Square Terminal.

WHAT ROOSEVELT THINKS.

Says ex-President Roosevelt in his first editorial in the Outlook, March 6, 1909:

"Every owner, editor or reporter of a conscientiously and ably conducted newspaper or periodical is an asset of real value to the whole community. It would be difficult to over-estimate the amount of good which can be done by the men responsible for such a publication—responsible for its editorial columns, responsible for its news columns, responsible for its general policy. We have many newspapers and periodicals, big and little, of this kind. But we also have many that are emphatically not of this kind."

THE HANDY FLAT-IRON.

Flat-irons that are heated on a coal range or upon some kind of an open flame stove have made any kind of pressing or general ironing a persistent and ever-recurring nuisance and usually an actually dangerous operation. To tramp back and forth between the stove and the ironing board is more exhausting than a housewife usually thinks. Careful estimates make the distance that one walks in doing the weekly ironing reach the unreasonable total of 200 miles a year. Such work under ideal conditions would be tedious when it must be done in the sweltering heat of the kitchen or laundry the affliction is a little short of barbarism. If the work must be done in an evil smelling air that cannot be changed because the wind blows in the windows and cools the irons the conditions are not only unsanitary—they are dangerous.

This accounts for the great popularity of the electric flat-iron. The iron can be attached by means of a flexible cord and plug to any lamp socket and the heat comes at just the moment you want it. This heat can be stopped as easily as it can be turned on. There is no waste energy, no unreasonable heating of the room and no walking back and forth for fresh irons. As one lady remarked recently, "I think the electric flat-iron is the greatest invention that has come to the home in recent years. It is so comfortable to work with. One is surprised to find the bottom of the iron so hot when there is almost no heat radiating from the iron. One of the nicest things about it is that I can stand at the board and give my whole thought to what I am ironing, and do not worry about keeping a fire up or pay any attention to whether my iron is getting cold or not."

These electric flat-irons can be secured from the Edison Company by simply calling them on the telephone or dropping them a postal card. A flat-iron will be sent for a month on trial, express pre-paid, and no obligation whatever will be incurred to purchase. If, for any reason, the person trying the iron should not wish to keep it a representative of the Edison Company will call for it at the end of thirty days. The Company's interesting advertisement in another part of this paper sets forth these points most clearly.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of those all round vaudeville bills that has made Keith's Boston Theatre famous the world over is announced for the week of June 21st, for it is made up of favorites, some of them favorites of the legitimate as well as the vaudeville stage, while there are a number of features of particular moment.

Ralph C. Herz when he appeared at this house over a year ago made one of the biggest hits of any comedian who has ever entered vaudeville from the legitimate field.

Another favorite locally is Eva Taylor, who was one of the most popular members of the old Castle Square Stock Company. Another star act of the real vaudeville sort is the Millman Trio, which has been declared to be the greatest company of slack wire walkers this country has ever seen. Still another important feature will be contributed by Augusta Close, who attained the distinction of being the original pianologist.

A Horse's Toe Nails.

Few persons realize that a horse's hoof is really the same thing as the toe nails of human beings or of animals having toes. The horn of a hoof grows just as a toe nail does. The hoof grows more rapidly in unshod horses than in those wearing shoes, and it grows faster in horses which are well groomed and well fed. But on an average the horn grows about a third of an inch a month. Hind hoofs grow faster than fore hoofs. The toe of the hoof being the longest part, it takes longer for the horn to grow down there than at the heel. For instance, the toe will grow entirely down in from eleven to thirteen months, while the heel will grow down in from three to five months. As the new horn grows out any cracks or defects in the old gradually work down to where they can be cut off, just as with human finger nails you can watch the progress of a bruise from the root to the tip.—London Answers.

Pretty Absentminded.

A book about George Canning and his friends contains among its anecdotes two which deal with Hookham Frere and the absentmindedness for which he was noted. Frere married Lady Errol, and "while they were engaged he took her into supper at a ball. While they were talking he drank up the glass of wine he had poured out for her and then took her back supperless to the ballroom. After the wedding he went straight from the church to Mr. Murray, the publisher, who asked him to stay to dinner, to which he very nearly agreed, remembering only just in time that Lady Errol was waiting to start on the honeymoon."

Scotch Profits.

"We have decided," said the head of a Glasgow firm, "to conduct our business in future on the profit sharing principle. We shall begin at once on the basis of last year's results."

"We are delighted to hear it," replied the foreman, speaking for the men. "May we ask what were the last year's results?"

THE USEFUL PIG.

A Colored Woman's Story of a Trade and Its Results.

A colored woman was being examined at a conference at Tuskegee. "Do the people in your community own homes?" came the query from Mr Booker Washington.

"I think's they's fixing to own 'em, sah."

"But do they own them?"

"A heap of times you can't jest tell, sah. But they's holding 'em down."

"Do you own your home?"

"Yes, sah, I do,' proud'y. "And I can tell you jest how I got it. I swapped a puppy dog for it."

"Tell us about it."

"Well, it was this way. When I started I didn't have anything at all but jest a little yaller puppy dog.

"I took the dog over to my brother-in-law's. He had eight little bits of pigs, oh, jest so little, and I swapped the puppy with him for one of the pigs. It was sech a little pig that it didn't look like it would live, but I nursed it good, and I prayed to the Lord to make that little pig come for'ard to do me good, and the pig lived and grew.

"The first year I turned her out, and when she came back in the fall she brought me seven little pigs with her. That was my start. I've never had to buy any meat since. This winter I've killed three hogs, and I've got another at home now ready to kill. I've got forty acres of land now, all paid for, and a house, and it all come from that one little puppy."

"Do you hear that," exclaimed Mr Washington, "you men? Some of you'd better go back home and swap your dogs for pigs!" – Philadelphia Ledger.

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

It Illustrates the Wonderful Ability of the Ancient Egyptians.

The cost of the labor and material necessary to duplicate the great pyramid of Gizeh at the present time would amount to considerably more than $50,000,000, according to a paper read before the Society of Engineers in New York city by E. S. Wheeler, says the American Architect. The cost of the material alone is estimated at $48,000,000.

This structure, one of the wonders of the world, is founded on solid rock at a depth of about 120 feet below the surface level and rises to a height of 454 feet. Its base covers an area of almost fifteen acres.

Mr. Wheeler's scheme for the reproduction of this pyramid contemplates first the setting of a base of concrete. This would represent about 2,000,000 cubic yards of material and would cost at least $10,000,000. The estimate for the superstructure is about $38,000,000, and it would contain 3,313,000 cubic yards of backing stone and 140,000 cubic yards of facing stone. Mr Wheeler's estimate of labor is 24,000,000 days.

These figures are cited to show the great engineering skill of the Egyptians and the fact that no task in construction appeared to be too large for a people whose extant monuments showed their patience and ability to overcome obstacles that would daunt even the modern engineer.

Curious Epitaphs.

Old New England graveyards are not the only ones which contain curious epitaphs. The old time dweller of Maine who "died of a falling tree," as his headstone asserts, had a fellow in misfortune in faroff Austria, as is shown by W. A. Baillie-Grohman's "The Tyrol and the Tyrolese."

A wooden slab, painted with the representation of a prostrate tree under which lies a man in spread eagle attitude, bears testimony to the violent death of "Johann Lemberger, aged fifty-two and three-quarters years. This upright and virtuous youth was squashed by a falling tree."

The record of Michael Gerstner is even more succinct and convincing. He "climbed up, fell down and was dead."

Horse Sense.

A horse is so constructed by nature that he has no desire to do anything which will injure his health. He walks around whatever is not good for him and without a struggle. But man is so constructed that whatever is not good for him he wants to do. He eats too much, and he eats too fast. He drinks while eating, and there is nothing proper that he does without an effort. Why this distinction in favor of a horse? It may be said that a horse has only instinct, while a man has reason, which he should use. It is a pity that man was not given more instinct and less reason.—Atchison Globe.

First Aid.

"If you were called upon to deal with a hysterical person," asked the examiner at the emergency class, "what would you do?"

"I'd amputate his funny bone," said the student with a turn for surgery and humor.—Youth's Companion.

The Invincible Britons.

Smith—The British, I believe, rarely make mention of our Revolution. Jones—No, but I understand they occasionally refer to it as a conflict in which some British colonists defeated a force of Hessians.—London Tatler.

Making Good.

"Is he making good in his new line of work?"

"Yes, indeed. He is already finding fault with the way his boss carries on the business."—Detroit Free Press.

The most essential feature of a man is his improvableness.—Fiske.

SWISS RAILROADS.

After Four Years of State Ownership the Outlook Is Not Bright—A Big Deficit and an Extravagant and Unsatisfactory Service.

There is no more thrifty and law abiding race in the world than the Swiss. In spite of their three languages there is a unity of spirit and purpose which should make national enterprise a success if it could be made so anywhere. Salaries of officials are small and the sense of responsibility in public office is great. Everything, in fact, makes for the success of enterprises under state auspices.

In the year 1900 Switzerland voted to buy up her railroads, and by 1903 such roads as could be acquired were completely under public control. No one expected a profit in the first year or two, but there was a fourth deficit in 1907, which, added to that of 1908, makes up a total of considerably over 5,000,000 francs, which, it need hardly be said, is a lot of money for that little country. As some 25,000,000 francs have been put into new construction in the last fiscal year, there is another million francs to be added here for interest and sinking fund, and the result, taken all around, is by no means cheerful.

It is noteworthy also that the number of passengers has increased yearly, but against this public pressure has been sufficient to bring about reduced fares and lower freight rates. Operating expenses have increased under public ownership. Service in certain important respects, including speed, punctuality and discipline, seems to have deteriorated, and the management shows the usual disposition in such cases to become increasingly bureaucratic and decreasingly intelligent.

It will be seen that the Swiss public official is not different from his fellow elsewhere. He has an assured position in the government employ. The extent of possible promotion is marked out for him, provided he makes no serious mistakes compromising his superiors; he is taken care of at the end of his service, and his only real ambition is to serve out his time with as little exhausting effort or friction as possible. Like most public servants anywhere, he has everything to lose and nothing to gain by intelligent initiative and enterprise, and the result is there what it has been elsewhere.

It need hardly be said that such improvements as have been made have been dictated by political considerations or, in other words, that they have been made to benefit districts and voters who could make the best political return, irrespective of the larger proposition of the general railroad service of the country. The management during the five years in which the government control has been complete has been increasingly extravagant, with the same disposition to regard the public pocket as inexhaustible and the same indifference to running at a loss properties which were formerly conducted privately at a profit.

Perhaps the lesson will hardly be needed by those acquainted with the management of New York's municipal ferries. The example, however, should be interesting to that wider circle of readers outside New York who may not be fully conversant with this our crowning demonstration of "how not to do it."—Wall Street Journal.

THE PEOPLE PAY THE PIPER.

The Ultimate Tax Burden Shown In Higher Rents and Dearer Living For the Workingman.

Our tax systems are such as to make it appear that the burdens of government are borne by the propertied classes. They do, indeed, nominally pay the taxes levied, but in reality these are shifted until, according to the laws of incidence of taxation, the burden finally rests in most instances upon those who apparently pay no taxes, but who actually do pay through increased rents and cost of commodities.

Thus the workingman, who knows little about shifting and incidence and who seldom stops to consider how and how far he is paying the cost of government, sees little benefit to be derived from a more economical administration, but much to be gained from increased governmental expenditures, high salaries and higher wages, which increase the demand for labor and the reward which labor receives. Doubtless a system of taxation whereby the consumer would be made to pay taxes in the first instance and whereby increased governmental expenditures would be immediately reflected in the increased price of commodities—if it were possible to devise such a system—would produce a greater interest in governmental finance.—Milo R. Maltbie, Member of New York Public Utilities Commission.

Fire Losses and M. O.

Municipal ownership of public utilities is receiving some hard jolts in Topeka, which has during the last two months suffered fire losses to the extent of a third of a million because of inadequate water pressure. If a privately owned plant in Topeka had given such poor service the people at the capital would have run the managers out of town. As the matter now stands they have to take the blame themselves. – Leavenworth (Kan.) Times

One of the Results of M. O.

Emil Lange, a florist, recovered a verdict of $3,000 from a jury in the supreme court for injuries received while coming from Staten Island on a municipal ferryboat. When the jury returned the verdict Justice Dayton remarked, "This is one of the results of municipal ownership."—New York Morning Telegraph.

GO UP AHEAD.

Then See That You Stay There—You Can if You Work Hard.

Thirty years ago in a poor schoolhouse in a back district a boy at the foot of the class unexpectedly spelled a word that had passed down the entire class.

"Go up ahead," said the master, "and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."

The boy hung his head. But the next day he did not miss a word in spelling. The brighter scholars knew every word in the lesson, hoping there might be a chance to get ahead, but there was not a single one. Dave stayed at the head. He had been an indifferent speller before, but now he knew every word.

"Dave, how do you get your lesson so well now?" said the master.

"I learn every word in the lesson and get my mother to hear me at night, then I go over them in the morning before I come to school, and I go over them at my seat before the class is called up."

"Good boy, Dave!" said the master. "That's the way to have success; always work that way and you'll do."

Dave is today the manager of a big lumber company, and he attributes his start to the words:

"Go up ahead and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."—Genesee Courier.

DO HEARTS BREAK?

Human Nature the Same Despite Modern Improvements.

Broken hearts, so the British Journal of Nursing tells us, are quite out of fashion. The disease has become obsolete, and two reasons are assigned for this. In the first place, we are told that women do not fall in love as once they did. Mere children are not encouraged to think on love and matrimony, and then women, having come to riper years and sounder judgment before they decide to marry, do not let themselves fall into that state which was supposed to produce cardiac rupture.

One ventures to express the opinion that the statement is not altogether accurate.

Human nature does not alter from one generation to another. People "fell in love" a thousand years ago; a thousand years hence they will be doing the same. But they wore their rue with a difference; so will those who are to succeed us. The fact is we do not now wear our hearts on our sleeves, and we have learned that if lovers prove untrue or unworthy there are better and more dignified ways of lamenting them than souring our tempers, wasting away and allowing our friends and relations to treat us as derelicts.

Solomon's Bathtub.

With Chronicles as its authority, the Plumbers' Trade Journal says that the bathroom was an invention of King Solomon, who put it in use a thousand years before the Christian era. It was sinful to enter the sanctuary unless the body was perfectly clean, and for the accommodation of priests a bathtub was erected at the entrance to the temple. It was said of Solomon, "He made a molten sea of ten cubits from brim to brim round in compass and five cubits the height thereof, and a line of thirty cubits did compass it roundabout." According to the measurements, the Solomonian tub was forty-five feet in circumference at the top and six and one-half feet deep. It rested on carved figures of oxen and was of solid brass cast in one piece, decorated with a floral design. Connected with it there were ten small sinks, which were used for washing the offering.

Men Who Cheat Themselves.

I have known employees actually to work harder in scheming, shirking, trying to keep from working hard in the performance of their duties, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine, than they would have worked if they had tried to do their best and had given the largest, the most liberal service possible to their employers. The hardest work in the world is that which is grudgingly done. The youth who is always haggling over the question of how many dollars and cents he will sell his services for little realizes how he is cheating himself by not looking at the larger salary he can pay himself in increasing his skill, in expanding his experience and in making himself a better, stronger, more useful man.

College Foolishness Barred.

"John," said the farmer, "I've given you the best education the college had in the shop."

"Yes, sir."

"Never stood back fer expense?"

"Never."

"You speak six languages?"

"Perfectly."

"So fur, so good. Now, listen. Don't swear at the mule in Greek. Don't use no Latin terms to him, an' fling no French his way. Use the Georgy dialect that you an' the mule wus raised to. It's my opinion that the mule won't stand no college foolishness."—Atlanta Constitution.

Judge Hoar's Retort.

Judge Hoar and General Butler were opponents in a case of a new trial. General Butler quoted, "Eye for eye, skin for skin, tooth for tooth—yea, all that a man hath—will he give for his life."

To which Judge Hoar replied, "Yes, the devil quoted that once before in a motion for a new trial."

There is no tyrant like custom and no freedom where its edicts are not resisted.—Bovee.

A Curious Thermometer.

Otto de Guericke, burgomaster of Magdeburg, made a curious thermometer, which was twenty feet long and gorgeous with blue paint and gilt stars. It consisted of a large globe fastened to a tube, both of copper. The tube was bent upon itself to form a very narrow U, in which was placed the requisite amount of alcohol. One arm of the U was shorter than the other and open at the top. On the liquid was a float, to which was attached a cord passing over a pulley. At the other end of this cord was hung a gilt angel, its finger pointing to a scale on which the degrees were painted.

Preparing For the Worst.

Both boys had been rude to their mother. She put them to bed earlier than usual and then complained to their father about them. So he started up the stairway, and they heard him coming.

"Here comes papa," said Maurice. "I am going to make believe I am asleep."

"I'm not," said Harry. "I'm going to get up and put something on."—Ladies' Home Journal.

News items, lodge meetings society events, personals, etc., sent to this office will be welcomed by the Editor.

State Tax.

Winchester's state tax will be $3290.00 less than last year.

Five Minute Rule.

In presenting the rules at the forthcoming town meeting for its guidance, speakers should be limited to five minutes. Of course the meeting could extend the time. It might be well, however, to give this a trial.

A Pleasant Trip to Him.

The many friends of Rev. H. E. Hodge, pastor of the Baptist Church, wish him much pleasure and rest on his trip to Portland, Oregon. The members of his church, recognizing the great amount of labor he has done in building up the church, made his journey to that far off land easy and free from anxiety and care. During the time that Rev. Mr. Hodge has been here he has done prodigious amount of work in strengthening and building up his church, and as all know, he has been eminently successful. May he have a pleasant journey, as he is deserving of a rest and change.

Should Work for Two Bridges Plan.

"Observations" who is a pretty well informed person and a close observer says that the special grade crossing commission has decided upon a one bridge plan at the station as a means of abolishing the present grade crossing. In addition to this, the STAR has been informed, that two of the commissioners are favorable to the scheme of raising up the centre of the town about the crossing, provided Winchester will pay $50,000 additional over what its share would be if this plan was adopted. If this should prove to be true, then there is no likelihood of this scheme being agreed to, for the citizens will never favor burdening the town to such an extent. The longer this matter drags, the firmer convinced are we that the Redfern two bridges scheme is the best solution of this vexing problem. As the STAR said some time ago, unless the citizens take hold and push the Redfern plan, the town will be forced to get along with one bridge, and that out of the direct lines of travel. Raising the centre of the town is prohibitive because of the great expense. This was apparent at the numerous hearings.

The Redfern scheme has never been worked out, nor given the consideration that it deserved. The late Charles E. Redfern made a thorough study of the situation, and after doing so, drew up plans in the rough. He had no interest in the matter, other than that he believed his scheme was the best solution, consequently he did not feel that he should spend his money to have the plans properly worked out, nor that he should have advocates at the hearings to push the plans.

Mrs. L. W. Potter of 29 Harvard street has gone to New York to visit her son, Arthur L. Potter, formerly of this town.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

A question that might well be asked the selectmen at the town meeting, or a vote of instruction passed, is why are not the puplic service corporations compelled to keep their poles painted? Notice that wretched looking pole almost in front of the main entrance to the Town Hall. Why are such poles permitted? Here is a way that the town's appearance can be improved very much and without any expense, and it is wholly because the board does not make the request that it is not done.

I hear that we are to have different bands at the Manchester field concerts this year. This will be an improvement over hearing the same one every time as heretofore, but it would be still more satisfactory if some of the concerts were given in the evening. This is done in other places and there is no good reason why we should be discriminated against. However, if the people will not take the trouble to make a kick that will be felt they will have to stand it and deserve to. This town will forget how to kick if it does not wake up soon.

The proposed electric railroad from Boston to Lowell and Lawrence through the westerly part of Winchester would be, very serious damage to this town and should get no support here. It is not needed for a through line as the territory is now well served, and as soon as the railroad situation is cleared by the passage of the holding bill it will be better served in the near future. The town meeting will have a chance to vote upon it and there should be a very full attendance because of its importance.

Well, our grade crossing commission has labored long and finally brought fourth a mouse, or perhaps rat, is the better word. It has decided upon a one bridge scheme at the station and I predict it will not get six votes at any town meeting. The proposition is absurd, ridiculous and vicious. The commission now wants at least thirty days more to prepare details, but decided to report the general scheme so that the voters might express themselves upon it. Well, the vote to pass is that we will fight to the end any one bridge plan at the station, no matter what the details are. What a farce it would be to close up the centre and wander back and fourth down there? Or are they aiming to have us build a second bridge at our own expense? Are we asleep?

AN UNDENOMINATIONAL MOVEMENT.

Cambridge is to be congratulated on the prospect for a broader undenominational movement than has ever been undertaken. The meeting Wednesday evening to form a Federation of Church Men's Clubs demonstrated that denominational lines can be ignored. Baptists, Methodists, Unitarians, Episcopalians, Swedenborgians, and representatives of other sects, fraternized without a suggestion that there were any differences of belief.

The movement to federate the men's clubs is an excellent one. Some of the churches have strong clubs; some have weak ones; some have none. Every church should have one. There is work for men which can be done only by organization. Some of this work is religious—to reach men through men, for the churches. Some of it is civic: The men's club affords an opportunity to bring men together for consulation and instruction upon civic problems. Some of it is altruistic—the setting of men to work for the benefit of the community and of the weak who need the help of the strong.

A church men's club is an indispensable thing for every church, but it cannot do its most effective work unless it is federated with other similar clubs, doing similar work. The comparison of experiences and of methods is absolutely necessary, and the mutual acquaintance and fellowship which federation makes possible is of great importance. The unity and enthusiasm of the preliminary federation meeting gives great promise.—[Cambridge Chronicle.

ELECTRIC RAILROAD HEARING

Messrs. J. Wells Farley and James F. Jackson opened the case for the Boston, Lowell and Lawrence Electric Railroad Co. before the Railroad Commission Monday and put on General Ames and the engineer. The Boston and Northern and Boston & Maine vigorously opposed and Somerville, Medford, Arlington and Winchester had their counsel present to oppose. Many citizens of Arlington and Winchester were present in opposition and the hearing room was full. The hearing was adjourned at 3.30 to Tuesday, July 6th, when the commission will view the routes, leaving Sullivan Square, Boston, at 9.45 o'clock. Wednesday, July 7th, and following days the hearings will go on at the Commission's office, 20 Beacon St., Boston. The Commission will probably arrive at the Winchester-Arlington line about 10.30 o'clock.

SCHOOL GRADUATION EXERCISES.

The graduation exercises of the High School will take place at the Town Hall, Tuesday evening, June 22nd, at eight o'clock, and those of the Wadleigh School, Friday evening, June 25th, at seven-thirty o'clock. All persons interested in the schools are cordially invited to attend, since these exercises are public, in the fullest sense of the term, with two slight modifications: a small part of the hall will be reserved for members of the immediate families of the pupils who are to graduate; and children will not be admitted unless accompanied by adults.

Subject to these provisions, which the experience of past years has shown to be desirable, the Town Hall will be free to all who wish to be present, and it is hoped that a large number will avail themselves of this opportunity to attend the closing exercises of the schools. The hall has been packed in recent years and the same will undoubtedly be true this year.

Following is the program of the High School exercises:

BENEFIT TO WINCHESTER

Editor of the STAR:

There is at present pending before the Railroad Commission a matter which cannot fail to be of interest to the people of Winchester, a petition for an interurban railway, which would connect Winchester directly with the rapid transit terminus of the Boston Elevated now situated at Sullivan Square.

If it is a matter of interest to Winchester, it is certainly common sense that the people should understand the matter, whatever their conclusion may be. There is nothing more likely to lead to mistakes that may prove serious than a judgment formed without full knowledge of the facts. If the first judgment is correct no one should fear the facts; if the facts prove it wrong the sooner this is known the better. Morever, there is no principle more fundamental to our town government than that everyone should be ensured fair play by being allowed a hearing.

In regard to this electric railroad it would seem that certain persons who are personally interested, for one reason or another, in defeating this project in Winchester have prejudiced the case and are endeavoring to make others follow their judgment without permitting a hearing to the other side. They have obtained a vote of the selectmen adverse to the proposition, but may we ask if anyone was notified that the selectmen were to pass on this question, or if the selectmen themselves were cognizant of all the facts and considered the matter in all its phases.

For instance,—do the people and did the selectmen know those facts?

That the proposed road is in no way a street railroad, but runs on its own right of way, with all grade crossings eliminated.

That it is proposed to run the cars with definite stops only, and on a fixed schedule.

That the cars on the new road will furnish a clean and comfortable means of access to the enlarged elevated Terminal at Sullivan Square in nine minutes if express trains are stopped in Winchester, in 12 minutes on accommodation trains.

That the people on the West Side of the town who now have to depend on the half-hourly Boston and Northern cars to get to either Arlington or the Winchester Station, will be given a good and convenient service.

That through the greater part of the town of Winchester the road will run in a cut, rendering it practically invisible at any distance.

That it is proposed to run late evening trains so that people can go to the theatre or dinner in Boston and return without being forced to hurry afterward to get home.

That it will furnish a quick, cool and pleasant method of reaching the city during the hot weather.

That the opposition is of much the same character as that which tried to prevent the Reading and Arlington electric cars from getting their right of way, and which hardly anyone would now advocate being removed.

These are but a few of the obvious advantages of the new road and we believe that the more it is studied the more apparent it will be that the road cannot be of general harm and will be of public benefit to our town. Whatever its opponents may think, this is at least possible, is it not fair to consider all the facts and give those who favor the road at least an opportunity to state their side.

Mr. Nathaniel M. Nichols is enjoying an automobile trip through New Hampshire with his brother. He expects to return the first of the week.

WHY NOT A FINANCE COMMITTEE?

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Of what use is a committee on town appropriations unless the committee can also somewhat control expenditures? The action of one town board the next evening after town meeting closed, adding the cost of another superintendent at a salary of $1500, to the town's expenses, is a case in point. Why should superintendence of its roads and sewers cost the town a clean $1500, more this year than last and why should not the town, or at least the oppropriation committee, have known of this proposed action and talked it over with the tax payers before putting a new and permanent $1500 yearly obligation on to the town? If the appropriation committee had even a veto control over town expenditures such a large addition to town expenses would not have been made without at least more publicity, and a chance for consideration by at least a committee of tax payers. The town report, or the STAR report of the selectmen's meeting when the $1500 was appropriated, did not contain one word informing taxpayers of the new expense incured, while a public debate on the subject would have let the tax-payers know all about it. Call it a finance committee, or what you will, some authority should control large expenditures, not specially voted for by the town, if town officers are to make such radical changes as has been made this year in the highway and sewer departments without consulting in the least those who pay the taxes and provide the money for such public liberality.

LANGUAGE OF MUSIC.

The Manner In Which It Appeals to the Human Heart.

To those musical agnostics who deny to music any beauties save those of design and maintain that of itself it cannot express ideas and feelings Redfern Mason makes appropriate reply.

But there is another side to the picture. What was it that made George II. rise in his place when they sang the "Hallelujah" chorus, thereby setting an example which is followed to this day? What was it in the finale of the fifth symphony that drew the Napoleonic veteran to his feet with the exclamation, "The emperor?" What sanctity in the Ambrosian hymns moved St. Augustine to tears?

During the wars of the French revolution it was forbidden, on pain of death, to play the "Ranz des Vaches" in the hearing of the Swiss soldiers, for so acute a longing for home did it bring upon them that they deserted in hundreds. Are we to think that there was no virtue in the music itself and that the effect produced was the outcome of purely accidental circumstances?

The Austrian government forbade Berlioz to play the "Rackoczy" march at Budapest, fearful of its effect on the inflammable Hungarians. Was the fire of patriotism kindled by the mere knowledge that the melody symbolized Hungary, or did the notes speak with tongues of flame?—Atlantic Monthly.

A LION HUNT.

Usually a Case In Which Hunters Goad the Game Into Combat.

There is a distinction in Africa between ordinary lions and "man eaters," says T. R. MacMechen in McClure's Magazine. The ordinary lion does not willfully attack man. The presence of lions roaming at night on the veldt is not disturbing to any native nor to whites who have come to understand the beast. Persons returning to their camps after nightfall do not notice the roaring of lions or the cries of leopards or hyenas.

It is seldom that people bent upon domestic errands carry weapons in the darkness, although at night the veldt of British East Africa is alive with roaming beasts, which may be heard from the verandas of the houses. Lions give the passing man a wide berth, day or night, when it is apparent that he means no mischief. An ordinary lion, even when wounded, will try flight before fight. When its escape is disputed it will, especially if wounded, try to maul its enemy with teeth and claws.

A lion hunt is usually a chase in which the hunters goad the game into combat. Once a lion has tasted human blood, however, it is no more afraid of man, but learns that he is the weakest of animals and the choicest of meat. Such a lion is known as a man eater because now he hunts man.

Ready Replies.

One of Lord Carmarthen's future constituents once asked the youthful candidate his opinion upon some abstruse question of which he knew nothing. "Let him alone!" cried another derisively. "Don't you see he's nothing but a baby?" "What do you think?" reiterated his inquirer heedless of the interruption and determined to have an answer. "I think," said Lord Carmarthen, with ready wit, "that it is high time for all babies to be in bed," and so saying he gathered up his papers and disappeared from the platform.

Again—and this last anecdote is so well known as to have become well nigh historical—at a crowded meeting just before his election, he was interrupted by the question, "Does your mother know you're out?" "Yes, she does," was the instant retort, "and by Tuesday night she will know I'm in." His prophecy proved correct, and he headed the poll by a large majority.

It was Pat who observed, after watching two men shoot at an eagle and kill it, that they might have saved the powder and shot, as the fall alone would have killed the bird.

And it was Pat again who, telling a story as original and being informed by one of his auditors that he had read it in the translation of a Latin work, cried out: "Confound those ancients! They are always stealing one's good thoughts."

The Real Scrap.

"We have a man in this prison who never tried to escape," declared the head keeper.

"What's he in for?" inquired the visitor.

"Bigamy," replied the head keeper.—Bohemian.

THE GRACEFUL ANTELOPE.

He Seems Born of Light and Nursed In the Lap of the Wind.

For me there have been no fairer days than when the antelope skimmed the plain with legs nebulous with speed on that low gentle canter whose deceptive motion left the best aimed bullet far behind. For the antelope is the only large animal that is wholly spirituelle. Graceful as he may seem when spurning the ground and swinging high over rocks and brush, to rebound like a ball at the next touch of earth, there is still something earthly about the deer. But the antelope seems born of light and nursed in the lap of the wind. All his movements show that he was meant for the air rather than the earth. Though Nature made a slight change in giving him legs instead of wings, she made no mistake, and her work has always been the wonder and love of the hunter. When troubles arise the deer takes to the harbor of the hills, but the antelope steers for the open sea. The farther the plain sweeps wide and free the more this gay rover loves its safety, and a run that to the deer would mean death is to him only a "breather" that warms him up to the race. Whether illumining the horizon like a shooting star in the clear morning air of the great plain or looming high, like a stilted ghost in the mirage of glowing midday, he is the most charming of all things that run, and his passing has left a great void that nothing can fill. The few that are left, protected as they are, give no idea of the effect produced on a lover of the open by one of the great bands of the days that were, strung out in a line almost like vapor with distance and speed, and vanishing as if in air over the land's outlying verge.—T. S. Van Dyke in Recreation.

THE NUMBER SEVEN.

It Rarely Occurs In the Science of Weights and Measures.

How would you define "seven?" The Standard Dictionary says it is "one more than six." Webster's calls it "one more than six or one less than eight." The abridged Webster says it is "five and two," and the Century's definition runs "one more than six; the sum of three and four."

In metrology—that is, the science of weights and measures—seven is comparatively rare. The seven days of the week form a striking example of its use, however.

Scholars have found, too, that the Egyptian cubit contained seven handbreadths. "Cubit" is from the Latin "cubitum," the elbow, or the distance from the elbow to the end of the middle finger. The Roman cubit was one and a half Roman feet or 17.4 English inches, but the royal Egyptian cubit, used in the building of the pyramids of Gizeh, perhaps 3500 B. C., has been learned from measuring sticks found in the tombs to have been 20.64 English inches. The ordinary cubit was divided into six palms or handbreaths, and the use of seven in the Egyptian cubit is ascribed by some investigators to a probable custom of placing the hand behind the elbow when measuring along walls with the forearm and leaving it on the wall until the arm was laid down again. It should be added that there are many other cubits of widely different values, both ancient and modern.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Rough on the Architect.

"When I got the order to design a big wholesale house for a firm that has stores in five cities besides New York naturally I was elated," said an architect. "'I'll plan a building that is bound to be satisfactory,' I said to myself, 'and then they will give me the commission for those new stores they expect to put up in those other five cities.'

"Well, I did turn out a splendid store—a store that was admired by everybody in the wholesale trade. My patrons were pleased, too, but instead of giving me an order for those other buildings they simply used the same plans over and over again and built all their houses alike. That's what I call playing a low down trick on a fellow."—New York Globe.

Perfectly Reckless.

The members of the church voted that their dearly beloved and devoted pastor should have a vacation, and so he decided that he would visit a brother worker in the neighboring village. This good brother, recognizing his fellow worker in the Lord way back among the congregation on Sunday morning and wishing to show every courtesy, asked him to lead in prayer. But the visitor calmly replied: "You'll have to excuse me, dear brother. I'm on my vacation."

Farsighted.

LINCOLN'S HOUSE.

An Occasion When He Did Not Recognize It at First Sight.

"Mrs. Lincoln played a good joke on her husband when he was practicing law and journeyed about from court to court on horseback," says Major Bittinger. "Those trips often took several weeks at a time.

"On one of these trips Lincoln was gone for about four weeks. He returned late one night. Stopping his horse, he dismounted at the usual place. He turned to go into the house and then stopped. Although he was a man of temperance, he thought he must have been imbibing on the sly some time that day, for before him stood a building he had never seen before. He thought it over for a minute and then went across the street and knocked at a friend's door. They were in bed, and some one sang out:

"'Who is it?'

"'Abe Lincoln,' was the reply. 'I've been looking for my house. Can you tell me where it is? Guess I must have been lost. I thought it was just across the way. When I went away the building was one story high, and now it is two.'

"It was explained to him that during his absence Mrs. Lincoln had added another story. He laughed and went back to the strange house."

He used to tell the joke on himself many times, according to the major.—National Magazine.

CONTINUOUS SHOWS.

They Were Started by B. F. Keith In a Boston Store.

It was in the month of January, 1883, that Mr. B. F. Keith, who had been studying the show business with far-seeing eyes for many years, presented, in a store that he had leased in Boston, the first continuous show ever seen on any stage. He paid his performers $20 a week for a single turn and $40 for double and required them to give eight or nine turns a day. His "top liner" or chief attraction was a pound and a half baby. The doors of his playhouse were thrown open at noon, and from that time until half past 10 at night the performance went on without interruption.

Patrons were allowed to spend the entire day in the theater, and at first so many availed themselves of this opportunity to get a substantial filling of amusement at a small cost that Mr. Keith realized that he must either abandon the idea of a continuous entertainment or else invent some method by which the audience could be driven out of the building and place made for those outside who were waiting for admittance. Necessity is the mother of invention, especially when it is mated with sharp Yankee wit, and it was thus that what is known as "the chaser" came into the world.—James L. Ford in McClure's Magazine.

A Ghost In a Clock.

Bashgstoke provides a remarkable story of a ghost in the form of a clock. At the approach of midnight each night the otherwise peaceful "grandfather" becomes inhabited by a spook. The ticking changes into a deep and peculiar thumping, the clock increases in stature, while a pair of gray feet protrude from beneath its base. Passing through transitional stages the thumping is replaced by a spasmodic breathing, and upon the stroke of 12 the pendulum door opens, revealing an enormous ashy gray hand with malshaped fingers. The clock face disappears, displaying a frightful gray head, large and round, with abnormally long, pale blue eyes. Beyond a quiet stroll, which causes weird tappings along the landings during the night, the apparition is inoffensive and is said to prove of great service in sending every one early to bed.—London Tit-Bits.

One View of Saving.

Ik Marvel, author of the "Reveries of a Bachelor," was all his life opposed to the modern commercial spirit. A young disciple from the west once visited the aged writer in his New England home. The youth, a poet, said he thought he would put away his verses and write magazine love stories, so as to able to save money.

But Mr. Mitchell frowned and shook his head.

"Saving," he said, "is the mania for depriving yourself of things which you want now for fear you may not have things which you won't possibly want forty years hence."

Francs and Dollars.

We like to read French stories, but every time francs are mentioned we stop to turn them into dollars. "She had 17,000 francs per year in the funds," the story will say, whereupon we stop to divide seventeen by five—to turn the francs into dollars and find out how much money the heroine had.—Atchison Globe.

The Occasional Hero.

"He woke up one morning to find himself famous."

"Well?"

"But people had forgotten all about him by the time the 4 o'clock extras were out."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Worse Off.

"The bachelor is worse off than the married man? How do you make that out?"

"The married man is afraid of only one woman; the bachelor is afraid of all of them."—Houston Post.

Didn't Get a Chance.

She—What did papa say when you asked for my hand? He—Why, he couldn't say a word. She—He couldn't? He—No; your mother was there!—Yonkers Statesman.

Nationalism In Music.

It is a curious fact that no great national music has ever been written among a people living under a republican form of government. The Swiss are, perhaps, the oldest example of a people living permanently under that regime, and there has never been a Swiss composer of any note or of even moderate ability. Against this it may be urged that the American democracy is unquestionably sui generis; that nothing like it has ever existed before, and that for this reason, being in a position to make precedent for ourselves we need not necessarily consider democracy per se as inimical to musical development. On the contrary, the very variety of the elements which are now forming the American nation would argue in favor of the possibility of the foundation of a national school of music, which, in uniting the characteristics of many peoples, might in time develop into something broader and stronger, fresher, more vital and more spontaneous than anything the world has hitherto seen. —Reginald de Koven in North American Review.

A Sign of Death.

There may have been many "signs" of death—so some people believe—but one described here is probably new to many. Mr. W. B. Cooper of Cheltenham tells of his father being ill, but not confined to bed and one sunny day in June when he walked across the garden another man, the facsimile of his father, met him and "apparently passed into him."

"Shortly after my father came to me and said, 'Did you see me go across the garden?' I said, 'Yes.' 'Well,' he said, 'I shan't be here long. Our family see themselves before they die.' Although I had seen this, I said, 'Nonsense.' He shook his head and walked away. Shortly after he took to his bed and died July 5. My father during the few days he was in bed—we were haymaking at the time—asked each morning, 'Which field are you in now?' When we came to a certain field called 'Cadley,' he said, with a sigh of great satisfaction, 'Ah, I shall die now.'"

He died the same morning near midday.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

A Financial Parable.

Just before the collection was taken up one Sunday morning a negro clergyman anounced that a certain brother had forgotten to lock the door of his chicken house the night before, and, as a result, in the morning he found that most of the fowls had disappeared. "I doan' want to be pussonal, bredr'n," he added, "but I hab my s'picions as to who stole dem chickens. I also hab reason fo' b'lievin' dat if I am right in dose s'picions dat pusson won't put any money in de plate which will now be passed around."

The result was a fine collection. Not a single member of the congregation feigned sleep. After it was counted the old parson came forward.

"Now, bredr'n," he said, "I donn' want your dinners to be spoilt by wonderin' where dat brudder lives who doan' lock his chickens up at night. Dat brudder doan' exist, mah friends. He was a parable gotten up fo' purpose of finances."

Old Time Salaries.

How often clerks and other employees of big firms are heard to complain of the small salaries they receive! Yet if they realized that Columbus drew a salary of only just over £66 a year they would, perhaps, hesitate before grumbling at their £100 or £150 per annum. Prominent clergymen have received as much as and more than £10,000 a year, and yet John Knox only got 10s. 8d. a week, and that was 4s. 2d. more than Scottish judges of his time. It must be confessed, however, that at this period of small salaries money went a long way. For instance, a good Christmas dinner for a family of six during the sixteenth century could be provided for an outlay of about eightpence halfpenny.—London Standard

Died With Warm Feet.

Isaac O'Barns, once pension commissioner in Boston, appointed by President Franklin Pierce, was known for his terse and cutting sayings. It was told of him that he promised to subscribe for the erection of a Baptist church on condition that they should "baptize 'em in hot water."

It is of Mr. O'Barns the story is told that when on his deathbed, or when he thought he was dying and the doctor had pronounced his feet warm and said that no one had ever died with warm feet, the old gentleman inquired in a whisper whether the doctor had forgotten the case of John Rogers.

Skinny Boys and Chunky Girls.

In referring to a thin boy it is all right to call him "skinny," but you must call a thin girl "spirituelle." It means the same, but sounds better. Never call any one but a boy "puny." A "puny" girl should be called fragile." It sounds more like delicate china, and all of that sex like to be compared to fine Dresden. A "chunky" boy is all right, but a girl has a "finely rounded figure." A boy is "gawky," but a girl displays "untutored grace." —Atchison Globe.

Quite Natural.

"That play had some very natural touches."

"Drama of domestic life, eh?"

"Yes; they had a new servant in every scene, and the heroine was a brunette in act 1 and a blond in act 2."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Awkwardly Put.

Telephone Emergencies

THREE VARIETIES of emergency telephone service are, without charge, at the behest of the public. They were devised years ago by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company to render what it believed to be a proper public service to the community at large, as well as a valuable service to the Company's subscribers. They are:

1. Emergency Calls For The Fire Department.
2. Emergency Calls For The Police.
3. Emergency Calls For Physicians.

Such calls may be made without charge, from his own telephone by a subscriber, or from a Pay Station telephone by a non-subscriber, if he states he desires to make an emergency call.

TWO IMPORTANT WARNINGS

If there is an established fire alarm system in the place, a call for the Fire Department also should be made from the nearest fire alarm box. The Company can assume no responsibility for an emergency notification, but will use its best endeavors to connect you promptly.

If the emergency is of a particularly serious nature—a railroad wreck, a large fire, a serious accident, involving injury or death to many—do not leave the telephone without also calling for the Chief Operator, so that an executive official of our Traffic Department may take such further steps as the nature of the emergency shall suggest.

This advertisement is printed for two purposes:

1—To remind the public in general as well as our subscribers of a privilege they may employ, absolutely without charge, and to indicate the simplest and most effective method.

2—To remind prospective subscribers of the great value of such service as a protective and precautionary measure, and to suggest that the quickest way to have a telephone installed is to make a call (also without charge) to the Local Manager.

Rings as a Protection.

"I used to be surprised," said a clerk in a high class jewelry establishment, "when a woman whom I knew was unmarried would come in and coolly select a handsome solitaire diamond ring, the sort usually sold for an engagement ring, and then, quite as a matter of course, buy a plain gold band of the wedding ring variety. I couldn't understand it at first, but now I've learned that many unmarried women think two such rings, worn when traveling, for instance, serve about the same purpose as a chaperon. I had a case the other day where a mother came in with her unmarried daughter—a pretty girl hardly out of her teens—and bought two such rings. From their conversation I learned that the girl was to take the trip to the Pacific coast unaccompanied, and the mother evidently thought if her daughter was protected by her rings she'd not be so apt to be criticised for being alone. Funny idea, but the women seem to think it works well."—New York Sun

The Chair of Torture.

The most prominent building in the ancient city of Nuremburg is the castle. One of its two towers was used for torture, the other served as a prison. The castle also contained a museum of horrors until it was purchased by the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, in whose possession these relics now lie. One of these was the chair of torture. It was very heavily made and studded over the seat and at the elbows with blunt topped spikes. To it the victim was tightly bound and in a short time discomfort began to manifest itself and in time became unbearable. During its continuance the torture was increased in several ways by means of wedges being passed between the legs and screws being applied to the thumbs until they began to bleed.

A One Man Jury.

A tailor who was defendant in a case tried in court seemed much cast down when brought up for trial. "What's the trouble?" whispered his counsel, observing his client's distress as he surveyed the jurymen.

"It looks pretty bad for me" said the defendant, "unless some steps are taken to dismiss that jury and get in a new lot. There ain't a man amongst 'em but what owes me money for clothes."

Sarcastic.

Senior Waiter (to rather green assistant at a recent banquet in a celebrated London hotel—Now, then, young man, do a bit o' somethink, and don't stand a-gaping and staring there as if you was the bloomin' guest o' the hevenin'.—London Mail.

Henry's Better Scheme.

The Vicar's Daughter—Papa's subject tonight is to be "Love One Another." Shall we go, Henry? Henry—No, dear. I think we had better stay at home and practice what your father is preaching.—London Tit-Bits.

Optimism.

Success consecrates the foulest crimes.—Seneca.

The Hub of the German Empire.

Unter den Linden is the center spot of Berlin and the hub of the German empire. This magnificent boulevard is 198 feet in width, and under the shade of its lime trees the Berliners have a meeting place which is equal in architectural beauty to any in Europe. It is lined on either side with magnificent hotels, restaurants and palaces. At the east end of Unter den Linden, where it enters upon the Opera House platz, stands the magnificent monument of Frederick the Great, which is worthy of the real founder of United Germany. To the right of this monument is the palace of the Emperor William I., now occupied by Prince Heinrich. The north side of the Opera platz is occupied by the buildings of the University of Berlin, and next to it stands the Royal library, which rivals that at the British museum both in its size and the number of volumes it contains. The opera house itself is on the south of the platz and is a building of a nation of music lovers like the Germans.—Argonaut.

Spoiled His Taste.

"A friend of mine," said a Montana man, "is defending a damage suit for being a party to making a man take the liquor cure without his consent. This man had been on a protracted spree of several weeks, and his business was going to the dogs. My friend thought it would be a kindly thing to send him to a sanitarium for treatment. He did so, and the man was given the cure for the whisky habit. When he was discharged from the sanitarium the first thing he did was to go to a saloon. He called for whisky. He tasted it, but did not fancy the flavor of it. He set his distaste of it down to the cure he had been given by my friend's orders and immediately began suit for $50,000 damages. He says in his complaint that he had a highly cultivated and discriminating taste for whisky, which had taken years to develop, and that was spoiled by the cure. I do not know how my friend will come out, but he is not helping any more 'down and outs' without first obtaining their consent."—New York Journal.

The Big Men of the Future

Who will they be? In this town for instance. Who will be tomorrow's financiers?

They are the young men here who, right now, are working steadily, thinking, planning, saving and investing judiciously their accumulations.

Right in the front of the procession years hence you will find young men who are now getting possession of some good Winchester real estate. It will grow in value as they grow in years.

Young men get a good start by buying a lot. After a while you can improve it. Then you will have a steady income.

Lots in Sheffield West, lots on Highland avenue, lots on West Side, lots at Symmes Corner, ots everywhere in town.

STABLE VALUES

The person who has saved up a hundred dollars and is seeking an investment, should choose one in which the element of speculation is absent.

For the average person whose knowledge of stock values must be picked up second hand, such investments are pure speculations.

The man with a little money cannot afford to speculate, because he cannot afford to lose.

Buy Winchester real estate. It is stable; "sound as a dollar." In selling real estate I make it a business to secure for my clients the best value for their money.

Now is the time to buy.

Class Colors: Blue and Gold

The graduating exercises of the Class of '09 of the Winchester High School were held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening. As usual this most important event in the school life of the Winchester boys and girls was attended by a large gathering of parents, pupils and friends. The program of about an hour and a half was interesting and well presented by the members of the class. As is the present custom, the class prophecy, history, etc., were given privately last Friday night at the Senior reception.

Following was the program:

I CHORUS The Lord is Great
From Mendelssohn's "Athalie"
DIRECTION OF MR. BROWN, SUPERVISOR OF MUSIC
II PRAYER
REV. DUNCAN A. MacPHIE
III PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS
RUSSELL FRANKLIN KEEHN
IV RECITATION Mr. Pickwick's Blunder
Charles Dickens
DOROTHEA CHASE
V ESSAY Our Debt to Thomas Jefferson
GEORGE JAMES BARBARO
VI RECITATION Grandfather
Roy Rolfe Gilson
DOROTHY MAY AYER

DIRECTION OF MR. BROWN, SUPERVISOR OF MUSIC
VIII ESSAY A Meeting at the Turk's Head in 1773
ELIZABETH COIT
IX RECITATION The Wonderful Tar Baby
Geo. Chandler Harris
JOAN SINCLAIR NEWELL
X CHORUS Damascus Triumphal March
From "Naaman"
DIRECTION OF MR. BROWN, SUPERVISOR OF MUSIC
XI ESSAY The Character of Edmund Burke
RALPH HERBERT COWDERY
XII PRESENTATION OF DIPLOMAS

The Invocation was given by Rev. Duncan MacPhie, and the exercises of the evening were smoothly carried off.

The members of the class who participated in the various numbers did excellent work.

The President's Address was well given by Mr. Keehn, he speaking upon school and class work in an interesting and entertaining manner. The essays by Mr. Cowdery, Mr. Barbaro and Miss Coit were excellent, well written and delivered, and presented the ability of these graduates in a forceful manner to their hearers. Three remarkably good recitations were given by Miss Newell, Miss Ayer and Miss Chase, all thoroughly enjoyed and added to the program in no small degree.

The music by the High School chorus of about one hundred voices under the direction of Albert Edmund Brown, Supervisor of Music, deserves special mention. The selections were given without orchestral accompaniment and in consequence the fresh, sweet, youthful voices were heard to the best advantage. In the first number "The Lord is Great" from Mendelssohn's "Athalie" and the last "Damascus Triumphal March" from "Naaman" both solid selections, the volume and the parts sung by the basses and soprano-, respectively, were to be particularly commended, while in "A lullaby" from Patient Grisel by Arthur Foote, the quiet character of the song with its numerous pianissimo passages was well interpreted. All three selections showed excellent training in smooth and flowing tone quality and in an admirable precision of attack as well as in the ability and accuracy with which the parts were carried without orchestral support. If any suggestion were to be given it would be that for the first appearance of the chorus in the graduation perhaps the selections were somewhat more ambitious than the pupils' previous experience had fully prepared them to undertake with confidence.

The presentation of the diplomas was made by Prof. Charles F. A. Currier for the School Committee, prefaced with a few appropriate remarks. The hall was tastefully decorated with palms and ferns, and the class colors of blue and gold were conspicously displayed. The event was one of the most successful graduations yet held in the Winchester schools, notwithstanding the smallness of the class.

Class Song

I

Tonight we stand together here
And let our lips and hearts combine,
To sing the loyalty we owe
Unto the class of Nineteen Nine.

II

However far apart we drift,
Divided though we seem to be,
A steadfast bond will hold our minds—
The ageless chain of memory.

III

May precept learned and truth revealed
A lasting help and guidance be:
May future Alps be bravely scaled
To win the fields of Italy.

IV

Throughout new years of happiness
Our thoughts will to this night incline,—
Then let us cheer with loyal hearts
The good old class of Nineteen Nine!

ELIZABETH COIT.

RUSSELL F. KEEHN
Class President.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.
Russell Franklin Keehn.

In behalf of my classmates, it gives me great pleasure to welcome such a large gathering of parents and friends here this evening on the occasion of our graduation from the Winchester High School.

Our graduation! What does that not mean to us. It has been the one thought foremost in our minds through the many happy years of our school work. It has been the incentive by which we have encountered and overcome all obstacles. It is to us the crowning honor of our school life. You can, then, imagine our feelings of pride—and of gratitude toward our patient teachers; our generous-minded school board, who have aided us in attaining such a reward for our endeavors; and, most helpful of all, to the God above, without whom we can do nothing.

Still, who but a graduate, on the evening of his graduation, can appreciate our emotions, mingled as they are of happiness, gratitude, and even sadness. Happy we are at our success, and grateful for our many blessings. But another rather newer emotion creeps into our hearts this evening. During the fleeting years of our school career, we have thought only of the honor that would be ours as a reward for our industry. Now at the final moment, our minds turn almost involuntarily toward the dim future. Many of you understand our feelings tonight, when we realize that me must, as fond and united classmates, say goodbye to one another, when we realize that we must now face the uncertain future, with its many new faces quite alone, and must encounter and overcome the greater problems of life unaided any longer by the helping hands of our teachers. Surely we have reason to be sad and thoughtful. Esteemed by one another, almost as brother and sister during our school days, we, who are now about to leave all behind, with only sweet memories of our delightful merry-makings remaining, can scarcely restrain our feelings.

And now my last duty in behalf of my class is to extend a most heartfelt word of thankfulness first to our generous citizens, who have given us such a beautiful building to be called home, as it were, for four of the happiest years of our lives, next to our excellent school-

MR. MAY, SUB-MASTER IN WINCHESTER HIGH SCHOOL TO GO TO BOSTON.

The official statement that Mr. Benjamin D. May, Submaster in the Winchester High School has been elected instructor in Mechanic Arts High School, Boston, was given out by the School Board of that city on Wednesday. At the recent examinations for positions in the Boston Schools, Mr. May stood highest among those placed on the eligible list in the department of history. Feeling that his appointment would be only a matter of time, our school authorities have been considering the question and will at an early date announce his successor. It is understood that this will be a man and that thus the High school teaching force will this year contain seven women and three men.

Mr. May has been submaster of Winchester High school for two years and has shown in his work broad scholarship and thorough skill as a teacher. He is a graduate of Tufts A. B. 1898 and of Harvard A. M. 1903 and has had several years of successful experience. Before coming here he had been Principal of High schools at Stowe, Lancaster and Nantucket and of Hitchcock Free Academy at Bromfield. A wide circle of friends hope that he and Mrs. May will retain residence in Winchester as they at present plan.

MRS. EDWARD H. KENERSON.

Mrs. Margaret S. (Ryder), wife of Mr. Edward S. H. Kenerson of Brooks street, died at the Homeopathic Hospital, Boston, on Monday, after a short illness. Her death was preceded a week previous by that of her little daughter. She was 24 years of age.

Mrs. Kenerson was born in Bellows Falls, Vt., her parents being Herbert D. and Margaret Ball Ryder. She came to Winchester with her husband a little over two years ago, living in the home which they built on Brooks street. She is survived by her husband and a little son, John, her parents, and five sisters and one brother.

Funeral services were held from the residence on Wednesday at 4 p. m., conducted by Rev. William I. Lawrance, pastor of the Unitarian Church. The interment was in Wildwood Cemetery.

AN EARLY MORNING ELECTRIC.

The Boston & Northern Street Railway have placed an early morning Boston car on its schedule for the benefit of the marketmen living in this vicinity. The car leaves the Woburn car barn at 3.40 a. m., Woburn centre at 3.52, Winchester at 4.05 and Winthrop Square at 4.20. The car will not leave Winthrop Square on its return until 5.08, reaching Winchester at 5.24. This is to accommodate farm hands coming to Winchester. The new car commences its run on Monday next.

Mr. Edward S. Foster of Grove street is at Norman Cottage, Magnolia, for the summer.

E. O. WIXOM
New Principal of High School.

RESIGNATION OF PRINCIPAL LOVERING.

The following letter to Mr. Charles E. L. Wingate, Chairman of the School Committee, will doubtless be of interest to our readers:

Winchester, Mass., May 27, 1909.
Mr. Charles E. L. Wingate,
Chairman School Committee,
Winchester, Mass.

Dear Mr. Wingate:—

An uninterrupted service of more than thirty years in the school-room, twenty-two of which have been spent in my present position, a consciousness of performing daily duties with greater effort, the expenditure of more nervous energy than seems right in daily contact with many pupils, a fear of not being so closely in touch with the interests of the scholars as a principal should be and a younger man would be, compel me to consider whether it is not advisable for me to seek some change in the character of my work.

In the last report of the School Committee, Supt. Herron urged the necessity of increasing the number of men employed in the High School and it has seemed to me that it would be for the best interests of the school if I should request to be relieved of its general management and, if it should be the wish of the Committee, to continue as a member of the teaching force.

In view of discussions with Mr. Herron relative to this question I am well pleased to think that the views of the School Committee are the same as my own.

It is not in my power to repay the teachers who have worked so earnestly and patiently for the best interests of the school and have always endeavored to carry out my wishes and plans, and years, but I do and have always ap- the school officials who have so heartily co-operated with my efforts as to make a continuance in my position possible during many preciated most fully what has been done in my behalf.

Yours very truly,
EDWIN N. LOVERING.

Mr. Lovering graduated from Harvard in the Class of 1877. It may be of interest to note that among the members of his class were Prof. A. Lawrence Lowell, now President of the University, and Ex-Governor William E. Russell. His first teaching was at Lexington whence he went to Randolph. In 1887 he was elected Principal of the Winchester High School, closely following Mr. Lewis Parkhurst. At that time the High School consisted of 43 pupils and three teachers It now has 252 pupils and 10 teachers. During these twenty-two years there have been graduated 498 young men and women of whom 220 have gone to higher institutions and fewer than ten pupils in all have failed of admission. A detailed investigation made last winter of twenty high schools in this section gave figures to justify the statement that so far as relative standing can be determined Winchester High School is among the best in the Metropolitan District.

It would be practically impossible to enumerate all the honors that have been earned by pupils who have been prepared for college under Mr. Lovering's direction, but it may be said that every year he has rejoiced in the knowledge that his boys and girls were doing work reflecting credit upon his school. As a teacher he has taught most of the usual high school branches, but he has always been particularly fond of Latin and in recent years has confined his class work to this subject. In accordance with his wish and to the satisfaction of the School Committee he will remain in the school as Principal Emeritus and at the head of the Latin Department.

In selecting a man to undertake the work so long and so conscientiously borne by Mr. Lovering, the School Committee has exercised the greatest care and it feels that the result will be entirely satisfactory. The new Principal will be Mr. E. O. Wixom, for the last three years Principal of the High School at Oneonta, New York, a school which is about the same size as our own. He is a graduate of Cornell University has had nine years' experience and has been particularly successful as a teacher and as a principal. Inquiries among the business and professional men in his city and among educators who know him well, indicate that he is a progressive school man, a good administrator, and a valuable citizen. As a principal he has been commended for his efficiency in mastering details, in inspiring enthusiasm and school spirit, and in directing the individual work of pupils.

A detailed inspection of his school by Supt. Herron and a searching conference with Mr. Wixom by the School Committee have seemed to verify these statements.

Mr. Wixom's parents were natives of eastern Massachusetts and he is in sympathy with the New England spirit while his training and experience have given him a broad educational outlook. Mrs. Wixom is a graduate of Vassar College. During the coming summer Mr. and Mrs. Wixom will tour Europe and will return about September first to take up their residence in Winchester.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

June seventeenth a party of twenty-five children from the Frances E. Willard Settlement of Boston was entertained by the Winchester Union at the home of Mrs. G. H. Hamilton, the president. Mrs. Daniel Kelley, Superintendent of the department of Settlement work, was in charge, ably assisted by a committee from the Union. Swings and other amusements were provided and a boat ride on Wedge Pond was a much enjoyed feature of the programme. After luncheon the children entertained the committtee and some twenty-five members and friends of the Union by reading, speaking and singing to the great enjoyment of all. Before taking their leave a collation was served and each one of the party was provided with a bouquet by Mrs. A. A. Rowe, superintendent of flower mission work. Miss Nellie Hill, resident worker at the Settlement, had charge of the party, assisted by Miss Edwards, also a resident. The fine weather helped to make the affair a success.

In addition to the entertainment provided for the children, a box containing about twelve dollars worth of groceries contributed for the purpose was sent to the Settlement which furnishes a home for working girls whose wages are less than five dollars a week, at a price that enables them to exist until they can do better.

The Settlement is doing excellent work among the "new Americans" in its vicinity. It is located in the old St. Andrew's buildings on Chambers street and is continuing the policy inaugurated by Phillips Brooks in the beginning—that of friendly helpfulness. It is a most worthy philanthropy, and deserving of hearty support.

GOOD FOR THE BOYS!

In these graduation days it is well to note that the High School class of '09 is the class that was deserted a year or two ago for private preparatory schools by so many of our well-to-do boys. Notwithstanding this fact, the six loyal boys received three out of four honors distributed in a class of twenty—an unusual showing for boys.

RESPECTFULLY REFERRED TO OUR G. A. R. MEN.

Mrs. Benjamin Richardson, a former resident of Mansfield, now living in Needham, says the Mansfield News, sends the following letter relative to the cross in Spring Brook cemetery, which is decorated each recurring Memorial Day in memory of the unknown soldiers who participated in the Rebellion and are now buried in various cemeteries throughout the country or in southern battlefields:

Mr Editor:—Decoration day is almost here again, and it may be of interest to some, as I think it is not generally known that the cross for the "Unknown" in Spring Brook, was placed there at my suggestion. E. R. Pratt was calling at our house one afternoon and I suggested that something be erected in memory of our unknown deceased soldiers. He brought the matter properly before John Rogers, G. A. R., and the members of the Post thought it a nice idea; so on the following Memorial Day a wooden cross had been erected with "Unknown." It answers the purpose, and since then children have done their part in the exercises of Memorial day by laying flowers at the foot of the cross. I think it shows great respect for the soldiers who have been buried on battlefields and in southern cemeteries. I hope these exercises will always be observed on Decoration Day. While resident of Mansfield, I took an interest in the day and for seven years I wrote a poem to be read on Memorial Day in Spring Brook cemetery.

WESTON, Ocean-to-Ocean Walker,

Said recently: "When you feel down and out, feel there is no use living, just take your bad thoughts with you and walk them off. Before you have walked a mile things will look rosier. Just try it." Have you noticed the increase in walking of late in every community? Many attribute it to the comfort which Allen's Foot Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into your shoes, gives to the millions now using it. As Weston said, "It has real merit."

TREMONT THEATRE.

"A Broken Idol," the Hal Stephens, Williams and Van Alstyne laughing song play, in which Otis Harlan is giving the greatest performance in his career in the best stellar comedy role with which he has ever been associated, continues blithely on its successful way at the Tremont Theatre, Boston. It is a well-known fact that the warm weather makes no difference to those who attend the "cool Tremont," for the house is so constructed as to be perfectly comfortable within, no matter how sultry it may be outside.

Among the spectacular features introduced by Mr. Gus Sohlke, Mr. Whitney's general stage manager, is the white silk balloon in which Miss Alice Yorke, the prima donna, ascends from the stage and makes a complete circuit of the atmospheric space of the auditorium. Mr. Otis Harlan, the star comedian of the piece, constitutes a fun-factory in himself and convulses the audience at every turn.

The cast and chorus continue the same. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

SALES OF LAND.

The large sale by Atwood & Pattee, on June 17, at Cross street, brought out a large attendance. There was to have been a balloon ascension, and the airship did start, but rose only a few hundred feet, owing to an unforeseen accident, and the strong wind. The occupants succeeded in landing upon the ground in safety, only one man receiving slight injuries to his arms and shoulders.

The auction was a success. A concert was given by Teel's orchestra, and several sums were given away, as follows: The $5-gold piece to John Anderson of 9 Harvard street; the $2.50-gold pieces to A. E. Pickering of 39 Forest street, Alice R. Currie of 7 Baldwin street, and D. S. Grant of 2 Church street, Stoneham.

The transactions were as follows; Lot 1, on Cross street 5586 square feet, to John Keyes, 78 Devonshire street, Boston 10 cents per square foot; 2, to William J. Murray, of 607 Main street, Winchester, 4963 square feet; 3 on Cross street, to George Spaulding, Winchester, 3885 square feet. The price for the two latter was 10 cents per square foot.

William J. Murray also became the owner of lot 4 Lupine street, 6086 square feet, and 5, 6265 square feet, on Lupine street, both at 6 cents per square foot; lot 6, Cardinal street, 6075 square feet, to William J. Murray for 7 cents per square foot; lot 7, 39 Forest street, 5918. square feet, at 6 cents per square foot, to F. O. Snow.

Lots 8, 9, 10 and 11, on Cardinal street, 6960 square feet, 6820 square feet, 6812 square feet and 7280 square feet respectively were purchased by Lewis G. Keys, 78 Devonshire street, Boston, at 6 1-2 cents per square foot.

The purchasers will at once erect houses to occupy.

TROLLEY TO PROVIDENCE.

Commencing Monday June 21, the Old Colony St. Ry. Co. will resume its popular special through trolley service between Boston and Providence or Fall River, connecting with the night boats to New York.

By taking this service to Providence and the boats of the Hartford & New York Transportation Co. it will be possible this year to make the trip from Boston to New York, or vice versa for $2.25.

The special car used in this service will leave Post office sq. daily except Sunday at 2.30 p. m. and run through without stops or changes to Providence, except for a moment at Taunton where those desiring to go to Fall River may change.

This route lies through the great Blue Hills district, the lively cities of Brockton and Taunton, and is through as charming a country from a scenic point of view as can be found in southeastern Massachusetts, which makes it not only a cheap, but a very enjoyable way for summer travel.

Tickets and any trolley information may be secured at the Free Trolley Information Bureau of the Passenger Department, at 309 Washington street, Boston.

PIANOFORTE RECITAL.

The Dorchester pupils of Miss Sadie F. Bowser of Winchester gave an enjoyable recital last Saturday afternoon assisted by Miss Minna Lawrence Harding of Boston, reader, and Mr. William L. Bowser, tenor. The pupils taking part ranged from the first to the fifth grade, each making so creditable a showing as to delight the teacher as well as the large number of relatives and friends present—the entire programme being given without notes.

Miss Harding's selections were well chosen for the occasion and admirably rendered as the hearty encore evidenced. Mr. Bowser sang Tosti's "Good-Bye," responding to an encore with "You'd Better Ask Me." A second solo and encore was later followed by a vocal duet by Mr. and Miss Bowser. Daisies and ferns were effectively used for decorations.

A CORRECTION

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

You are in error in stating that several years ago only one member of the water board approved the plan of giving up our water works to the state and our entering the Metropolitan system. The record shows that all the members of the water board signed a town report recommending such action but the town never accepted or approved their findings or attitude in the matter. This incident only shows that the wisest of men may be mistaken sometimes.

SUMMER SCHEDULE.

The summer schedule on the steam road went into effect on Monday, there being even fewer changes in the time of the arrival and departure of the trains than on previous years.

The most important change is, of course, the shifting of the 11.25 p. m. train from Boston to 11.55, thus allowing time for a supper after the theatre for those who wish it. This also fills a long needed want in the train service during the summer in other ways.

Outside of this change only two others are worthy of note, viz., the changing of the inward train formerly leaving at 1.09 p. m. to 12.58, and the addition of two trains on Saturdays—one leaving at 2.01 p. m. for Boston and the other leaving Boston at 1.05 p. m. for Winchester.

MRS. HARLEY D. FISHER.

Many Winchester friends were grieved to learn on Saturday of the unexpected death of Mrs. Grace (Upton) Fisher, wife of Mr. Harley D. Fisher, of Lexington. For many years the Fishers made their home in this town, moving to Lexington only about a year ago. Mrs. Fisher was unexpectedly taken sick a week ago Sunday, while her husband was in Winchester attending the Odd Fellows memorial service. When he returned home he found her unconscious, and although all that medical skill could accomplish was done, she passed away on Friday. The cause of her death was attributed primarily to diabetis.

The funeral services were held at the home in Lexington on Sunday afternoon, she being buried in that town.

SENIOR RECEPTION.

The Senior Class of the Winchester High School gave their reception to the Junior Class last evening in the Town Hall.

The hall was very prettily decorated and an orchestra furnished the music. The programme was made up of twenty-four dances including four extras.

The matrons for the evening were Mrs. F. J. Keehn, Mrs. D. A. MacPhie, Mrs. A. E. Ayer, and Mrs. I. Chase. The Committee in charge of arrangements were Russell Keehn, Joan Newell, Dorothy Ayer and Ralph Cowdery.

It is rather late, and business is rushing, but we can still fill orders for engraving. Wilson the Stationer.

board, ever thoughtful of our needs, ever ready to do all in their power to make our school life agreeable and beneficial, and then to our devoted teachers, who so often, by their patience and encouraging words, have helped us over the difficult problems of our lessons, who have done all they could to lighten our burdens, and who have so ably taught us industry and perseverance in all we do. To all these we extend our most heartfelt gratitude.

Classmates, during these four short years, since entering our beautiful new High school building, we have struggled on, aiding one another always working continually to uphold the name of our class and our school. We have not flinched and I trust we never shall, from these our duties. Now that we are about to depart, to face the trouble and trials of the future, let us fix firmly in our minds, never to forget them, the words of our motto—"Trans Alpes Italiam."

THE CHARACTER OF EDMUND BURKE.

By Ralph Herbert Cowdery.

To American students Edmund Burke holds a peculiar interest. Before the Revolutionary War he was the champion of the Colonies in Parliament. His initial speech in the House brought about the Repeal of the Stamp Act: and a few years later he presented three great appeals in behalf of the Colonies, of which The Speech on Conciliation is the masterpiece. Burke was able to foresee the result of England's policy, but she had to learn from the experiences of Saratoga and Yorktown. Because of Burke's noble attitude toward the Colonies, Americans have always thought of him with deep sympathy.

In our efforts to picture Burke's personal appearance, we encounter some difficulties. He is often described as awkward in his manner and gesture, severe in his expression and indifferent as to his dress. To most people, however, he appealed as he did to Madame D'Arblay, who wrote, "Since we lost Garrick, I have seen nobody so enchanting." She refers to his noble, stately figure and dignified manner. His eyes were gleaming and shone from beneath a massive forehead. As soon as Burke spoke, the richness of his voice was always observed. In a word, Burke was a man to make, in an instant, a striking impression,

In his private life Burke was an example of true manhood. He is said to have been an ideal husband and father, and his devotion and piety of living kept him free from all vice. Indeed, we cannot justly criticize him even on the common grounds of questionable speculations; for these charges are always vague, while we have positve proof of the uprightness of his character.

Of course Burke had faults, which handicapped him more or less. He was headstrong, and unfortunately had very little tact. Always of an irritable disposition, in his later years, he was the victim of an uncontrollable temper. Yet these failings were such as are natural to an ardent and generous nature.

The worth of Burke's character is attested by his friends, several of whom formed Dr. Johnson's Literary Club. No doubt Burke and Johnson were the club's most conspicuous members, and in their conversation furnished the greater part of the entertainment for the others. Their many heated discussions caused Johnson to have a deep regard for Burke, who holds the distinction of being the only one by whom the venerable Doctor ever allowed himself to be contradicted without remonstrance. Once when Johnson was ill, he said, upon hearing Burke's name mentioned, "That fellow calls forth all my powers: were I to see him now it would kill me." However, this conversational power of Burke's showed itself only when there was occasion for it: he could be a model of retirement and modesty when any one else present had claims to being heard. He always treated everyone generously and was careful never to offend. He once advised a pessimistic friend, "Regard not trifles, live pleasantly."

But Burke had friends other than among the wealthy and famous: for he was always generous and sympathetic toward the poor. He often visited their homes and they always went to their one great friend for legal advice. Indeed, it was Burke's kindness toward the poor that prevented his accumulating wealth. The great statesman never seemed to have ready money, always being, according to Birrell, an active member of Charles Lamb's noble race of "the men who borrow." Yet no matter how much his friends voluntarily lent Burke, it always went for the good of those who were worse off than himself,—for saving some such friends as Crabbe from starvation, or for sending Barry to study art in Italy.

It is, however, as a statesman that Burke's character is most remarkable. The basis of his platform always was that "the principles of true politics are those of morality enlarged." He stood for right rather than might as applied to governments as well as individuals.

So Burke was a man of strong theories, but he never allowed them to get the better of logic. Above all, Burke, sometimes called The Conservative, believed in practical politics and always took experience as his teacher. He was bitterly opposed to what he called "paper government," as advocated for the Colonies by Lord North. The great Commoner never favored anything radical when there was a well tried policy that could be used.

Burke's thoroughness and his farsightedness form two of his chief claims to greatness. He never took up an argument without giving it finish in every detail.

One of the strongest points in the Speech on Conciliation with the Colonies is the thoroughness with which he got up his case, coupled with what Prior calls, "His capacity to point out consequences." It is true that he anticipated nearly all the great measures of the nineteenth century. One policy in which he was too far advanced for his age was his plan for diminishing government expenses. Another was his defense of the claims of the Roman Catholics, which were conceded long after his death.

On the whole Burke's remarkable sense of right is the greatest of his characteristics. His first principal, privately and publicly, was justice. It was because of this zealousness for right that Burke was so often on the off side. In the eyes of his less broad countrymen, he was, as Goldsmith said, "Always too fond of the right to pursue the expedient." Moreover Burke's justice was very much broader than common justice. When his opponents held that they were treating America justly, he said, "they should not be content with grudging justice, but should follow the higher policy of generosity." It is that idea of liberality, emphasized in the Speech on Conciliation, that makes Edmund Burke one of the greatest statesmen of modern times.

A MEETING IN THE TURK'S HEAD INN.

By Elizabeth Coit

Let us imagine ourselves in the year 1773, looking into a room of the Turk's Head Inn, in Gerrard street. Here is a jovial party of four, waiting for another gentleman to complete their number. One of them is a ponderous, dignified personage, who is addressed as Mr. Johnson. Next him stands a small man, who looks especially insignificant and cramped beside his gigantic neighbor. He listens attentively to whatever Johnson says, continually taking notes in a book, but he is manifestly impatient when anyone else holds the floor. This, of course is Johnson's shadow, Boswell. Near him stands Sir Joshua Reynolds, holding his ear trumpet in the direction of a little man with a whimsical face, David Garrick, who is telling a story and illustrating it with lively gestures.

"—And my poor friend Nole," he is saying "was e'en writing and pinning to the wall such maxims as, 'Look Sharp. Money is money now.' Then in comes a ragged woman,"—"The speaker bends over and wrinkles his face and says, 'if the kind gentleman would only lend me a bit shilling.' The kind gentleman claps his hand to one pocket and another until he finds a coin that has lodged in the lining. He passes it to her and turns away—to write another motto."

Just then the door opens and Goldsmith, the subject of his remarks, walks in. His rather short figure is dressed in a gay, peach bloom coat. His face, deeply scared and quite irregular, would be considered ugly, were it not for the twinkle that is in his eye, and the

An Imaginative Statesman.

Imagination is the greatest moving force in the world. In saying this I am merely repeating a remark of Disraeli's, and to prove the strength of his conviction I will repeat a story Mr. Lowell told me when he was minister to England. It is the custom of the Royal Academy of Painters to hold a private view of their pictures before the public exhibition. Disraeli, walking arm in arm with Browning through the galleries, said, "What strikes me most forcibly here is the lack of imagination," and he proceeded to enlarge upon the power of imagination, declaring it to be the greatest force in the world. In responding to a toast at the banquet which followed the private exhibition he dwelt upon the wealth of imagination in evidence on the walls about him and again expressed his conviction that imagination is the moving force in the world. Browning repeated Disraeli's first remark to Gladstone, who sat beside him, and he muttered, "The devil!"—John Trowbridge in Atlantic.

First Cantalever Bridge.

The first cantalever railroad bridge is the one across the Firth of Forth at Queens Ferry, Scotland. It is nearly one and a half miles in length. Fifty-one thousand tons of steel were used in its construction, employing as many as 5,000 men at one time. It cost $16,000,000 and fifty-six lives. The workmen began at either end and worked toward the center. When they met and undertook the last connection it was found that the two ends lacked a small fracion of an inch of reaching far enough to allow the insertion of the bolts that were to complete the span. For a time this was a puzzle, but was finally solved by an ingenious workman who suggested expansion by artificial heat, and it was forthwith supplied by means of burning kerosene oil under the steel girder.

Resignation of Mr. Lovering.

The decision of Mr. Lovering, as stated in another column of this week's issue, to resign the principalship of the High School, will come as a very unexpected announcement to all our readers. After more than thirty years of service in what is unquestionably the most exacting position in public school work, Mr. Lovering feels that a younger man should undertake the administrative and supervisory duties, especially since the next few years are likely to witness extensive, perhaps radical, modifications of high school courses and methods of instruction. He will, however, continue the teaching of Latin, in which he is particularly successful.

Of late the high schools and upper grammar grades throughout the country have been subjected to severe, and oftentimes valid, criticism. These schools have not yet adjusted themselves to present day needs and conditions. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, fortunately, is taking a leading part in the investigation and solution of the problem. The situation is serious; the questions at issue are numerous and complicated, and to meet them satisfactorily will call into requisition all available wisdom, as well as unlimited patience and abundant tolerance.

It is a fact worthy of record and commendation that during these years of general unrest and dissatisfaction, as marked in other communities as our own, Mr. Lovering has kept on in the quiet, faithful, conscientious performance of his duties, and by his gentlemanly and scholarly characteristics has won and retained the respect and affection of his pupils.

The people of Winchester are keenly alive to the welfare of the schools and generous in the support of them. With a young man in charge of the High School, as suggested by Mr. Lovering, one who had demonstrated his teaching power and executive ability, and who is also especially strong in his interest in the individual pupil, it may confidently be predicted that hearty support will be given to the efforts to continue to build up in our town one of the best high schools of this vicinity, at whatever cost of time and study, of labor and of money.

THE SUBURBAN TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

No more important work is being today accomplished in the transportation field than the development of suburban traffic-handling methods along broader lines than are possible with simple extension of local street railway service. It is becoming clearer each year that no single class of train or car service, and no single type of railway line, is capable of fulfilling all the requirements of suburban transportation in and about any great city. Each transportation agency, within broad limits, occupies a sphere of its own to a certain extent. Competitive operation is always present where the territories of different systems overlap, but as long as the systems are different in character, as long as like facilities are not duplicated, but instead supplement existing facilities, the economic usefulness of street railways, the suburban trolley lines and the interurban railroad, is assured, provided the population density and the habits of the community served are sufficient to justify these diverse facilities.

The most valuable feature of any modern transportation service is, for equal safety of operation, its time-saving ability. In the last analysis, time is the pivot around which all modern industries swing, and the most highly organized tools are those which turn out the largest product in a given time. The difference of a few cents in passenger transportation rates cuts little figure, provided there is a marked saving in time in one route over another, at least in American business life. In estimating the influence of high schedule speeds upon traffic, one must realize the fact that the real point at issue is the elapsed time, not between railroad terminals or stations, but between the commuter's home and his office.

It is out of the question to expect a street railway operating over public highways, to provide very fast service, or even to run its cars at the rather moderate schedule speed of 15 to 20 miles per hour. A schedule speed of twelve miles per hour means spending at least two hours per day on the cars for any commuter whose suburban home is twelve miles from the city, if he depends upon no faster means of travel.

Steam railroad branch lines can seldom afford fast suburban express train service, although they cater to an intermediate field. When tracks can be provided for both express and local trains, the long distance and suburban traffic can then be handled in the proper manner, and there is no reasonable doubt but that electricity is the best motive power for the latter service. There can be no question but that this suburban service can best be provided by the construction and operation of separate tracks by an interurban electric transportation company which will give high speed service through quick acceleration between fixed stopping points along its route and the city terminals.

Mr. Lucius Tuttle, President of the Boston & Maine R. R., in a published statement, alludes to the inability of the steam railroads to provide adequate suburban facilities in conjunction with the handling of more traffic, and the proper treatment of freight. That this condition exists to day in an aggravating form, is apparent, and gives rise to the query, what provision is to be made for the handling of the increased traffic that is inevitable ten years hence.

The Hon. Samuel J. Elder, in advocating the establishment of high speed interurban railroads before the Railroad Commissioners, has very pertinently said: "The railroads of the country have been described by one of their leaders as inadequate, as overburdened, as incapable of serving the needs of the country; and, allowing for possible exaggeration, practically every one of these adjectives is justified. Ten years ago, we fondly said to ourselves that the railroad service of the country was well-nigh perfected, and might easily keep abreast of the needs of the country. Today we are told that it is hopelessly inadequate. The difficulty comes in part from the fact that our railroads have been laid on and built thus far to serve two purposes: one the transportation of the enormous products of the country in the form of freight, and the other for transportation of passengers. It is at this moment that a new form of transportation for passengers alone is coming before the country at large, and that is, transportation by electric railroads. The legislation of last year (1906) which was the result of several years of agitation and of petitions for the extensions of trolley lines, palpably and clearly, and by statements of one committee after another, was intended to furnish a other, and completely different, method of transportation. That was to be neither a steam railroad built for a combination of freight and passenger service, nor was it to be a trolley system. It is electric railroad. Owing to the fact that passenger service on steam railroads must be conducted over freight lines, the expense of increasing facilities is enormous. It is disproportionate to the results obtained. After a railroad has once been established, communities grow up around it, cities and towns grow up around it, and the moment you ask for more freight yards, and wider roadbeds, for extentions of terminals, you are met by the stupendous expense which is entailed. At this moment comes the electric line, at less expense to construct, less expense to maintain and operate, and having facilities for the transportation of passengers which in the end we believe will furnish not only a relief to the country, but also relief to the railroads themselves, which are facing this terrible dilemma with concern, if not with trepidation."

The typical interurban railroad, with its rolling stock far surpassing in its comfortable riding qualities and general cleanliness the coaches on our steam railroads, the greater certainty of maintenance of schedules, are features which strongly recommend such railroads to the riding public. Such enterprises in the past have met more or less opposition from individual owners of private estates abutting on rights of way, but this feeling of hostility is fast giving way to a broader feeling that if such enterprises could be held up by a few property owners it would effectually stifle all such undertakings. In fact, it is probable that if the Railroad Commissioners gave ear to this kind of hostility, there would be scarcely a mile of street railway or steam road constructed in the state today.

THURSDAY MORNING'S FIRE.

On Thursday morning the fire department was called out to fight a stubborn little fire in the residence of Mr. Harry G. Davy on the Parkway. The family were awakened shortly before six o'clock, the house being filled with smoke.

Mr. Davy was aroused from sleep by the barking of the dog in the cellar, and upon looking from his window saw smoke curling from the eaves of the piazza. Arousing Mrs. Davy, he decended to the floor below, where the flames were just breaking through from the cellar. He opened the cellar door to allow the dog to come out and was immediately surrounded with a cloud of smoke. Without waiting to dress he ran to box 62 at the corner of Highland avenue and the Parkway and rang the alarm. Mrs. Davy and the baby going in their night clothes to Mr. H. C. Ordway's house nearby.

When the department arrived the blaze looked to be very serious and the house was almost completely hidden by smoke. It was soon seen that the fire was confined almost wholly to the partitions, it just commencing to break through at the sliding doors opening into the dining room.

Four streams of water were put onto the house and the partitions opened in several places, the fire being extinguished after about a half hour's work. Several of the firemen were pretty well filled up with smoke after working in the stifling rooms, it being practically impossible to enter the cellar where the heart of the fire was located.

The fire caught from an electric flat-iron in the cellar which had been left on the ironing board. It burned the board and some boxes, and reached the ceiling. From there it crept through the partitions clear to the attic, spreading out considerably.

Most of the funiture was taken out of the house by neighbors before it was seriously damaged, although many valuable articles were injured by the smoke and water before their removal. Taken all together the fire was the most serious the department has had for some little time. The damage was considerable. The house and furniture was insured.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The Selectmen have made a street lighting contract with the Edison company for ten years with the proviso that at the end of five years the town may terminate it by paying back half of the ten per cent rebate. But the contract does not carry with it up-to-date lamps, and it is a great deal of a question if this "string" to the ten years is worth the going without the new lamps. Why did the Board go back upon what it strongly favored at the annual meeting?

Mr. Byrne's point is well taken, but the Selectmen never mentioned it to the Appropriations Committee and consider it none of the committee's business. And why shouldn't they, when the town meeting led by some officials of the town, voted against that committee making any investigations. As for the Selectmen's records, they never give out the important happenings, even when contracts of many thousand dollars are made, and they never will till the town instructs them so to do. The School Committee never mentioned the High school lot grading to the Ap. Com. either.

It would have been very much brighter to have held the town meeting the 21st, as advertised, and then if the grade crossing commission report was not ready, to have adjourned the meeting after finishing up the other business rather than to put off the whole meeting to the 28th inst. It's a wonder it was not postponed till after the 4th and till the electric railroad hearings were over to await the pleasure of this slow but not sure commission. The Selectmen and the town counsel might have known that one night would not have been enough to properly consider and decide the important matters that are up, and yet they waste a week when July is upon us.

The Winchester Band was asleep about the Manchester Field concerts, and a citizen to whom I wrote asking him to notify them, would not take the trouble to go across the street to do so. They could have had some of these concerts as well as not.

The legislature had the quietest ending this session that I remember of. The House after giving evidence of being one of the weakest ones for years, turned about and finished its business in good shape and made a good record. The senate proved to be a reliable body and made few mistakes. The Governor has been a stronger force than any of his predecessors in shaping legislation. There was very little lobbying or money spent in connection with it.

If our Assessors do their work well the tax rate should go down to $16.50, the lowest for many years, and it can be kept down in this town too, although in most other towns and cities in the Metropolitan district it is bound to be high.

If we want any fireworks this year the money will have to be voted at the town meeting as the time is too short for subscriptions. I wish we might have something different for fireworks, but I presume nobody will care to take the trouble to arrange it. There is a fine chance for illumination of the grounds about Manchester Field with colored fires, etc.

W. H. S. NOTES.

Tuesday at a meeting of the Editorial Staff of the Recorder the following class editors were elected for next year: Marguerite Waldmyer and Kenneth F. Caldwell '11, Helen F. Ordway and Paul Tenny '12, Oriana Wingate and Francis Getty '13.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Events of importance are following each other in rapid succession at Keith's Theatre these days, the latest announcement being the appearance of Mlle. Dazie, the dancer, who created a sensation in "The Follies of 1908."

It will also mark the first vaudeville appearance in Boston of Ben Johnson, the star of "Paid in Full." Edwin Stanley and Company will appear in an elaborate musical act. Wynn and Lee will be remembered in that excellent talking sketch called "The College Boys." The Bounding Gordons are among the strongest of the acrobatic acts now in vaudeville. Cunningham and Marion will appear in what they term "An acrobatic talkfest." The Bagwell Sisters will be seen in songs and dances. Others are the Van Dei Koors: Chalk Saunders, the cartoonist and De Chaunt's Dogs.

MORE SEWER CONTAMINATION.

The water in the river and mill pond during the past week has been black as ink from chemicals and dye stuff turned into it from sewers and manufactories. It smells badly and it is a serious question what will be the result to the citizens of Winchester before the summer is over and the water gets low. When one considers that the Met. Water and Sewer Board controls both the Mystic water supply and the Mystic Valley and Metropolitan sewers, (built especially to keep our little river free from sewage) it does seem as if that great and all-powerful board ought to do something to protect Winchester from such wholesale contamination as is now openly being carried on. Nobody cares and nobody makes any one use the sewers made at great expense to prevent water contamination. The Winchester Board of Health certainly take a very questionable attitude in appologizing in the least bit for the building of an overflow for sewage to empty direct into a pond situated directly in the centre of Winchester. If manufactories are allowed to drain their refuse directly into the river or pond without passing into the sewer at all, it is just as bad as if the sewer overflowed into the pond. The probability is that if all manufacturing sewage is allowed to flow directly into the sewer it would overflow the sewer into the pond. To save this disgrace, the sewage now flows direct into the water without passing through the sewer at all.

A recent legal writer in the STAR has forcibly argued that the Winchester mill pond property is an "octopus" of great and unscrupulous power which is used in turn to oppress all neighboring property owners. If this is so, why has not this "octopus" the power to stop the filling up of the pond by sewage, even stop the state from overflowing a sewer upon the land owned by such an all-powerful mill owner? Why not the town co-operate with some one, even a wicked octopus, who has power to stop such wholesale contamination to the health of the community as is now going on rather than do nothing to stop the nuisance. Let us do something rather than weakly apologize for the building of an overflow for sewage into our ponds, or what is just as bad, for allowing sewage to flow direct into the river or pond because the sewer being too small would overflow into the pond if the sewage was not allowed to flow directly into the water.

COMMON SENSE.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

With the coming week of "Florodora" at the Castle Square, come also its second and final week and the end of the season of the John Craig Stock Company. This announcement will doubtless be sufficient to crowd the Castle Square Theatre to the doors.

For his coming season at the Castle Square, which begins late in August, Mr. Craig is already in the midst of his preparations. He has already engaged his company, which includes all the favorites of the present season, and he is rapidly completing a repertort of plays and musical comedies that is certain to please his patrons. His first season as manager of the Castle Square will at the close of the coming week, extend to forty-four weeks, and unprecedented record of which any actor-manager might well be proud. He promises even better and greater things for next season.

The following Sir Knights and their wives leave this week with the Hugh de Payne Commandery for a vacation at Hotel Wentworth, Newcastle, N. H., B. T. Morgan, C. H. Symmes, Fred N. Kerr, Walter E. Chamberlain, A. D. Rogers, Henry G. Young, W. E. Beggs and Percy Witherell.

smile that accompanies his delightfully awkwardness.

"Faith, sirs," he cries, "I would not have kept you waiting, had not my tailor been slow in bringing me my coat. How like you its color, gentlemen?" And he pretends to swagger. "Filby especially desired me to say it was made by him, since it so enhanced my appearance."

"It is no wonder, Goldy," roars Johnson, "that Filby wished it known how well he could make a coat of so absurd a color."

"Nay, sir," Goldsmith responds gravely, as the company take their seats. "I protest you do me wrong. Mr. Garrick, do not you consider that the money for this coat has been well expended?"

"In truth," says Garrick slyly. "There will be time to consider that after it has been expended, Goldy."

"Ah, Sir," answers Goldsmith "you would desist from calling me that name if you knew how exquisitely ironical it sounds to me. A penniless beggar like me entitled Goldy!"

Sir Joshua leans forward with a twinkle in his eye. "But indeed, gentlemen," he says, "Goldsmith is beginning to practice economy. I called on him at his room the other day, and found him kicking in front of him a bundle of clothes. He informed me that they were for a masquerade which he had decided not to attend, and so he was getting his money's worth from them by exercise!"

Johnson has kept silent as long as it is possible for him. "These are pretty, little fish," he remarks, pointing to his plate, "but a man must eat a great many of them before he is satisfied."

"Faith, Sir," returns Goldsmith, "They may be little, but how many of them would reach to the moon?"

"To the moon," shouts Johnson, "pray give us your calculation as to that, sir."

"Why," answers Goldsmith, deliberately, "one, if it were long enough."

Johnson gasps. "Sir, I have deserved it. I should not have provided so foolish an answer by so foolish a question."

But Goldsmith has not been listening to the Doctor's reply. The voice of a ballad-singer is coming up from the street. It is so sorrowful and broken that one can scarcely tell whether the minstrel is singing or weeping. Suddenly Goldsmith jumps up.

"I cannot stand it," he mutters, and hastens from the room.

"What is the matter with Goldy?" asks Johnson is consternation.

Garrick goes to the window.

"Our friend is merely practicing his views on economy," he remarks, dryly. "He is presenting the ballad-singer with a coin." Then, with a sigh, "Poor Goldy!".

OUR DEBT TO THOMAS JEFFERSON.

By George Barbaro.

GEORGE BARBARO

Jefferson is to most Americans the author of the Declaration of Independence, and beyond that a mere face decorating our postage stamps.

We all know of George Washington's great achievements,—how he bravely led a small, tattered, continental army to victory over troops unsurpassed in military skill and daring,—how, later, by his eloquence and wisdom he helped to band the thirteen states into a union impossible ever to be dissolved, and his fame will live as long as the nation shall be preserved.

The story of Abraham Lincoln, too, is familiar to every American,—how from a poor, uneducated lad he advanced until he was elected to the highest and most honorable position in the United States. During those dreadful years of the war of the rebellion when the destruction of the nation was threatened from all sides, he made sure that government of the people, by the people, and for the people should not perish from the earth.

Yet, in every-day American life it is not so important to answer the questions, how was our nation founded, or how was it preserved, as it is to inquire, what are present American ideals and who did most to shape and mold the character of the American nation. In the broader sense, America is the land of opportunity, of refuge from oppression, of equal rights, of self government and of true democracy. To a man well acquainted with the most important facts of American History, such a list can suggest the name of but one man chiefly responsible for such distinct characteristics. That man is Thomas Jefferson, and yet, what person here knows much about his life? Who is familiar with the date of his birth? Let this ignorance be our excuse, then, for pointing out some of our wise policies that as a nation we owe to Thomas Jefferson.

Jefferson had a splendid conception of the future of his country. As he could not foresee the tremendous development from the mineral resources, most of his plans were for agricultural development. When, contrary to his own principles of strict adherance to the Constitution, he purchased the immense territory of Louisiana, he did so because he cared more for the welfare of the nation than for his principles. He foresaw what immense crops might be grown there. What a great inducement would be given thousands of honest European immigrants to settle in this country. His prophecies have been realized. For years he had studied the great agricultural possibilities of that fertile territory intersected with so many navigable rivers. He was interested in every invention that tended to facilitate agriculture, trying on his farm many successful experiments, the benefits of which went to thousands of hardworking farmers.

Again, from the very beginning of the National Government, Jefferson contended for low tariffs, an economical use of public money, and the least possible government. Do we not suffer to-day from exactly the opposite faults, from excessive tarriffs, from extravagant public expenditures, and from over activity of both the legislative and executive authorities? Jefferson disliked to see huge sums of money taken from the people, lavishly used to build a large and expensive navy. If this policy had been continued to the present day, many serious questions and disputes which, nowadays, are being brought up in Congress would have been avoided. The present expense of the Government far exceeds its enormous income from tarriffs, excises, and other public revenues. The problem now is, how to cut down the Government expense so that it will not exceed its income. Jefferson, far sighted and wise, avoided such conditions, but unfortunately, his policy has not been followed.

We may safely add that Thomas Jefferson was the first American who looked to settle international disputes by arbitration, by peaceful and therefore far more advantageous means. He was confronted by many exceedingly difficult disputes during his administration, but they were all settled wisely by peaceful means, whereas another president might have plunged the nation into disastrous wars. "Peace is our passion," he proclaimed. Is it so to-day? Other presidents saw the wisdom of his policies and followed the same plans. Serious boundary disputes, which might have involved the United States in fierce conflict with other nations have been settled by arbitration; and in these enlightened days, nations do not settle petty quarrels by brute force, but, rather, by Jefferson's wise and humane policies, by arbitration.

No man of his period did more than he to advance Science and Education. Famous scientists found him to be as learned as themselves and superior in breadth of view. The rich planters of the South, who could well afford to send their children to Europe for an education, cared little for educating the children of the poorer people.

Jefferson used his utmost power to establish public schools in the South. It was owing to his mighty efforts that the University of Virginia was established. He even canvassed the State for slight donations, and offered a site for the college out of his own land. It became the most flourishing college of the South. It was to him that the common people were indebted for their advancement.

Besides these wise measures, Jefferson inspired the nation with that truly democratic spirit to be found nowhere else but in the United States. During the early years of the

Legislature of 1909 Passed Many Far Reaching Laws

STATE TAX IS A MILLION LESS

State Tax Less by That Amount Than It Was Last Year—Roosevelt Club Opposes Hibbard—Court Gives H. M. Whitney Verdict

The great and general court has finally been prorogued and the session of 1909 is over. During the life of the session the governor vetoed four measures and allowed four others to become laws without his signature. In the last hours of the session a measure was passed amending the act compelling telegraph companies to put the date and hour upon each telegram sent, by providing that no extra charge should be made for this work. By this action the course of telegraph companies increasing the rate of 25 to 35 cents for messages of ten words is nullified. In all 539 acts and 143 resolves were enacted by the legislature.

Among the important acts passed by the legislature is the law for a rigid inspection of slaughtered beef; Boston charter; permitting the sale of ice cream, confectionery, soda and fruit on the Sabbath under legal supervision; providing for a holding company for stock of the Boston and Maine railroad; providing for the taxation of deposits in the savings departments of trust companies; giving the Boston school committee absolute control over the organizations of pupils; permitting the killing of deer by farmers under certain restrictions when the deer are found destroying the crops; prohibiting the taking of assignments of wages as security for small loans; providing for completing the inventory of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company; prohibiting the sale or gift of cigarettes to minors under the age of 18 years; consolidating the state board of education and the commission on industrial education; providing for a study of the transportation problem in Boston with reference to additional subways and tunnels; providing for a continuous appropriation for improving harbors and rivers, this appropriation to be spent by the harbor and land commission.

Some Rejected Measures

A number of measures of greater or less importance have been rejected by the legislature. Some of these were only demanded by a single class of citizens and not by citizens as a whole. Among the rejected bills were those for a direct nomination system throughout the state; the placing of lights on all vehicles at night; granting suffrage to women; providing for representation by the state at the Alaska-Yukon exposition; establishing an eight-hour day for workmen, laborers and mechanics employed by state, city, county or town; permitting peaceful picketing in times of strikes; the abolition of capital punishment; providing for a tunnel under Boston harbor to Chelsea square; resolve referring a prohibition amendment to the people.

It is worthy of note that the state legislature by the aid of Governor Draper has made possible a state tax smaller by $1,000,000 than the tax of last year. Ever since his inauguration the governor has bent his energies toward economy in state affairs. Last year as acting governor he saved the state nearly $1,000,000 by his well-known attitude in regard to various schemes for spending the state's money, some of them meritorious undoubtedly, but none of them absolutely necessary. This year the legislature has co-operated with him to such an extent that the state tax is less by $1,000,000 than it was last year.

Legislature Up to Average

It may be said without exaggeration that the legislature just prorogued is fully up to the average in every way. It may undoubtedly be called a high-class legislature. As a matter of fact one legislature does not differ so very much from another when a general average of all its members is struck. Some legislatures have greater responsibilities and are subjected to greater influences and stronger pressure to pass or not to pass certain legislation, and legislatures are generally judged by the legislation which they enact or by that which they reject. Certainly both branches of the great and general court have been well officered. President Treadway of the senate has proved an ideal official and has fooled the prophets who declared he would not make good. Speaker Walker has made one of the best presiding officers who has ever sat in the lower branch. He has been careful, consistent and earnest in his endeavors to protect the interests of the commonwealth.

No Excuse.

Waiter (whose attention has been called to a gross error in addition)—Very sorry, sir; but, even if you hadn't found out the mistake, the firm would have benefited, not me. Diner—Then you have no excuse!—Punch.

Telephone Emergencies

THREE VARIETIES of emergency telephone service are, without charge, at the behest of the public. They were devised years ago by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company to render what it believed to be a proper public service to the community at large, as well as a valuable service to the Company's subscribers. They are:

1. Emergency Calls For The Fire Department.
2. Emergency Calls For The Police.
3. Emergency Calls For Physicians.

Such calls may be made without charge, from his own telephone by a subscriber, or from a Pay Station telephone by a non-subscriber, if he states he desires to make an emergency call.

TWO IMPORTANT WARNINGS

If there is an established fire alarm system in the place, a call for the Fire Department also should be made from the nearest fire alarm box. The Company can assume no responsibility for an emergency notification, but will use its best endeavors to connect you promptly.

If the emergency is of a particularly serious nature—a railroad wreck, a large fire, a serious accident, involving injury or death to many—do not leave the telephone without also calling for the Chief Operator, so that an executive official of our Traffic Department may take such further steps as the nature of the emergency shall suggest.

2—To remind prospective subscribers of the great value of such service as a protective and precautionary measure, and to suggest that the quickest way to have a telephone installed is to make a call (also without charge) to the Local Manager.

government, men, powerful and of aristocratic descent, thought that the people were too ignorant to be trusted with much power. Such famous men as John Adams, Alexander Hamilton, and even George Washington held these notions. Hamilton said, "I see no relief for our real disease, which is Democracy, the poison of which will be more virulent." On the other hand listen to Jefferson's famous words, "Whenever our affairs go obviously wrong the good sense of the people will interpose and set them right." Accordingly he made it his earnest duty to elevate the ideals and principles of the lower classes, till in the end, practically no distinction existed. Freedom and equality for all was his rule. The constant struggles against the people of his own class,—for he was himself of aristocratic descent, made it impossible to establish in America the European system of class and social distinction. On the other hand, he inspired the nation with that spirit of freedom, independence and equality which has come to be the best and foremost trait of the American character of to-day.

Why then, do we not set apart a day to commemorate Jefferson's birth, as we do Washington's and Lincoln's? The reproach is not due to the present generation, but to the generation of Jefferson's own day.

In order to turn his theories into realities, Jefferson became the most powerful politician of his day, and accomplished his great work in the midst of political strife which made him and his democratic principles detested by men like Adams or Hamilton. They reviled him as a political opponent and shadowed a character and reputation, the greatest of which can be realized only by careful study.

These are but few of the great contributions to old and modern civilization made by this man whose name has been allowed to sink into comparative obscurity. His services to establish religious freedom, his doing away with inheritance rights, which tended to perpetuate a landed aristocracy, his attempt to emancipate the slaves in the hope of quieting the troubles which later resulted in the great Civil War,—are services we could well speak of. Yet let it be sufficient to have pointed out his labors for the material welfare of the nation, for Peace, for Economy, for Education and Science. Crowning all, he gave to America the splendid ideal of true democracy, not by attacking the wealthy and the learned, but by elevating the poor and the uneducated

Washington founded the nation, Lincoln saved it from disunion, but Jefferson gave to it the characteristic American spirit which, with the nation, will endure forever.

Where Some Men Fail

Some men are a success at making money, but fail when they come to investing it.

Many who are careful, conservative and successful in their own business, often lose large sums in outside ventures.

They do not realize because a man makes a success of a business with which he is thoroughly familiar, it is no sign he can attain the same results in some enterprise about which he knows nothing.

The one wise plan to follow is to put your surplus in real estate, good substantial Winchester real estate.
